THE year which has just drawn to a close will be remembered in Naval history as one in which Naval Reform has been persistently advocated with unusual vigour. In Parliament and in the Press, the battle has been fought. In the Legislature, the Earl of Belmore, Lord Henry Lennox, M.P., Commander Price, M.P., and Mr. J. H. Puleston, M.P., bore the brunt of the affray. The late Conservative First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. W. H. Smith, more than once sided with the powers that be, and for a time rendered our efforts abortive. Nevertheless, the attempt made during the past twelve months to impress upon the Admiralty, upon the Government, and upon the public, the necessity of improving the state and condition of the Navy, both as regards its personnel and its matériel, has not been fruitless. The agitation set on foot in these columns for the internal reform of the Admiralty, so as to liberate the service from that thraldom in which it has so long been held by the permanent Civil Staff, has resulted in a scheme of compulsory age retirement being introduced, whereby "decrepit" clerks will be compulsorily retired at the age of sixty, provided they shall then have served for forty years. This, no doubt, is a step in the right direction, which we hope will be followed by the introduction of the Naval Executive and Accountant branches into their several departments at the Admiralty. The state and condition of the Navy, after having been exhaustively discussed in these columns, and proved to have been found wanting, was energetically taken up in the House of Commons by Lord Henry Lennox and Commander Price, and discussed with marked ability. The pressure thus brought to bear upon the Admiralty led Lord Northbrook somewhat tardily to promise that the Admiralty, fully recognising the importance of maintaining England's Naval supremacy unimpaired, would commenced "to move quickly." This accelerated motion of the Circumlocution departments which compose the Admiralty has, however, been, as yet, but scarcely apparent, even when observed through very powerful glasses. True, additional sums of money have been granted to the dockyards, to enable the Warspite and Imperieuse to be completed, and the latter fast cruiser has been floated out of her dock at Portsmouth. There is a rumour afloat that the Agamemnon, Ajax, Edinburgh, Collingwood, Colossus, Conqueror, and Dreadnought are to be completed "as soon as possible," and brought forward for commission, to form a powerful Channel Squadron; but we fear the day is yet far distant when these armour-clads will hoist the pendant. Early in the year, we published the report of the Committee on Naval Pensions, then some months old, and should we [illegible] taken by the Admiralty to mature and [illegible]me for granting pensions to the widows of seamen and marines, promulgated only last week, as the standard whereby to measure the rate of Admiralty progression, we fear the "moving quickly" promise of Lord Northbrook cannot be greatly depended upon. "L'homme propose, mais Dieu dispose." Lord Northbrook proposes to move quickly; but so long as Lord Northbrook and the Naval element at the Admiralty remain embedded in the slough of civilian procrastination, which surrounds them, like clam-shells embedded in a coral reef, with only a blow-hole left wherefrom to spout, we fear that for the Admiralty as a whole to move quickly is an impossibility. As it is, the scheme formulated is so niggardly, that it will assuredly have to be revised, when, no doubt, many months will be expended in endeavouring to find some means of robbing Peter to pay Paul; for, whenever the Admiralty give with one hand, they invariably take back with the other, and the seaman is left no better, if not worse off, than before. And this is called endeavouring to make the Navy popular! In this view of the case we are not singular. Our contemporary, the Morning Post, in a most able article on the subject, remarks that:—

> "The regulations for Greenwich Hospital Pensions and admission into Naval Schools have, doubtless, been carefully considered, and are probably as liberal as the traditions of the Admiralty and the temper of the Treasury under the present Administration will permit. Into the sufficiency of widows' pensions and children's allowances, we shall not inquire. They certainly are not excessive; 3s. 6d. to 6s. 6d. for the widow, 1s. 9d. to 2s. for each child under fourteen or sixteen, according to sex, are not extravagant pittances for those whose husbands and fathers, being non-commissioned officers and men in the Naval or Auxiliary Forces, have been killed, or have died from suffering or disease due to their service within twelve months after the first attack. What seems decidedly mean and petty is the limitation of the total expenditure. In a year of war, thousands of seamen and marines may die, of whom hundreds may leave parents or other relatives dependent upon them. But the total relief granted to such parents or relatives may not exceed the sum of £500. The sons of such men may be educated and maintained in orphanages; but though thousands of infant sons may be orphaned in twelve months, and hundreds in a single battle, the expenditure is not to exceed £4,000 in any one year. It must be remembered, moreover, that even in time of peace our Navy annually expends a great number of valuable lives in warlike expeditions and operations against savage tribes, and in pestilential regions,—a fact which makes such limits doubly objectionable. The rule savours of that kind of economy which is neither cheap nor dignified. While constantly creating new offices, while lavishing money upon purposes of an obviously popular character, Radical and even Liberal statesmen have for two or three generations shown a meanness, a preference of paltry public savings to personal justice, a want of respect for military and naval, even more than for civil, services; a want of faith in public generosity and regard for the national dignity which moves the bitter contempt and disgust of the sufferers, and which sounds to the public at large much more like ingratitude and indifference than real economy. Without arguing the question whether we can afford to pay our soldiers and sailors like our policemen—and thereby secure men and not immature boys for the ranks, capable and decently educated men of the type of skilled labourers and artisans as non-commissioned officers—we may at least affirm, without fear of challenge, that England can afford to deal liberally with those who are killed, wounded, or invalided in the maintenance of her Empire and in defence of her flag. Parsimony in such cases incurs the reproach of ingratitude and baseness, and saves nothing that can be practically felt."

The case of the Lieutenants of the Navy was also taken up in these columns, and was further most eloquently advocated in the House of Lords by the Earl of Belmore. To these exertions on behalf of a long-suffering and most worthy and efficient grade of officers, is due the fact that the Admiralty have now in hand a scheme for improving the lot of these officers. It is under consideration, we understand, to create a new grade, that of Lieutenant-Commanders, for officers ranking with Majors in the Army, that is to say, for Lieutenants of more than eight years' seniority in their rank, and to grant to these an extra 2s. a day pay. So far, so good. But this is not enough. The pay of Lieutenant-Commanders should increase from 12s. to 16s. a day, according to seniority, and we shall not rest satisfied until it does. Our endeavours on behalf of the Assistant-Paymasters of the Navy have, so far, been only successful in securing from the Admiralty a return to the old system of allowing officers of this rank to act as Secretaries to Flag officers, and we understand that an Order in Council altering the regulations to this effect will shortly appear. No doubt, had it not been for the action taken by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh in selecting Mr. Rickard to act as his Secretary while in command of the Channel Squadron, even this concession would not as yet have been granted. The position of Engineer officers in the Navy is being slowly ameliorated. In the future, everything depends on the manner in which these officers comport themselves. They have had much leeway to make good, and have already weathered many a shoal in their endeavour to establish for themselves a social standing in the Navy equal to their increased scientific attainments, and altered social position as a body since the days when locomotive drivers were entered as Engineers for the Navy. During the year, the question of discontinuing to send Naval Cadets and Midshipmen to sea as active officers has been freely discussed. The general opinion in the Navy is that these young gentlemen should be educated in seagoing training ships, and at the Royal Naval College, until they are fit to pass into the service as commissioned officers. This would enable the gun-room mess to be abolished, and a general mess to be formed on board each seagoing man-of-war. Officers would then hold in regard to each other the same social position on board ship, when off duty, as military officers do on shore, and this would be a means of checking those numerous abuses of authority which so often make a ship uncomfortable under the existing régime. Early in the year, Lord Alcester exchanged places with Lord John Hay at the Admiralty. When we announced the impending change in the latter part of 1882, our statement was officially contradicted, just as numerous other announcements made in these columns have been, and, as a result, an official contradiction is now held to confirm the truth of the report attempted to be discredited. Anyhow, Lord Alcester is now at the Admiralty, and we would remind his lordship that he has only two short years more of active service wherein to be of use to the Navy and to the country. In 1886 Lord Alcester will have to retire under the age-clause. The time at his disposal, therefore, wherein to introduce the many reforms so urgently needed for the future welfare of the service, is short. At present, Lord Alcester has the confidence of the British public. He need only speak, and speak up to his convictions, and every word he utters will be believed. He knows—no man knows better—what is the real state and condition of the Navy at this moment. He knows that the additions to its strength during the past year have been next to nothing, a few small cruisers, in fact, good in themselves, but not sufficiently numerous. He knows exactly where the shoe pinches the personnel over whose destiny he presides. He knows that money is wanted to make the Navy what it should be,—strong enough to leave no question as to England's Naval supremacy, and the personnel so well paid and well administered as to ensure the happiness and comfort of all ranks and ratings serving afloat. Let Lord Alcester, therefore, speak, and speak to the point, and whatever he says the Navy requires, he may rest assured that the taxpayers of England, who are so justly proud of him and of his career, will readily and ungrudgingly grant. That seamen are wanted has been proved by the order issued on December 21, 1883, by the Admiralty, directing that men infected by a certain contagious disease should no longer be exempt from liability to draft abroad. That ships are wanted is seen from the fact that the Admiralty have none to relieve those whose term of foreign service has expired, and which should now be brought home to be repaired and refitted. All this means money. Let Lord Alcester only say that money is wanted, and we feel assured that not one word will be said throughout the country should the Admiralty present largely-increased estimates on Parliament reassembling. We advocate no startling, demonstrative policy being suddenly entered upon. All we desire is to be convinced that the Admiralty are making up for lost time, and no longer allowing France to outstrip us in the building of sea-going armour-clads. Owing to the supineness of the Admiralty, France has at the present moment ten armour-clads more than England. She possesses in all 77 armour-clads, while we only have 67. The tonnage of the French ships amounts to 415,930 tons, and that of the English to 450,509 tons. France has 56 unarmoured ships, and England 106. But the 10 additional armour-clads of France are more than a match for the extra 50 English unarmoured vessels, as one ironclad is at all times superior in fighting power to five wooden or unarmoured ships. In ships exceeding 7,500 tons, France owns 23, and England 31. Of ships exceeding 5,000 tons, France has 22, and England only 15. Of ships exceeding 3,000 tons, France has 15, and England 12; and of armoured swift cruisers, of which Sir Thomas Brassey speaks so highly in his work on the Navy, France possesses 17, while England can only boast of 9. Surely these facts are sufficient to make every Englishman tremble for the future naval supremacy of his country. But we can go farther. In 1879, we had in commission at home and abroad, 248 ships, manned by 33,913 officers and men; while this year we have only 235 ships, manned by 33,066 men. This clearly shows that we have retrograded, and that our Navy has been falling-off in point of numbers. Truly, it is time for the Admiralty to commence "to move quickly," or their lordships may awake some fine morning to find war declared, and neither personnel nor matériel prepared for the struggle. Then it would be found, when too late, that the oft-repeated statement, of both Lord Northbrook and Sir T. Brassey, that "The Mercantile Marine is the backbone of the Navy," is a delusion and a snare, only put forward in times of peace to excuse that cheeseparing policy which is fast ruining the Navy. As well might it be said that England requires no Army, having now the Volunteers to depend upon. We are glad, however, to hear that the Admiralty expects to be in possession of 240 breech-loading guns by the end of March. We only hope the statement is true, but we very much doubt its being fulfilled. We now pass to the principal naval events of the past twelve months. The year 1883 opened with the death of Léon Gambetta. The interest in the Egyptian War had well nigh died out, before the electric wires flashed the news round the world that there was "one peace-breaker the less in Europe." Rumours of war at once subsided, and Naval life proceeded on its monotonous course, as is generally the case in days of peace and inactivity. Rumours of the reorganisation of the Constructors' Department were early abroad in January, and these have since been verified by the formation of the Royal Corps of Constructors, and other changes at our Dockyards. The Admiralty also issued their Circular regarding the improved pay and position conceded to the Engineers of the Navy. The new Order in Council, and subsequent Admiralty Circular, however, by no means satisfied the aspirations and demands of Sir E. J. Reed, and the other leaders of the agitation set on foot on behalf of the officers of this branch of the Naval service, and complaints are, therefore, still rife among them. In February, Mr. Barnaby delivered his now celebrated lecture on "Battle-ships" at the Royal United Service Institution. Mr. Barnaby took advantage of this occasion to recant his belief in large ironclads, and to adopt the faith of those who for so long have advocated the construction of small, handy vessels, able to carry heavy guns, ram, and launch torpedoes. Thus, February 9, 1883, becomes a red-letter day in the annals of British Naval Construction. Unfortunately, there are no signs of the Admiralty commencing to "move quickly," so far as building vessels of this description is concerned. Lord Alcester landed in England on March 11, having been relieved in the command of the Mediterranean Station by Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, up to then Second Sea Lord of the Admiralty. Lord Alcester proceeded direct from Portsmouth to Windsor, on a visit to her Majesty the Queen. On his Lordship arriving in London, he was at once driven to the Admiralty, where he was sworn in as Second Naval Lord, and immediately took his seat at the Board. The Earl of Belmore that day, March 12, brought to the notice of the House of Lords the state of the pay of Naval Lieutenants, but Lord Northbrook declined to hold out any hope that either their pay or position would be improved. Lord Belmore, nevertheless, persevered, and again brought the case of these most deserving, but hardly used officers before the House on April 16, when his Lordship moved a resolution to assimilate the pay of Naval Lieutenants to that of officers holding relative rank in the Army. The motion, however, was not pressed, as it was thought more prudent to give the Admiralty time. The wisdom of this course is now apparent, as their Lordships have under their consideration at this moment a scheme for improving the position of the officers in question. Nevertheless, the fact remains that no reform is ever entered upon by the Admiralty, not even to keep pace with the times, until agitation has brought such pressure to bear on our Naval Administrators as most reluctantly wrings from them the desired concession. Their Lordships appear to forget that nothing can stand still in this progressive world, and that just in the same proportion as changes and improvements are introduced into the matériel, so must reforms be introduced among the personnel of the Navy. The two must keep pace with each other, and both must be assimilated to the altered social conditions of living on shore. But of this more anon. It was in March that Rear-Admiral Sir Francis Sullivan hauled down his flag as second-in-command of the Channel Squadron, to succeed Admiral Sir William Mends as Director of Transports. Rear-Admiral J. C. Wilson succeeded to the vacancy thus created in the Channel Squadron, then at Gibraltar, whither he proceeded to hoist his flag. The Lepanto, fourth colossal armour-clad of the Italian Navy, was launched successfully at the D'Orlando Yard, Leghorn, on March 17, as if to refute the statements made in the House of Commons that day by the Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty, when introducing the Navy Estimates, regarding the superiority of the British Navy at that moment, and its unprecedentedly good condition. Then followed a melancholy episode, in the sudden death of the Admiral-Superintendent of Portsmouth Dockyard, Rear-Admiral J. D. M'Crea, an officer who was most justly popular throughout the Navy, and whose funeral, on March 22, was one of the most largely attended ever known in Portsmouth. Rear-Admiral Herbert succeeded to the vacancy thus created, and was relieved of the duties of Director of Naval Ordnance at the Admiralty by Captain John O. Hopkins, who was succeeded at Sheerness by Captain William Codrington, C.B., who was succeeded in the Excellent by Captain John Fisher, C.B., commonly called "Jack," thus ending the shuffling of the Admiralty cards in a manner most acceptable to the service. Rear-Admiral Lethbridge at the same time succeeded Vice-Admiral Hamilton in the command at Cork. Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, having been appointed Honorary Colonel of the Royal Marine Corps, was entertained by the officers of the various divisions at a sumptuous banquet in April. Notwithstanding the brilliant conduct of the Marines in Egypt, nothing further has been done for the corps, and no outlet has been discovered whereby Marine officers can be allowed to participate in military appointments. Something, however, will have to be done soon for as gallant a body of soldiers as ever served their Queen. In June, the death of Captain Rivière, of the French Navy, who was killed in a sortie made from Hanoi, in Tonquin, against the Black Flags, gave rise to what is now known as the French energetic colonising policy. This was immediately followed by the French Admiral Pierre bombarding the Hovas stations on the north-east coast of Madagascar, and reinforcements being sent to M. de Brazza on the West Coast of Africa. The encroachments of the French in Newfoundland was a fruitful source of complaint at this time, which complaints have not abated since the close of the fishing season. The French armour-clad Admiral Baudin was launched on June 5, and the following day the Calypso was launched at Chatham. The Lively ran on the Hen and Chickens Rocks the same day, while in charge of a pilot specially selected by the Admiralty, and appointed against the wishes of Commander Parr and the navigating officer of the despatch-boat. These two, however, were made the scapegoats to save the Admiralty, and Lord Northbrook subsequently gave the special pilot, who lost the ship, such a splendid character in the House of Lords as must fully have compensated him for any strictures passed upon him by the Press, and no doubt secured for him immediate employment. Commander Parr, who was below with the Skye Crofter Commissioners at the time the pilot ran the Lively on the rocks, has not as yet been employed again. It was his duty to entertain the Commissioners; and we deem the treatment he has received at the hands of the Admiralty most undeserved and unjustifiable. Midshipman H.R.H. Prince George of Wales embarked on board the Canada, Captain Durrant, at Spithead, on June 13, when the ship at once proceeded to the North-American station. Lord Northbrook, having introduced a "Naval Discipline Act Amendment Bill," in the House of Lords, to abolish Corporal Punishment, prolong service for pension to twenty-two years, and empower the sentence of death to be awarded in cases of gross insubordination, also to add to the power of courts-martial and of Lieutenants sitting thereon, it was read a third time on June 14, and sent down to the House of Commons. Here, Sir John Hay vehemently opposed the Bill, and it was subsequently withdrawn by the Admiralty, who had not even the courage to go to a division on a first reading. During the Session, the case of the seaman Endersby, who was sentenced to five years' penal servitude for striking a superior officer, was repeatedly brought before the House. It was urged by the Member for Portsmouth that the seaman was drunk at the time of his committing the crime. This, we have repeatedly pointed out, only aggravates the offence, in the eyes of the law of England. We shall, however, have more to say on this case, and the agitation since got up at Portsmouth to curtail the powers of Naval courts-martial, so for the present content ourselves with remarking that, while in our belief legislation should tend to prevent men from committing themselves, instead of, as at present, too often driving them to do so, yet we cannot support the efforts of the Portsmouth agitators who, by making light of the crime of striking a superior in the profession of arms, are directly inciting all disaffected men in the Navy to commit that crime, as an easy means of gaining their discharge from the service, many bad characters being only too willing to undergo a year or eighteen months' imprisonment, with or without hard labour, "to get quit of the service." That such a feeling exists is to be deplored, but curtailing the powers vested in courts-martial will not mend matters. On the contrary, it will make the lower decks of all ships in the Navy "hells afloat," from the moment the men know that the power of the officer to support the non-commissioned officer has been curtailed. That "court-martial vagaries" should be put an end to we willingly admit is necessary for the welfare of the service; but this should not be done on the ground that the punishment for striking a superior officer, as at present meted out, is out of all proportion to the offence, as there is no greater offence than that in the profession of arms. It is subversive of all discipline, and must be put down with a hand of iron. In fact, the punishment for that crime should be summary, and should be flogging in peace and death in war, for men; for an officer, it should be instant dismissal from the service, with or without imprisonment, in time of peace, and death in time of war. This is only in accordance with the laws of the profession of arms. We regret to see an ex-Military officer pandering to an agitation which is calculated to do incalculable harm to the Navy. And we are all the more sorry for this, in that the said officer appears to be acting solely with the view of gaining a few votes, in his attempt to secure a seat in the House of Commons. During the past twelve months, death has removed the names of the following Flag-Officers from the Navy List, viz.:—Sir Richard Collinson, Sir James Caffin, E. E. Vernon-Harcourt, William Horton, C.B., John Hallowes, Mottley, G. Sumner-Hand, C.B., J. D. McCrea, and Henry W. Hire, C.B. Little else of interest occurred in 1883. Captain Johnstone of the Dryad, earned his promotion by his manly English conduct in Madagascar, and Captain Brooke, of the Opal, brought to a successful issue a well-planned Expedition up the Niger, but not without loss, amongst the wounded being Midshipman Hay, of the Opal. In December, Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh hoisted his flag on board the Minotaur, as senior officer in command of the Channel Squadron, Sir William Dowell relieving Vice-Admiral G. O. Willes in command of the China Squadron,—a change hailed with delight by all concerned. We now wish our readers a happy and prosperous New Year, and hope that, during the ensuing year, we shall be able to find much worthy of praise in the administration of the Navy.

THE working of the new Warrant for the better subjugation of the Army to the Secretary of State for War cannot be made matter of discussion just now, with profit. The Warrant has not yet "taken charge." When the screw of a steamer has commenced its revolutions, there is a good deal of splutter and a great foam-making astern, but the vessel does not gather way till the screw has been for a while turning steadily and almost noiselessly. One thing the Army may be quite sure of when the system is at work,—no dunce will be ousted by a better man, so long as the dunce is very well connected, and is backed with any leading statesmen by relations of the families of the party in power, or has "friends at Court." That latter is an elastic expression. It means friends who can focus the rays of their intelligent interest in Major Muddle or Lieutenant-Colonel Clubhem on the sensitive mediums at Horse Guards, War Office, Downing Street, or at still more exalted places, through which the appreciation of Muddle and Clubhem's merits and claims are to be transmitted to the Gazette. We are rather glad of this than otherwise. In fact, we are inclined to hope that some monstrous cases of favouritism and jobbery may speedily be disclosed, when the system has got into full swing. Now, we by no means include in the category of cases of the sort such selections—galling as they were to many sailors and soldiers of repute—as those of the Duke of Edinburgh and the Duke of Connaught; because, under a Constitutional Monarchy, and with a Lady upon the Throne of such strong will and such unbounded popularity as the Queen, the promotion in the Navy and Army of Royal Dukes, her sons, over the heads of officers senior to them in years and service, is a natural and all but unavoidable result of our Monarchical system, and it is in every way a much better result of influence than that arising out of a system of selection founded on party or political considerations and causes. It may be—nay, it is—very hard on the Admiral or General who thought he could get the squadron or the division that he should be passed over by the Duke of Edinburgh or the Duke of Connaught; but there are sweets with the bitters, and when the Royalties are provided for, Trunnion and Platoon think they have nothing to fear, unless they are again knocked out of time by the Monarchical influences which stepped in their way. But if in time to come the word and the nod of the Government Whip in Lords or Commons, the becks and wreathed smiles of the Duchess of Marrowfat, or the fascinations of the Marchioness of Pokerly, be allowed to save or to destroy officers' fortunes, under the guise of securing the best men for the best places, the situation of the services will become intolerable, and a mischief created which not indirectly will menace the safety of a State that depends for existence on the efficiency of the Fleet and of the Army. Efficiency is bound up with the contentment of the officers, and their contentment rests on their confidence in pure and just administration. These are general observations. They are not intended to reach any particular quarter, or to refer to any special instance, but are not meaningless. There is some danger, in the good time coming, without any consciousness of injustice on the part of the authorities, that officers of moderate capacity will be set aside for some showy partisan, whose friends consider the country will be ruined if he be not at once put in a good place. The Marquis of Hartington, the Duke of Cambridge, Lord Wolseley, and Sir E. Whitmore are men of the highest honour and integrity, and therefore, as public administrators, must command the confidence of the Army. If Lord Hartington were to be in office at Pall Mall always, there would be no fear of any more serious mistake in administration than that which might arise from a righteous error in judgment. But with the recollection of what occurred when the Egyptian Staff was formed, we feel there is no security in our system against the overbearing will of a Secretary of State who can force his nominees upon reluctant Generals, or secure a most amiable acceptance of the claims to be put on the Head-quarters Staff of the members of his family,—unless the officer who holds the office of Commander-in-Chief has a very resolute will, and temper up to resignation-point, if needs be. Field-Marshals and Military Secretaries and Heads of Departments seem to go down like ninepins, when they are bowled at by a strong-handed, hard-headed Secretary of State for War; and we are not certain that a Mrs. Clarke could cause more evil than a raging Minister, with strong party passions, paternal or avuncular pride, or the necessities of securing Members for a majority in crises in Parliament, driving him in the exercise of his vast and almost irresponsible power, could perpetrate in his towering pride of place at Pall Mall.

THE bone of contention between France and China appears now to be reduced to the possession of Bacninh, which is claimed by the former Power as one of the strong places of the quadrilateral formed by it, Haidzuong, Sontay, and Hanoi, and by the latter Power as being one of the gates of the Celestial Empire, which is not to be thrown open with impunity. The French say that without Bacninh the other places would be useless, that Haidzuong and Haiphong would be constantly threatened, and that the Delta of the Red River would remain open to attacks coming from Langson and Laobang. Although Bacninh is at some distance from the Red River, it is considered of such strategical importance as to be worth fighting about, and the French appear determined to have it, in spite of all the remonstrances addressed to them on the danger of coming into direct conflict with the Middle Empire. M. Jules Ferry has always expressed the opinion that the Celestials do not mean war, and we find the following remarks in a Paris contemporary:—"A circumstance which proves that China is not over-serious in threatening to declare war, even of a local character, and confined to the delta of the Red River, is to be found in her inaction. The Chinese troops made no strategical movements between December 11 and 17, and made no effort to take advantage of their situation, although, by making a simple demonstration against Hanoi, they might have prevented Admiral Courbet from marching upon Sontay, against which place the Admiral was able to move all his troops, leaving very feeble garrisons behind him. If the commander of the Chinese forces had 20,000 men at his disposal, as is reported, he might have made a forward movement." The fact that no such movement was made leads the French to conclude that the Chinese commander has received strict orders to avoid all collision with the French troops, and to leave the fighting to be done by the Black Flags and the Annamites, who seem to be heaping coals of fire on their heads, and to be having an extremely rough time of it. For the moment Bacninh will not be attacked, because the French are not ready to proceed to the ultima ratio; troops have to be concentrated and other indispensable measures taken. Admiral Courbet is said to experience great difficulty in procuring any information with regard to the strength of the defences of Bacninh and the garrison which it contains. The whole country appears to be a prey to anarchy of the most lawless description, the pirates having it all their own way wherever the French are not in force. These gentry roam through the country in bands of such force that the mere feeble French garrisons at some of the military posts are obliged to seek shelter in their blockhouses while the pirates carry on their depredations. The French garrisons, in fact, are quite inadequate to keep order and to protect life and property in the coveted country, and under these circumstances it does not surprise us to learn that the attack upon Bacninh has been adjourned, for any check before that place would evidently compromise the entire expeditionary force.

Sir Thomas Brassey, M.P., has returned to the Admiralty from his cruise in the West Indies.

Vice-Admiral Sir W. Dowell hoisted his flag on board H.M.S. Cambridge on the 3rd inst., on appointment as Commander-in-Chief on the China station, and will leave England by one of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamers starting early this month for the East.

There is no doubt that a great "transformation has taken place within the last two decades in the world of naval architecture and gunnery," as stated by our old friend, Mr. W. E. Atkins, in an article he has contributed to the Hampshire Telegraph under the title of "Types of the Modern British Navy." No one should know better than Mr. Atkins, the marine painter, how great that change has been. But for Mr. Atkins to exchange the crayon and camel's hair-brush for the pen, and paint for ink, in an attempt to prove that the modern British Navy is equal to all the requirements of the Empire, is, we fear, an undertaking somewhat above his calibre, if we may judge from the following argument, brought forward in support of his theory, for theory, after all, it is, and what is more, the theory does not square with the facts of the case any more than does Mr. Atkins's assertion with what obtained in the Navy at the time he writes of, when he says:—"Now we have small, fragile, iron steamers, carrying one or two heavy guns at the stem or stern, protected merely by thin iron shields, in contradistinction to the gunboat of old. In those days the hands were 'piped,' the pinnace lowered from the davits, with a 12-pounder in the bow, the chase and cutting-out of the enemy depending on the twelve or fourteen stout hearts who rowed the boat." When did Mr. Atkins see "a pinnace lowered from the davits?" It is really "time to tremble about our first line of defence" when gentlemen professing so much knowledge of the Navy assure us there is no need to do so.

Admiral Sir Astley C. Key, if not previously promoted—and at present that contingency seems remote, as both Admirals Ryder and Chads stand before him on the list—will, with Lord Alcester, have to retire in 1886.

The Admiralty have, as yet, provided no reliefs, nor have they the men at their disposal, to even recommission on their stations the following ships, whose crews completed their three years' foreign service last year, namely:—the Condor, Flamingo, Foam, Kingfisher, and Tourmaline. In addition to these, the crews of the following ships will complete their three years' foreign service during the ensuing 12 months, namely: — The Algerine, Arab, Bittern, Briton, Cockatrice, Decoy, Diamond, Espiegle, Falcon, Fly, Foxhound, Griffon, Helicon, Inflexible, Magpie, Mallard, Mutine, Nelson, Ranger, Rifleman, Swift, Temeraire, Vigilant, and Wrangler. Eleven of these ships should be relieved by March.

Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, accompanied by Rear-Admiral W. Graham, Admiral Superintendent of Malta Dockyard, inspected, on December 19, the Royal Naval Hospital at that yard, and, we hear, was much pleased both with the general cleanliness of the wards and the care and attention devoted to ensuring the comfort of the patients.

A good story is told regarding the treaty entered into by Vice-Admiral G. O. Willes with the Government of the Korea. When the treaty had to be signed, it was discovered that no ink, except Korean ink which is laid on with a brush, was at hand; so the signature of the treaty had to be delayed until the Admiral's Secretary could return to the flagship many miles distant, and procure some of "the right sort of fluid." The treaty thus signed is in most of its clauses similar to the one previously entered into with the American Government, but the latter have the best of the bargain, and mean to have it at all times, if we may judge from the manner in which the Americans are flattering the Koreans. The President of the United States has placed the frigate Trenton at the disposal of the Korean authorities, and she is now acting as a yacht for the Korean Ambassadors during their visit to the capitals of Europe.

Captain Knowles, commanding the Valiant, has addressed a memo. to the inspecting officer of the Pullendiva division of the Coastguard, under his command, commending the conduct of the officers and men of the Enniscrane Coastguard station on the occasion of the wreck of the steamship Rathlee. The vessel was wrecked close to the town, and though laden with a general cargo, consisting of eggs, butter, pork, fowls, &c., not a single article was stolen, owing to the vigilance of the Coastguard.

A Naval pension for Lieutenants of £50 per annum is placed at the disposal of the Admiralty by the death of Commander Edward Griffiths (Reserved List).

The order recently issued by the Admiralty, directing that men suffering from a certain disease should no longer be exempt from foreign service, naturally leads to the assumption that, on joining the ships to which they are drafted abroad, these men are to be considered fit for duty. Should that be the intention of the Admiralty, it is evident that the constitutions of a very large per-centage of these men will be injured for life, as the disease will, in many cases, become chronic. Then, indeed, the sins of the fathers will be visited upon the children with a vengeance. Can no remedy be found for such a state of things?

The following Flag-Officers and Captains will be retired during the ensuing year, under the "Age Retirement" Clause of the Order in Council of February 22, 1870:—Admirals: Henry Chads and Sir R. Macdonald. Vice-Admirals: Sir F. L. McClintock, H. S. Hillyar, and E. B. Rice. Captains: Frank Tourle Thompson, Richard Carter, and James Wylie East.

The following commands fall vacant during the ensuing year:—Admiral Sir W. Houston Stewart, Commander-in-Chief at Devonport, relinquishes his command on December 1; Rear-Admiral Watson, Admiral Superintendent of Chatham Dockyard, relinquishes that appointment on December 1; Rear-Admiral Algernon McL. Lyons, relinquishes the command of the Pacific station on December 10; Captain Cummings, Commodore at Hong Kong, completes his time in May; Commodore Erskine, A.D.C., completes his time in command of the Australian station; and the Nelson, flying the Commodore's broad pendant, her three years' commission, in June. Captain Henry F. Nicholson, C.B., completes his three years' command of the Temeraire on January 1, and will, it is said, relieve Captain Barnardiston, whose time is up in March, as Senior Naval Officer at Bermuda; Captain Sulivan completes his time in command of the Repulse in April. Captain Percy Luxmore, C.B., completes his time in command of the London, at Zanzibar, in December next, when it is expected the hulk will be done away with, and a sea-going ship substituted in her place. Captain A. K. Wilson completes his time in command of the Hecla in March; Commander Hawkins, of the Humber, in September; Commander McKechnie, of the Lion, in October; and Staff-Commander Adlam, of the Liffey, in November.

We are glad to learn "Mr. Lagden has obtained same valuable information" from his recent journey to Coomassie, for he certainly obtained nothing else, except the fever and ague. Of course he was sent there for some object. "Quacko Duo" was not told so,—indeed, he was told the contrary, and, perhaps, truly, though diplomacy is now and then obliged to take strange disguises. Mr. Lagden was Secretary to Sir O. Lanyon, at Pretoria, and did good service; but he, like many others, formed an opinion that the Boers would not fight. He was, the year before last, special correspondent for the Daily Telegraph with the British Expedition in Egypt, so, probably, we shall have some record of his present venture in type. There does not seem to have been any element of danger in it, from man or beast, for the niggers were amiable, and there was no big game, but there was fever. Mr. Lagden, though muscular, is subject to neuralgia, which makes his enterprise the more commendable. He is still young and full of "go," and the makings of an eminent traveller of the De Chaillu-Baker type, if he does not succumb to his extreme venturesomeness.

Captain F. J. Day, R.E., has been appointed Secretary of the Royal Engineer Institute at Chatham, in succession to Major R. H. Vetch.

If recruits for the Army Militia do not come in as rapidly as those in authority would desire, it certainly is not from want of energy on the part of those who superintend the arrangements for the "catching" of them. The latest idea is to employ the police in this service. Should this fail, perhaps recourse may be had to the masters of workhouses, and governors of gaols. Perhaps, too, the licensed victuallers might be able to give a helping-hand.

The Aldershot Committee on an "Active-Service Dress for the British Army" sent two men of the 39th Dorsetshire Regiment to the Horse Guards on Wednesday last, dressed in kakhi garments, as designed by them, for inspection by H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief. Should this sample suit be approved by his Royal Highness, a large number will be at once made, sufficient to clothe one or more battalions, when further experiments will be carried out on an extensive scale. Colonel R. Harrison, C.B., C.M.G., A.Q.M.G., and Colonel Dixon, 39th Regiment, from Aldershot, were present at the inspection.

The craze for unmixed short service evidently has not extended to America, for we learn from the Army and Navy Register, of Washington, that a petition has been generally signed by the rank and file of the United States Army that they may be discharged with pension after completing 30 or, under certain circumstances, after 25 years' service.

A committee consisting of General Lord Wolseley, Adjutant-General; Mr. A. L. Halliburton, Director of Supplies and Transports; Brigadier-General W. E. M. Reilly, Director of Artillery and Stores; Sir E. Morris, K.C.B., Commissary-General; and Lieutenant-General Sir A. Alison, Commanding at Aldershot, under the presidency of Lord Morley, assembled at the War Office this week, to consider the regulations for lines of communication in the field, and amendments involved in the organisation of the staff and depôts of the Army, in order to insure uniformity in peace and war, and give officers instruction in duties in the field.

We are inclined to place far more value on the opinions and researches of Mr. Villiers Stuart, of Dromana, as an Egyptologist than on his views as a politician, or as an authority on what may be termed the Egyptian question, for though he knows a good deal about the banks of the Nile and the temples at each side of the famous stream, he has no acquaintance with the living people outside of the Dragoman reis and dahabeah world, and is not able to converse with the natives in their own tongue. A Feringhee, in a well-appointed Nile boat under the British flag on the Nile of the Delta at the time of Arabi's overthrow by British troops, would be regarded by the timid and terror-stricken inhabitants, and especially by the village Sheiks, who had almost to a man stood in with the defeated rebel, as one to be propitiated by professions of attachment to England, and by vigorous vituperation of the exiled Minister; and Mr. Stuart was destined to hear many honeyed words from the lips of his dragoman, as the literal renderings of the guttural Arabic of the Fellaheen who flocked to pay him court; but we do not think he learned much of their real sentiments. Nevertheless, he has written a very interesting book, which comes before the public with the allurements of fine binding, type, and paper; and when he has at times left the path of dry investigation, and wandered into the more congenial fields of antiquarian research, where he is completely at home, he is delightful and instructive.

More changes are contemplated in the unfortunate Royal Artillery. The four-gun service batteries of Field Artillery not having realised the anticipations of the authorities, it is proposed, it is said, once more to give them six guns. When will the Demon of Muddle complete his work?

Considering that a General officer commanding a division or district can give an officer as much as six months' leave in India, or three months' accumulative to England, it has always appeared incongruous that a soldier's furlough over muster should require the sanction of the Chief of the Army. Such, however, has been the case until lately. Now General officers commanding divisions and districts can grant it between April 15 and October 15. Furlough to England, from a colonial station, can only be obtained through the Commander-in-Chief, and only then on the condition that the State is put to no expense.

The total number of recruits enlisted at Woolwich during the past year was 552. The total in 1882 was 606. Thus there has been a falling-off of 54. How is this to be accounted for? The Army is, we are told, more popular, and certainly much has been done to render it so; and yet men are not forthcoming to fill vacancies, even in so distinguished an arm of the service as the Royal Artillery.

It has been recently announced in the Canada Gazette, published at Ottawa, that with a view of maintaining the active Militia in a state of efficiency, Lieutenant-Colonels who have attained the age of 63 years, Majors the age of 58 years, Captains the age of 50 years, and Lieutenants 45 years, may be placed upon the Retired List. This regulation will apply also to Regimental Staff officers, according to their relative rank. It is also announced that officers commanding batteries of Canadian Artillery are to be granted the substantive rank of major (but without increase to their pay of captain) from the date of their promotion to the command.

Assistant-Commissary-General S. H. E. Reeves, C.B., has succeeded Assistant-Commissary-General R. H. Powell at Head-quarters.

The present organisation of the Royal Artillery is so complicated and so cumbersome, that almost any change in it must be an improvement. The enormous regiment is divided into unwieldy brigades, which cannot be kept together in peace or got together for war; and there is no larger unit, for any useful purpose whatever, than the battery. Some of the many disadvantages of this system, as regards the officers, were plainly shown in a letter signed "Golundauze," which appeared in our last week's issue. The suggestions of our correspondent, who has served in the various branches of the Artillery, are so very reasonable and so clearly stated, that it is highly improbable that they will be favourably received or acted on by the present military administration.

Major-General J. Davis, lately commanding the troops at Shorncliffe Camp, has been appointed to the command of a brigade in Egypt.

A little more than fourteen years ago the Hon. R. D. Ross, the present Speaker of the South Australian Lower House of Parliament, drew public attention to the feasibility of opening the channel of a lucrative and laudable trade between India and South Australia by supplying the Remount Service of the Indian Army with South Australian horses. Supported by other gentlemen having vast interests in the colony, he adduced forcible reasons why the South Australian Government should facilitate by legislative acts the breeding of horses in South Australia for the purpose of meeting the need of India. The project was carried so far towards a reality that he went, by direction of the Government of South Australia, to India in order to submit what he had originated to the reflection and judgment of the Governor-General. His reception at Simla by the Earl of Mayo, then the Governor-General, was replete with the auspices of eventual if not of immediate success; and the termination of his visit to India was signalised by the thanks of the Governor-General in Council to himself, and by an official expression of the practical benefits which would accrue to the Army of India by the adoption of his scheme. It is true that in 1869 the telegraphic communication of India with South Australia was not what it is to-day, and that defect was then regarded as a drawback to the unchecked development of Mr. Ross's views. The defect has now, however, disappeared; for the Overland Telegraph Company, hastened to maturity by the prospect of throwing open the door of a wide, new, and remunerative commercial venture, is finished and in daily use. The proposal of Mr. Ross is that a company shall be formed for the breeding and preparing of horses for India; that at some distance to the northward of Hawker a station shall be erected; that when the animals were eighteen months old, they shall be removed to Alice Springs; that, after awhile, they shall be driven to a third station within the tropics; and that when they were three or four years old, they shall again, for the fourth time, be driven to a depôt at Port Darwin where they shall be thoroughly trained and broken-in, and from that spot shipped to India. Already, within the last few weeks, has Mr. Ross received letters from India intimating that, if the project were put anew in shape, and the details were laid before the Indian Government, no impediment would be raised by the Anglo-Indian military officers or by the Government itself to frustrate the establishment of a company of the natnre indicated to Lord Mayo. There is no concealment of the fact that the demand for horses for the Indian Army is constant and large; but that the means of satisfying the demand are confined to a narrow, dangerous, and humiliating limit. The Government of India has nowhere to turn for horses to meet the necessities of the Remount Service, but to the sales of the Zemindars, and to the fitful markets of Afghanistan, Arabia, Persia, and of countries where the prejudices of Mahommedanism are for ever seething in hatred against us. The result, therefore, is obvious, that in case of a war of any formidable dimensions, the Indian Government would be confronted by difficulties which cannot be contemplated without an impulse being given to the desire to modify them at once, or to sweep them away altogether. The remarkable circumstance is yet untold that horses can be bred, trained, and transported to India from South Australia, as well as from other parts of the Australasian Continent, at less expense than they can be bought from the native breeders and trainers in India and the neighbouring States. They are, moreover, hardier, and are fitter for the Remount Service. A trade in horses of no inconsiderable proportions has been and is being carried on between India and South Australia; but the supply thus received by India is too intermittent to insure reliance in regularity and numbers. Besides, this occasional shipment of horses is more costly than would be a settled and continuous trade, and the observation must be added that horses cannot be transferred from South Australia to India in 30 or 40 days with impunity, because the transference entails a sudden removal from a temperate to a tropical climate, and exposes to the horses to injuries of which plenty of experience can be cited in evidence.

Captain C. L. Young, R.E., has been appointed Assistant-Instructor in Construction and Estimating, at the School of Military Engineering, Chatham, in succession to Captain A. G. Clayton, R.E.

The Indian Government have sanctioned a proposal made by the Commander-in-Chief in that country, that non-commissioned officers of the Royal Artillery employed on extra regimental duty shall be borne as supernumeraries on the rolls of their batteries after three months' absence, and that when no longer required for such duty, they should revert to regimental duty, and be absorbed into the first vacancy in their own brigade. The principle followed is the same as that on which officers are seconded after three months in staff employ. The order will give much satisfaction, as great inconvenience has been experienced, owing to non-commissioned officers of batteries of Royal Artillery being temporarily employed in the Ordnance Department, without any provision being made to fill their places in their batteries.

We understand that the War-Office authorities, have quite decided to discontinue the feather bonnet as the head-dress of Highland regiments, but that no decision has been arrived at as to what shall replace it. We have not had an opportunity of ascertaining what are the objections to this handsome and soldier-like head-dress which have induced the powers that be to condemn it; but doubtless they consider them overwhelming, for it is to be presumed that they would not wantonly and from sheer lust of reform have deprived Highland regiments of a head-dress in which they have marched and fought for more than a century in every quarter of the globe, and which, as we have frequently been assured by old and experienced Highland officers, is very serviceable in the field, comfortable to wear, and in the long-run not more expensive than the bearskin or busby. Associating as we do the Highland bonnet with many a stricken field, and many a gallant deed of "derring-do," we confess to being among those who deeply regret to see it disappear; but if it must go, we trust those with whom the matter rests may not rashly adopt in its place some head-dress which is utterly unsuited to the Highland garb. We hear, for instance, of a helmet being proposed,—a most fantastic one, embellished with rampant lions, and we know not what besides, which the author, apparently with an eye to being handed down to posterity as an original genius and an inventor—if only of a military hat or shako—is strongly recommending to the notice of the Horse Guards. Shades of the Highlanders who fought under Wellington in the Peninsula and at Waterloo, and who, with unbroken front, climbed the slopes of the Alma under Sir Colin Campbell, who then and there asked to be allowed to wear the Highland bonnet, in memory of that day, has it come to this, that to replace that bonnet of a hundred years, and of an infinitude of stirring memories, nothing less incongruous can be found than a theatrical-looking helmet, which has not the remotest claims to any connection with the dress which our Highland regiments wear, and which is perhaps the most inappropriate finish to that dress which could possibly be devised? But we hope it is not too late to protest against such vandalism. We would call the attention of those who are really interested in our Highland regiments to this subject, and express a hope that the bonnet to be adopted will be a real Highland bonnet, or if a more lofty head-dress is considered desirable—and the kilt certainly has the effect of dwarfing the appearance of a body of men—that something of the shape of the busby, without the bag, may be introduced, which, made of black fur, and ornamented with a red or white hackle, would be a handsome, soldier-like, and serviceable head-dress. Of course, it will be argued that a head-dress of busby shape would be as incongruous as a helmet; but there is this to be said in favour of it,—it would, in outline, somewhat resemble the feather-bonnet to which we are accustomed, and which has been associated with the Highland Regiments for a hundred years; and it would give an appearance of height, which would certainly not be obtained by adopting a helmet, with or without a Scottish lion rampant as its crest.

Among the most notable Military events of last year in France, one may place the death of M. Gambetta, who was regarded in that country as the soul of that policy which is one day to recover Alsace and Lorraine. He devoted much of his time and talents to military affairs, which he had learned to comprehend during the days of his Dictatorship, and when carrying on war against M. de Moltke. He was patriot enough, and sufficiently free from political prejudice, to prefer capable officers to Republicans who were not capable, and his fall was, in a great measure, due to that fact. The Radicals and Ultra-Liberals could not pardon him the crime of having placed General Miribel, the most able administrator in the French Army, at the head of the Military Administration; and they basely deserted their leader. The Republic suffered another great loss in the death of General Chanzy, who expired quite suddenly at Châlons, where he was in command of the 6th Army Corps. General Chanzy won no victories, but he gained great credit during the Franco-German War by the skilful and obstinate way in which he disputed the advance of the German Army on the banks of the Loire. He managed to gain and to keep the entire confidence of his countrymen, who fondly hoped that he would one day lead them across the Rhine. Strange to say, General Chanzy began life as a middy, but he soon had enough of the sea. He was wrecked on his first cruise, and was thrown ashore on the Algerian coast. He lived to be Governor-General of Algiers. L'Armée Française complains in these terms that not much was done for the Army during the year 1883:—"The Committee of the Army to which had been confided the heavy task of preparing the reform of our principal military laws has worked with praiseworthy zeal, but it has encountered obstacles which have brought its labours to a standstill. It is, in fact, most prejudicial to the interests of the country that three Ministers should succeed each other in the course of one year at the head of such important departments as those of War and Marine." General Billot was succeeded by General Thibaudin, who was succeeded by General Campenon. Admiral Jauréguiberry was succeeded by M. Charles Brun, and M. Charles Brun was succeded by Admiral Peynon.

During the late inquiry into the working of the Army Medical Department in Egypt, Sir John Adye stated that when necessary articles are not forthcoming from the Supply Branches, it is the duty of the Medical officer to purchase the things himself if possible; and that in so doing, he would certainly be supported by the authorities at home. From this it is clear that the Supply officer would also be supported in taking similar action. But Sir John Adye was clearly in error, and failed completely to fathom the hair-splitting profundity of the War-Office clerk. During the war, many soldiers suffering from dysentery were landed at Cyprus, and the Medical authorities at once applied for certain materials for them. There were none in store, and the Supply officer purchased to the large amount of 10s. The result is strange; the accounts were in due course sent in, and returned with certain queries, &c., and it was found that the 10s. had been disallowed, because, forsooth, the material might have been bought cheaper in England! What is an officer to do on any future occasion of like nature? Is he to decline to purchase until he puts himself on the safe side by discovering the London quotation, or to decline absolutely, and thereby draw down reproof on his head, as the Medical officer has done in Egypt? or is he to purchase, and put himself voluntarily in a position of pecuniary danger? These are questions which are exercising the minds of many of our Medical readers at the present moment.

The Quarterly Journal of Veterinary Science in India reflects great credit on the Army Veterinary Surgeons, by whom it is conducted. Unlike an obtrusive section of the Army Medical Department, the contributors of the Veterinary Journal do not seek to usurp the titles of the executive officers, or to participate in duties for which they have not been trained. They deprecate the assumption by amateurs of that knowledge which they have spent years in acquiring; they desire to be allowed to perform, without any unnecessary interference, the work for which they are duly qualified; and they ask for an enlarged field of usefulness, by having all the animals used for military purposes, elephants, camels, and bullocks, as well as horses, entrusted to their care. The subjects and composition of the articles, and the tone and style of the periodical, afford clear evidence of the zeal and attainments of the officers of a department which is rising rapidly in the estimation of the service generally.

STAFF APPOINTMENTS IN 1884.

NAVAL PROMOTIONS, 1884.

The promotions taking place this year in consequence of the age retirement of Flag Officers will be as follows:—Rear-Admiral Hamilton to be Vice-Admiral, and Captain William Samuel Brown to be Rear-Admiral, on April 1; Rear-Admiral Waddilove to be Vice-Admiral, and Captain George Tryon, C.B., to be Rear-Admiral, on July 8; Vice-Admiral the Right Hon. the Lord John Hay to be Admiral, Rear-Admiral Somerset to be Vice-Admiral, and Captain Heneage to be Rear-Admiral, on October 19; Vice-Admiral Edward Bridges Rice to be Admiral, Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., to be Vice-Admiral, and Captain Sir Walter Hunt-Grubbe to be Rear-Admiral, on October 27. Admiral Rice will retire on October 30, thus giving rise to the following promotions:—Vice-Admiral Augustus Phillimore to be Admiral, Rear-Admiral Lyons to be Vice-Admiral, and Captain Rowley to be Rear-Admiral. Should a death vacancy occur on the Flag Lists during the year, Captain Richard Wells would advance to Flag rank. The promotion of Commanders and Lieutenants to fill the vacancies thus created, being made by selection, cannot be foretold. This must be apparent to all, when we come to analyse the last batch of promotions made by the Admiralty. Commander John Coke Burnell, of the Agincourt, was 69th on the Commanders' List; Lieutenant James Henry Corfe 39th on the Lieutenants' List. Nine officers are then skipped to promote Lieutenant Atkinson, commanding the Britomart; four more officers are skipped to promote Lieutenant Poë, senior of the Temeraire. The Hon. Richard Bingham is skipped to promote Lieutenant Orlebar, when nine more officers are skipped to promote Lieutenant Alfred Carpenter, commanding the Myrmidon. Their Lordships then pass over seven officers, and promote Lieutenant Martin, senior Staff officer of the Excellent; and jump from him over sixteen officers to reach Lieutenant Arbuthnot, commanding the Wrangler, a gunboat whose term of foreign service expired this year, and whose Commander might naturally look forward to promotion on paying off. Even so far, it is difficult in the extreme to explain why these officers have been selected for promotion, and others, in command of gun-vessels, Executive officers, or seniors of large ironclads, left out in the cold. But when we come to consider the next four promotions, we can only say that, had the Admiralty determined on sowing the seeds of discontent among the Lieutenants of the Navy, they could not have adopted a better course than they have. At one bound they pass over 31 officers, to promote Lieutenant Arthur Calvert Clarke, senior of the Neptune. Another leap over the heads of 43 officers enables them to promote Lieutenant Russell, Executive officer of the Tourmaline. Then they take breath, and only skip over 16 officers to reach Lieutenant Gallwey, Staff officer of the Vernon (a most able officer), apparently to enable them to make their final leap over no fewer than 88 officers, to promote the Hon. Maurice Archibald Bourke, Third and Gunnery Lieutenant of the Alexandra, appointed to that ship on January 9 last, and whose seniority dates from September 1, 1874, while that of the Senior Lieutenant of the batch, Lieutenant Corfe, who recently paid off the Moorhen, after a long and successful commission on the China station, is of April 3, 1868. The Senior Lieutenant on the List dates from 1861. Their Lordships, after passing over the officers promoted in the years intervening, have made their selection from among the Lieutenants promoted between the years 1868-74 inclusive, allotting eleven promotions to the seven years. Instead of observing the rule of senecority, and of adhering thereto as near as possible, their Lordships have not promoted men the whole service expected to see promoted, but have selected some officers whom no one serving in the Navy would ever have dreamt it were possible the Admiralty could have thus favoured. We congratulate these officers on their good-luck, but cannot compliment the Admiralty on the justice of their mode of selection. The batch of Sub-Lieutenants appear to have been entirely promoted by seniority, except Sub-Lieutenant Thomas Garden Fellowes, who had won his promotion by taking three first and a second-class certificate at college.

The Government of India has sanctioned the formation of yearly standing camps, for the purpose of carrying on the combined instruction of Royal Artillery and Sappers and Miners in siege operations and practice.

Reviews.

To Leeward. By Marion Crawford. (Chapman and Hall.)

If compared with "Mr. Isaacs" or "Dr. Claudius," this last novel by Mr. Crawford would, in our judgment, be considered inferior in interest and originality; but if To Leeward were a first effort, to be judged on its own merits, we would have no hesitation in giving the writer a warm welcome, and hailing him with pleasure as a great accession to the strength of the first line of the champions who do battle for the world with ennui, and raise us above the hard realities of life into the region of ideal joys and sorrows. To Leeward is a painful story, and it does not diminish the feeling of regret that Mr. Crawford should have bestowed such power of description on the tale, and that he has painted the scenes of the guilty passion of Leonora and her worthless lover that it is very likely such people lived, and that the story is "ower true." For such is the vigour of the handling and force of colouring, that the reader accepts the novel as an account of a domestic tragedy, which must have happened within the writer's knowledge. There is no plot. The tale of To Leeward is of the simplest. A young Englishwoman living in Rome, and much addicted to Hegel, is wooed and won by an Italian noble whom she marries, she cannot say why, but certainly not for love. She has red hair in profusion, and a fine figure, and a passionate nature, on which Hegel had produced no substantial impression. Her husband, a perfect gentleman, rich, and not ill-favoured, loves his wife to distraction. They have only been married a few weeks ere a certain Julius Battiscombe, a muscular heathen of the Crawford type, with blue-black hair, and inscrutable eyes and biceps, who has known Leonora slightly in Rome, comes on their honeymoon retreat at Sorrento. Leonora very soon begins to find that she does not love her husband, and that she does love the fierce, strenuous journalist-novelist adventurer. He, after the manner of his kind, proceeds incontinently to make the most of the predilection of the young lady for a lover who can strangle a couple of bull-dogs as readily as he can span a lady's waist, and who stands no nonsense when he is in earnest, and means to ruin his friend's wife. To do him justice, he makes one attempt to get out of the way of temptation, and is sailing away from Sorrento, when he is overhauled by Leonora's yacht. Then he succumbs to secret meetings and occult rendezvous in caves, till the couple are suddenly discovered by the husband's sister, Diana, who comes on a visit to Sorrento, and who has been once loved by the wicked but irresistible Julius. The character of Diana is beautifully drawn,—a noble Roman indeed. We regret that Mr. Crawford could not have lent her to England or America, and assigned Leonora to the warm soil of Italy; but we admit he has a right to do as he likes with his own, and he may be proud of Diana. She keeps her sister-in-law's secret, but she orders Julius to depart. He pretends to obey, but presently a bearded fisherman is seen, day after day, rowing in the coves of the coast beyond Castellamare, and anon two figures are to be seen by curious eyes in the boat. A prying Italian, who wants a little money, informs the unsuspecting husband that his wife—a few weeks married, say two months—Oh, Leonora! Oh, Mr. Crawford!—takes nocturnal excursions all about the coves, "shell-strewn and consecrate of old to some Undine's loves," with Julius B., in a fisherman's disguise, and there is very naturally some unpleasantness in consequence, as the Roman noble does not like the idea, and has not yet allowed his wife a cavaliere. To end the imbroglio, Leonora flits away from Sorrento, and repairs to Mr. Julius B., who flies off with her to a retreat in the north of Italy, sending, with a fine sense of honour, however, his address to the husband, in order that he may have satisfaction. Diana—feminine, tender, sisterly, and Roman—comes on the scene once more, and starts with her outraged brother in search of the destroyer of his honour and his peace. And here we must ask the readers of this brief notice who may be anxious to know the result, to get the book and find out for themselves. Suffice it to say that at the end of all they will read of a white-haired man, bowed with grief though not with years, who spends his life in silent charity; and of a good Princess, grave and pure, the ornament and pride of Roman society. These are the two persons who survive out of the ruin wrought in the preceding chapters, and whom they will easily identify. If this outline of the novel should not prove at all attractive, we beg those who may not feel inclined to waste their sympathies on a pair of worthless lovers to get To Leeward, if it were only for the sake of the admirable pictures of Italian life and scenery, and the mastery of animal emotion and passion exhibited by the writer. There is not much moral in the novel, but there is much of real life and flesh and blood; and some fine day, when Mr. Crawford outlives the influences of a strong physical organisation, of his intense bicepolatry, and his worship of mere bathykolpic woman, and reins in the bounding Pegasus on which, with his rout of disorderly Helens and many Briseis-loving Achilles, he careers through the Elysian fields, he may produce something which the most virtuous may peruse with delight, and may win the approval of the severest moralists who wander among the meads of Asphodel.

NOTES FROM ALDERSHOT.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

The weather during the present week has been in marked contrast to that of the previous week, and in every way suitable for route-marching, which has been steadily practised by all arms. Beyond this, there have been no Military movements of any kind.

Instructions for the playing of War-games, which will commence forthwith, have been issued during the week. These games will be played twice a week, on Wednesdays and Thursdays.

The Board of Officers ordered to report on sites, &c., for several shooting-galleries about to be erected in the camps and barracks were ordered to reassemble on Tuesday last, to report further on this important subject.

Captain and Ridingmaster J. Pawson, R.A., has been ordered from Woolwich to Aldershot, and Ridingmaster G. Williams, R.A., from Aldershot to Newcastle, each for a five years' tour of duty.

Surgeon-Major Gillespie, M.D., has assumed medical charge, temporarily, of the officers, women, and children, South Camp.

Veterinary-Surgeons Braddell and Mitchell, having arrived at the Camp for duty, have been posted to the 2nd Dragoon Guards and 7th Hussars, respectively. Veterinary-Surgeon Hazleton has been posted to the 15th Hussars for duty.

Fifty recruits from the depôt at Kingston arrived at the Camp on Thursday, to join the 31st East Surrey Regiment.

The Divisional Drag Hounds had two good runs during the week. On Monday the meet was at Cut Mill Pond, Hampton, near Seale; and on Thursday at the Kennels, North Camp.

The Divisional Music Society will give a concert at the Officers' Club, at an early date, to be shortly followed by performances by the Officers' Divisional Dramatic Society.

ADMIRALTY PARTIALITY.

Sir,—Allow me to correct a slight error in your issue of last Saturday? It is there stated that Capt. Bedford has only had one appointment in his present rank, whereas he has already had two, one in the Shah and another as Captain of Greenwich College. His successor at the College has also done well, as he has lately received a second appointment as captain, in which rank he has already had over two years' service, while several of his seniors have not been employed at all. Such acts of partiality are of frequent occurrence, but generally pass unchallenged, through fear of the consequences should the identity of the complainer be discovered.—I am, &c., One of Them.

SOLDIERS' GRIEVANCES.

Sir,—I see by an issue of a recent date that Lieut.-Col. North, M.P., proposes, as soon as Parliament meets, to make inquiry as to what has become of a certain sum of unclaimed Army prize-money,—namely, £28,000, the produce of stores, &c., taken at Sebastopol. I fear the hon. Member will obtain but small satisfaction from the Government, judging by what took place in Parliament last Session with reference to the "Soldiers' Unclaimed Balances." The facts are hardly credible, but they may be summed up shortly thus:—By the Regimental Debts Act, 1863, provision is made for the publication in the London Gazette of information as to sums of money due to the next-of-kin of deceased soldiers. About 160 of such lists have been published, and the result of the scant publicity afforded is said to result in a "Crown windfall" of some £4,000 a year. Numerous complaints have from time to time been made in your columns and elsewhere, suggesting newspaper publicity instead of Gazette notification, but the Government made no sign. Accordingly, Lieut.-Col. Sir Walter Barttelot, M.P., last Session moved for a return showing the receipts and payments in respect of these "unclaimed balances" since 1863, with a list of amounts awaiting distribution. The Government consented to the return in a mutilated form, namely, for the last seven years only, and it was accordingly presented to Parliament in July last. The return, however, is likely to prove mere waste-paper, as the Government actually refuses to print it, owing to the length of the document! Why, Sir, the very length of the return—made up, as it mainly is, of unclaimed sums—conclusively proves the need of greater publicity; and this being so, I ask your valuable aid towards endeavouring to obtain the printing and extensive circulation of the return as to "Soldiers' Unclaimed Balances." I would only add that the interest on these balances would probably pay the cost of printing the return many times over.—I am, &c., Edward Preston

Naval Cadetships.—Yes.

"Also a Naval Officer."—Next week.

The Army and Navy Gazette exchanges with or receives the following Service papers abroad:—L'Avenir Militaire; Bulletin de la Réunion des Officiers; L'Armée Française; L'Italia Militare; Rivista Europea; Rivista Militare; Memorial de Ingenieros; La France Militaire; Moniteur de la Flotte; Le Progrès Militaire; Der Veteran; Streffleur's Oesterreichische Militärische Zeitschrift; Jahrbücher für die Deutsche Armee und Marine; Militär Wochenblatt; Giornale d'Artiglieria e Genio; Organ der Militär-Wissenchaftlichen Vereine; Vedette; Deutsche Heeres Zeitung; Militärische Zeitschrift; Armeeblatt, Wien; Army and Navy Journal of New York; The American, Philadelphia; Revista Maritima Brazileira; in addition to all the home and colonial professional periodicals and journals.

HELMET v. FORAGE-CAP.

Sir,—Your correspondent, "Common-sense," whose letter you inserted in your number of Dec. 1, is somewhat under a misapprehension as to the head-dress used by the Germans. They do certainly show their common-sense, but it is by making their men used during peace-time to the conditions of active service, and not by dressing men like deer-stalkers. The forage-cap of the German rank and file has no peak or shade for the eyes beyond what is given by its wide top. But the German soldier has to do his musketry practice not in forage-cap (which is only used for some preliminary practice), but in marching order, including helmet and knapsack, with kit complete. The musketry regulations ordain that if the actual kit is not carried in it, an equivalent weight is to be put into the knapsack. At field-days and peace manœuvres the helmet is worn, and for a great part of even the recruits' drill the helmet is the regulation head-dress.—I am, &c.,

H. Helsham Jones.

Sir C. G. Zervudacchi, K.C.M.G., a Greek merchant at Alexandria, has sent the Duke of Cambridge, as President of the Patriotic Fund, a cheque for £1,300 to be expended for the benefit of the soldiers' widows and children in such manner as may be deemed most advisable. This gentleman has always shown the most friendly feeling towards the British Army. When he returned to Alexandria after its occupation by the English, he found his new and spacious stores in possession of our sick and wounded. Instead of demanding exorbitant rents, or the surrender of the stores, as was done in similar cases by nearly every other merchant, he expressed himself as highly gratified to find that his stores were appropriated to so good a purpose, and at once officially handed them over for the use of the sick free of charge, the estimated annual value being between £3,000 and £4,000. Sir C. Zervudacchi at the same time said that he did not presume to place the British Government under any obligation to him, and, therefore, if they desired to pay rent for his buildings, he begged that whatever they might think proper to give might be paid over for the benefit of the sick and wounded of the British Army.

The Valorous, Capt. the Hon. R. Hare, with the Phaeton in tow, arrived at Portsmouth from Glasgow on Jan. 2. The Phaeton will undergo her steam trials, be masted, and then sent to Chatham to be brought forward for commission.

The names of 5,599 soldiers were published as deserters from the Army during the year 1883, but, as usual, the majority of these men were apprehended or returned voluntarily to the ranks. There were discharged from the Army for misconduct in the same period 245 men, who cannot re-enlist without fraudulent misrepresentations, and there were 249 men proclaimed as absentees from the Army Reserve. In the Militia there were recorded as absentees the large number of 11,248, most of whom were merely dilatory in reporting themselves at the annual training.

The Sheffield Telegraph, in a review of local trade for the year, states that during 1883 the armour for the Warspite, Collingwood, and Edinburgh has been completed and delivered, and the new vessels for our own Government for which the plates have been ordered are the Rodney, the Benbow, the Camperdown, and Howe. For Russia, Messrs. John Brown and Co. (Limited), the Atlas Steel and Iron Works, have made the armour for the Dmitri Domskoy; and Messrs. Charles Cammell and Co. (Limited), the Cyclops Steel and Iron Works, have entered into an arrangement with the Russian Government to put the works at Kolpino, near St. Petersburg, in a condition to manufacture compound armour as it is produced in Sheffield, one-half of the requirements of the Russian Admiralty for the next ten years to be made at Kolpino and the other half at Sheffield. Brazil has placed the second ship of her navy (clothed with compound armour) with Messrs. Samuda Brothers, Poplar. The new vessel is named the Aquidaban, and is a sister ship to the Riachuelo, also armoured with Sheffield plates. Italy has had delivered the armour for the new vessel, the Italia; and next year it is expected that the order will be received for the Lepanto, a sister-ship. Two other large vessels, also for the Italian Government, are to be put in hand, and the plates will come to Sheffield. During the year, trials of compound armour versus all-steel French plates have taken place in Italy, Denmark, and Russia, in addition to those in our own country. The results have been invariably in favour of the compound "Ellis" and "Wilson" plates, as produced in Sheffield. Even France, where the Creuzot all-steel plates are made, is using the Sheffield as well as the French plates in the clothing of her war-ships.

The Army.

7th Dragoon Guards. The head-quarters and service troops left Portsmouth on the 29th ult., on board the Jumna, for India. They will arrive at Bombay on the 26th inst., and will proceed at once to Mhow. The officers who embarked were Lieut.-Cols. Truman and Chapman; Majors Bibby, Thomas, and Creagh; Capts. Becher, Burke, and Du Boulay; Lieuts. Aspinwall, Ditmas, Barton, Calvert, Lowe, Thompson, Dering-Williams, Danby, and Horsbrugh; Paymaster Wheble, Capt. and Adjt. De Burgh, Vet.-Surg. Blenkinsop, 460 men, 32 women, and 38 children.

6th Dragoons. The Natal Witness of Dec. 2 says:—"Major Froom proceeded yesterday from Pinetown to join the troops at Etshowe. We learn that no definite orders have been received with regard to the departure of the troops from Etshowe. It is probable, however, that the column will remain in Zululand until the end of the year."

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The depôt 1st Brig. Northern Division has moved this week from Newcastle to Sunderland.

Major-Gen. D. W. Paynter, C.B., on the Retired List, died on Sunday, at Bath, aged 67. The deceased entered the Army in 1833, obtained a lieutenancy in 1837, and was promoted to a captaincy in 1845. He served in the Eastern Campaign of 1854, taking part in the affairs of Bulganac and M'Kenzie's Farm, and being also engaged in the battles of the Alma, Balaclava, and Inkerman, and in the siege of Sebastopol (medal with four clasps, Turkish medal, 5th class of the Medjidie, and C.B.). He became lieut.-col. in 1855, col. in 1858, and major-gen. in 1867.

A large number of the residents at Rothesay and citizens of St. John's attended the funeral of the late Lieut.-Gen. J. W. Domville, on the Retired List, from his son's residence, Kingshurst, Rothesay. The deceased was laid in a beautiful black oak casket, with antique brass trimmings, with a massive brass plate, which bore the inscription:—"James William Domville, lieut.-gen., Royal Artillery, born 1817, died 1883." The remains were taken to the Episcopal Church, Rothesay, where the rector, the Rev. Mr. Hancock, read the impressive Church of England service for the dead. The chief mourners were Lieut.-Col. Domville and his son, Thomas W. Lee, J. Morris Robinson, and W. G. Scovil. The remains were taken from the church to the rural cemetery, where they were laid to rest. The casket was lowered into the grave prepared for it, and then cemented, after which the earth was filled in.

The official report on the practice at the recent camps at Okehampton and Hay states that sufficient attention had not been given to gun-drill and to the preparation and service of ammunition. The practice of the batteries was generally too slow, and there was a great want of system in carrying it out. This was through the service of ammunition, fuze-boring, and setting and accurate laying having been improperly attended to while the batteries were in quarters. It was found that very few men could lay a gun with exactness, and the reports of the batteries which carried out their practice elsewhere than at Okehampton and Hay show this fault to be general. It was also observed that some of the most elementary rules in gunnery were either forgotten or unknown. The Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has received this information with much concern, and directs officers commanding Royal Artillery districts to insist on such careful and continuous instruction and drill being carried out by all battery officers, whether in the field or in quarters, as will ensure the thorough acquaintance of the non-commissioned officers and gunners with all those points which are calculated to develop the effect of their guns to the fullest extent. Before a battery leaves its station for a practice camp, the commanding officer of the district is to satisfy himself that the foregoing orders have been carried out, and will report on the instruction of the battery generally, and on the proficiency and knowledge of the officers and non-commissioned officers in the actual service of their guns. It was also remarked at some of the recent inspections by the Field-Marshal Commanding, that officers commanding batteries and detached guns showed great want of judgment in the position taken by them in coming into action, and the particular attention of officers is called to the field artillery exercises, especially as to the duty of the battery commanding officer in selecting a suitable site for his battery on coming into action.

5th Northumberland Fusiliers. The 2nd Batn., from Chakrata, has arrived at Meerut, and occupied the barracks vacated by the 68th Light Infantry.

6th Royal Warwickshire Regiment. The death is announced of Lieut.-Col. John Bonamy, on the Retired List. He was the son of Lieut.-Col. John Bonamy, 60th Regiment, was educated at the Royal Military College, Great Marlow, and was in Dec. 1811 gazetted to an ensigncy of the 6th Regiment. He was present in the battles of the Nivelle Nive, and Orthes, in which latter engagement he carried the King's colour; his brother standard-bearer was badly wounded, and two of his colour-serjeants shot dead at his side. He served throughout the three years of the Allied occupation of France, under command of the Duke of Wellington, till Oct. 1818, when that occupation terminated. In 1821 he accompanied the 6th to the Cape, where he was attached to the Royal Engineers, and was for three years employed on a survey of the Great Orange River. In 1826 the regiment was ordered to India, and was stationed in the Bombay Presidency. He served for 16 years, 10 of which he had the honour of serving on the personal staff of Sir T. Bradford, Sir John Malcolm, and Sir Colin Halket. In 1839 Col. Bonamy returned to England on leave of absence, and in April, 1841, retired on the full pay of his rank.

8th King's (Liverpool Regiment). Major Crawley has received orders to proceed to India to join the 2nd Batn. Major Stuart, 1st Batn., has sent in his papers to retire, and has joined head-quarters, Cork, from the depôt, pending retirement.

35th Royal Sussex Regiment. Lieut. and Adjt. Pierson sailed in the P. and O. steamer Deccan on Jan. 2 to rejoin the head-quarters at Cairo.

39th Dorsetshire Regiment. Lieut. Elrington has been appointed a Deputy-Assist.-Comy.-Gen. of Ordnance, and ordered to Woolwich for duty.

48th Northamptonshire Regiment. Capt. Bennet has been selected to perform, for six months, the duties of Instructor of Army Signalling at Aldershot, during the absence on leave of Capt. Davidson, 60th Rifles.

ROYAL MARINES.

The following officers have been granted leave of absence, viz.:—Major W. G. T. Bickford, R.M.A., Military Instructor, until Feb. 1, 1884; Capt. C. J. Cheetham, R.M.A., three weeks; Lieut. C. E. E. Curtoys, R.M.L.I., two months; Lieut. and Adjt. F. E. Hast, R.M.L.I., six weeks; Lieut. R. J. Saumarez, R.M.L.I., one month.

An exchange of ships has been sanctioned between Lieut. F. A. Robertson, R.M.L.I., of the Lord Warden, and Lieut. F. H. N. Wilson, R.M.L.I., of the Penelope, conditionally on the exchange being effected without cost to the public.

58th Northamptonshire Regiment. The Natal Witness of Dec. 1 says:—"We learn that although his regiment, the 58th, goes at once to the Cape, Col. Bond remains behind, to continue in command of our garrison. Such instructions have, we believe, been received from Capetown, and the arrangement, it is understood, will subsist until Col. Curtis returns from Zululand, which at present seems a most indefinite period. The likelihood is that the 58th will leave here on Tuesday or Wednesday, and, on account of Col. Bond remaining behind, Major Anderson will take charge of the regiment round to Capetown."

60th King's Royal Rifle Corps. Lieut. (local Capt.) Davidson, Instructor of Army Signalling, who sustained severe injury to his spine, in July last, by a fall from his horse, has so far recovered as to be able to proceed on six months' sick leave to the south of Europe. His duties are, in the meantime, performed by Capt. Bennett, 48th Regt.

68th Durham Light Infantry. The depôt has moved this week from Sunderland to Newcastle-on-Tyne.

106th Durham Light Infantry. The depôt has moved this week from Sunderland to Newcastle-on-Tyne.

MILITIA.

"One of the Many" writes:—"I observe in the papers flying rumours that the Militia may be called upon to fill the place of troops required in Egypt. You may depend on it such a measure would only be resorted to in the very last extremity, for it would make patent to all what is well known to such few as now interest themselves in the subject how utterly rotten is the condition of the Militia. Tens of thousands are required to complete the establishment of privates, many hundreds to complete the officers. Of these latter, many hundreds more are serving only in name,—in reality, are shirking their work, studying with Army "crammers" for the Line. Of what remains, the officers are listless and discouraged, the rank and file are less than half-drilled, wholly unable to use their arms with effect. They serve under two masters, with the natural results of caring for neither. Drilled on enlistment at the depôt, where they are regarded either as a simple nuisance, or as material to be utilised for fatigues and barrack duties; they are next handed over for training to officers to whom they are absolute strangers, and who have had nothing to do with, and therefore cannot be held responsible for, their elementary drill. The whole thing, beautiful perhaps in theory to the admirers of our new military dispensation, is a senseless and hopeless muddle to those whose misfortune it is to have to deal with it in practice."

(Where not otherwise stated, the foregoing commissions and announcements bear date January 5, and the current year must be understood.)

A letter was received at the Oxfordshire Quarter Sessions on Monday from H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, sent through the officer commanding the regimental district, desiring to know if the services of the county police could be utilised for the purpose of making generally known the advantages and conditions of entering the Regular Army and Militia. The fee for the Regular Army to be five shillings, and for the Militia half-a-crown. The Earl of Jersey moved: "That the Court resolves that members of the county police be authorised, subject to the directions of the chief constable, to distribute any instructions which may be furnished by the War Office with reference to the enlistment of recruits, and give information to persons desirous of entering the Army or Militia." Sir Henry Dashwood, Lord-Lieutenant of the county, seconded the resolution. Mr. J. J. Henly said so long as the police were confined to what was stated in the resolution, he did not object, but he could not conceive anything more objectionable than to employ the police as recruiting-serjeants. He would only agree to sanction their employment as distributors of information. Recruiting meant public-houses and the drinking of beer, and if the police were to try and get men and have the advantage of money for their services, they would use the same means that recruiting-serjeants did at the present time. The resolution was agreed to.

In transferring his command to Gen. Sheridan, Gen. Sherman issued an order of the day, thanking all officers and men for their services during his period of official life. The retiring Commander-in-Chief has also issued his final annual report, in the course of which he expresses his conviction, after having personally examined many of the most celebrated military schools in the world, that the American schools are the best. As regards the Indians, he considers them as substantially eliminated from the problem of the Army. "There may be spasmodic and temporary alarms," the general observes, "but such Indian wars as have hitherto disturbed the public peace and prosperity are not probable. The Army has been a large factor in producing this result, but it is not the only one. Immigration and the occupation by industrious farmers and miners of lands vacated by the aborigines have been largely instrumental to this end, but the railroad has been the greatest cause." Gen. Sherman advises Congress to adopt the system of posts, to conform to the recent railroad developments in the Far West. He also urges extra compensation to soldiers for extra work outside of strict military duty; advises provision for the transfer of regiments from remote stations to home stations, after a reasonable period of service; and renews former recommendations for a reorganisation of the Army.

OFFICE—40 CHARING CROSS, S.W.

This Asylum was opened in February, 1854, to provide a home for the widows of non-commissioned officers and privates of the Army of not less than 50 years of age.

There are 65 widows in the Asylum.

Each widow has a furnished room, and receives seven shillings weekly, besides a monthly allowance of two shillings and sixpence for coals.

The House is capable of containing 70 widows, and the Committee appeal to the public for funds to enable them to admit the additional number, the present subscriptions being insufficient.

The funded income of the charity yields only £930, with an additional £50 from the Princess Mary's Fund for Nurses, to meet an estimated expenditure of £3,000 per annum.

An annual subscription of half-a-guinea, or a donation of five guineas, entitles to one vote at each election, with the right of nominating a candidate.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1884.

A GENERAL Order regulating the administration of Regimental Depôts has just been "specially issued." Like most documents that emanate from the War Office in these days of endless changes, it is verbose and complicated. The first clause ordains that "the depôt companies of line battalions will, from January 1, 1884, be lettered A, B, C, D, and all officers, non-commissioned officers, and men, then with, or who may join the depôt, will be posted to companies, irrespective of the battalions from which they come, so as to form only one depôt." But each "line battalion" has only two depôt companies. The clause should have run "the depôt companies of the line battalions of each regiment," &c. The second clause enjoins the careful selection, for duty at depôts, of the men of all ranks who can least be spared from their respective battalions. The third clause fixes the residence of officers commanding regimental districts at their head-quarters. The fourth unifies the roll of non-commissioned officers of home battalions and depôts, for purposes of promotion, and requires the concurrence of two or three commanders to the promotion of a corporal.

By the fifth clause, the complication is increased, by including the battalion on foreign service, in cases of all promotions above the rank of serjeant. If this order be carried out, a serjeant may be sent from Peshawur to Devonport, and another from Manchester to Quettah, when the numerous commanding officers concerned have agreed, after wasting months in the requisite correspondence, that the two are the best qualified in their respective regiments for promotion to the rank of colour-serjeant! Can anything be more ridiculously unpractical? The sixth clause provides for keeping non-commissioned officers who are at home for an indefinite time, on the strength of battalions on foreign service. The seventh, eighth, and ninth clauses relate to the training of recruits. The tenth clause, reverting to the subject of the second, enjoins the selection of serjeants of long service for duty at depôts. From the eleventh, we learn that "Invalids for discharge, and soldiers sent home on completion of their period of service with the colours, will be disposed of as may be directed by the Adjutant-General." This reads like the assumption of arbitrary power by that functionary. We leave the task of understanding the twelfth clause to those concerned; we give it up in despair. If no promotion is made among the non-commissioned officers till a vacancy occurs, how can the establishment be exceeded? The thirteenth and last clause gives the particulars of some alterations in the "Queen's Regulations," a book which has lost its old character for stability, and now alters so often and so much that a new edition is needed almost every month.

The main object of the General Order we have been reviewing appears to be the extinction, as far as orders can extinguish it, of any sparks of the old regimental feeling that may be discovered among men returning from foreign service. The only results, we venture to predict, will be increased friction between commanding officers of districts, battalions, and depôts, and a vast amount of correspondence, explaining some parts, and explaining away others.

General R. Wardlaw, C.B., having attained the prescribed age, is about to be placed on the Retired List, from the 13th inst.

The following promotions may be looked forward to among General Officers during the present year, viz.:—General J. A. Street, C.B. (67 years of age), on February 6; Lieutenant-General Sir C. L. D'Aguilar, K.C.B., R.A. (67 years of age), on March 31; Lieutenant-General Lord Chelmsford, G.C.B., and Major-Generals H. H. Crealock, C.B., C.M.G., F. Marshall, C.M.G. (five years unemployed), in July; and W. C. Trevor, C.B. (five years unemployed), in August; Lieutenant-General Sir C. P. B. Walker, K.C.B. (67 years of age), on October 7; General Sir C. Dickson, V.C., K.C.B., R.A. (67 years of age), on November 20; Lieutenant-General J. A. Ewart (67 years of age), on November 30; Major-General G. B. Milman, C.B. (62 years of age), on December 20; and Lieutenant-General W. H. Seymour, C.B., on December 31.

The Colonels to be retired under the Age Clause of the Royal Warrant of 1881 during the present year are:—Colonels W. R. Farmar, Assistant-Commandant at Netley, and R. C. Stewart, half-pay, late 2nd Foot, Brigadier-General in India, on March 15; S. Darling, Assistant-Adjutant-General for Recruiting in Ireland, on April 24; R. B. Chichester, C.B., commanding a Regimental District, on May 3; and F. D. Middleton, C.B., Commandant of the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, on October 24.

Only four Regimental District Commands become vacant during the present year, viz., the 13th (Taunton), Colonel R. B. Montgomery, on March 15; 14th (York), Colonel R. B. Chichester, C.B., on May 3 (under Compulsory Retirement Clause); the 4th (Lancaster), Colonel A. C. K. Lock, on June 21; and 102nd (Naas), Colonel G. F. Herbert, on December 19.

The Commissariat and Transport Staff and Ordnance Store Department will obtain no steps of promotion in the higher ranks during the present year by the operation of the Compulsory Retirement Clauses, as none of their senior officers come under the terms of the Warrant during 1884.

There will be three retirements under the Age Clause during the present year from among the Administrative ranks of the Army Medical Department, viz., Surgeons-General A. Smith, C.B., and J. Lamprey, on October 14; and R. Gilborne, on November 20.

During the forthcoming year the following officers will be retired from the Army Pay Department on the score of age:—Lieutenant-Colonel J. George, Chief Paymaster at Colchester, in September, and the following Staff Paymasters: Major J. E. Large, 31st Regimental District, Kingston-on-Thames, in January; Major J. Mahony, C.M.G., Paymaster, R.A., Portsmouth, in March; Major J. Campbell, 4th Regimental District, Lancaster, also in March; and Major A. Baird, 65th Regiment, in May. We have reason to believe that two Chief Paymasters and three Staff Paymasters will retire voluntarily during 1884, making a total of ten steps altogether.

In the Veterinary Department, the only compulsory retirement will be that of First-class Veterinary-Surgeon H. Sewell, who will be 55 years of age on May 9.

The unsuccessful, but "qualified," Militia candidates who went up for examination in September last have come in for another unexpected piece of good-fortune. During the past week 20 more Infantry commissions have been offered amongst these gentlemen, owing to the batch of Sandhurst cadets about to be gazetted being insufficient to fill up all the existing vacancies.

The state of the national defences is such that in order to provide carriages for the heavy guns lately shipped for the defences of Hong Kong, guns have had to be dismounted on the fortifications at Plymouth and the Isle of Wight. The large expenditure on the Arsenal at Woolwich seems productive of small results.

We believe the new Estimates will show an increase in the daily pay of the Artillery soldier,—at least, in the case of the garrison gunners.

Under the coming reduction of the Royal Horse Artillery, one battery instead of two will in future be stationed at Newbridge, Ireland, and the battery at Coventry will be withdrawn altogether.

The Circular which has been issued to the Artillery, that a soldier on being posted to a particular battery is to remain in it and only moved under special circumstances, is a step in the right direction, and will, we trust, be efficacious towards arresting that gradual disappearance of the Royal Regiment which has been now for some time in progress.

We would suggest that as all Artillery recruits are in future to be trained at depôts, and not with service batteries, so Infantry recruits, at any rate for the battalion abroad, might be trained at the Brigade Depôt, and despatched from thence. This would obviate the perpetual shifting that now takes place in the home battalion, and the consequent want of cohesion between officers and men.

We hear of a Battery of Garrison Artillery at a well-known southern fortress 39 men deficient out of a strength of 130 men, and this by no means an isolated case; evidence, no doubt, of the satisfactory condition of recruiting, as announced by Cabinet Ministers.

From the official list, it seems that 20 service and two Depôt Batteries of Horse Artillery are armed with the 9-pounder gun, and six batteries with the 13-pounder. Of the 79 Batteries of Field Artillery at home and abroad, 52 are armed with the 9-pounder, four with the 13-pounder, and 23 with the 16-pounder, a truly varied system of equipment.

With reference to paragraph ix., General Order 51, of 1883, it has been decided by Horse Guards' minute that only those non-commissioned officers who are unpaid lance-serjeants, corporals, or paid lance-corporals at the time of the competition for the "corporal's" prize, are eligible to compete for that prize. It has been decided by the Horse Guards, the "best shot" and "marksman's" prize should not be given to one man. When the applications for "best shots" are rendered, Commanding Officers will invariably deduct the value of the "marksman's" prize, in the case of those "best shots" who have already received the "marksman's" prize.

Colonel T. Ingles, C.B., R.E., and Lieutenant-Colonel C. E. Nairne, C.B., R.A., have been appointed associate members of the Ordnance Committee at the War Office, for iron armour.

When Mr. Childers was reorganising the Army, he made a fatal mistake in adding to the Highland regiments two more distinguished corps, the 73rd and 75th, which certainly were originally raised in the Highlands, but which had entirely ceased to have any connection with the northern portion of the kingdom. It was difficult enough before this addition was made to obtain recruits in Scotland for Scotch regiments; now it is quite impossible to get the necessary number of men, and we hear that men for a Highland regiment are now being recruited in a district in the South of England. So much for the much-vaunted system of localisation. Is it yet too late to reduce our Highland regiments to the number for which recruits can be found in North Britain?

Major H. Cautley, R.E., has been selected to assist Sir William Jervois in the fortification of the harbours of New Zealand. Colonel Scratchley had prepared a scheme in 1881, but Sir William Jervois did not approve of it when he saw the harbours, alleging that the Colonel had been rather too much hurried in his work. He offered to superintend the work himself if a suitable officer were furnished to do the details. Major Cautley's appointment is the result.

Sir Charles Cameron Lees, K.C.M.G., late 23rd Fusiliers, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Bahama Islands, has been appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Leeward Islands.

The appointment of British Resident in Basutoland has been offered to Colonel M. J. Clarke, C.M.G., late Royal Artillery, who is already very favourably known in South Africa. Colonel Clarke is at present in Egypt.

Venereal, of the most virulent type, is still the prevailing disease among the troops at all the military stations. At Aldershot, considerably more than one-half the patients in hospital are suffering from this disease, which is steadily on the increase. On the other hand, the lock hospitals are almost empty. Attendance at these institutions being now optional, but few unfortunates present themselves for treatment; and these, as a rule, are only very bad cases. Fostered and encouraged as it is, this loathsome disease is spreading to such an extent as to cause grave anxiety.

Lieutenant R. L. Hippisley, Royal Engineers, has been appointed to do duty, in connection with the Postal Telegraphs, as Superintending Engineer (in the South-West Sub-District) of the new trunk lines in course of construction.

A correspondence has been going on for some time between a Purchase Colonel, compulsorily removed from the Army, and the War Office, as regards the great injustice which is committed towards such officers by the reduction of their pensions in the event of their obtaining civil employ under Government. The above rule was adopted formerly against all Army officers accepting civil employ, but since compulsory removal of Purchase officers has been adopted, the Government do not seem to have any right whatever to reduce pensions under such circumstances. As the colonel in question paid over £6,000 for his commissions, this is a test case which should rule future Military legislation on this point.

We believe that Sir Frederick Abel, K.C.B., will advise the Sir Collingwood Dickson's Ordnance Committee on subjects connected with the subject of explosives.

Captain N. L. Walford, Royal Artillery, has been appointed Brigade-Major at the School of Gunnery, Shoeburyness, vice Major A. N. Pearse, R.A., whose period of Staff service has expired.

It is now just a year since Lord Dufferin announced that the Dual Control was dissolved as a preliminary to the assumption of independent action by the British Government in the affairs of Egypt; and almost at the moment the English Ambassador was making formal record of the resolve for the information of Chérif Pasha and his colleagues, one Mahdi or Medhi down in the Soudan was engaged in a serious action with the troops of the Khedive, on whom he inflicted a heavy loss as a preliminary to the capture of El Obeid, which has since then been the capital of his fast-extending dominion. Then the British Government informed the Khedive they did not know anything about the Soudan, and that he must deal with the Mahdi as he pleased. They would not help him in any way. Beyond Assouan there was no Egypt. True, the Nile flowed from Khartoum to Cairo—and there was a Nilometer at the former place, by which the whole irrigation of Egypt was regulated, and there was a British Consul there, and there were Europeans and missionaries, merchants, priests, nuns, but that was no interest of Downing Street. The Soudan had cost Egypt 30,000 men and £5,000,000 to conquer, in order chiefly that the European Powers, and chiefly England, might be able to control the slave-trade, and stamp it to death. To please England, Baker Pasha was sent there, and to please England Gordon Pasha was appointed to succeed him; but the Soudan, nevertheless, was ruled out of the map by the Foreign Office. And now we read most absurd suggestions for the evacuation of Khartoum and a retreat to Berber. Do the writers who pen such nonsense give a thought to the means by which the retreat could be effected, or the results which would ensue on the attempt being made to descend the Nile—Cataracts and all!—from Khartoum to Berber, or by a march through the Desert to Dongola! Our cry is, 'Ote toi, que je me y mets!" And the Egyptian Ministers, sick of incessant reviling, and accusations of incompetence, and the miserable, hunted Khedive, are at last driven to the verge of despair, and are ready to say, 'Come, then, and try. See if you will do better than Hicks Pasha did when he had displaced the incompetent Egyptian who met his fate by his side!' The real rulers of Egypt are the correspondents of the London newspapers who telegraph from Alexandria and Cairo. One thing is quite sure,—that matters will not mend with indefinite occupation or definite annexation, and that British Pashas at Cairo and at Khartoum will not be able to do more with the material at hand in producing peace, prosperity, and contentment in the country, than Turk, or Circassian, or Egyptian, till the people are freed from the load of grinding taxation and intolerable indebtedness to the stranger. Ismail Pasha certainly will never consent to sit at Abdin as the servant of Mr. C. Lloyd or Sir E. Baring!

The Navy.

Assistance, Capt. St. Clair, left Woolwich on New Year's Day for North Shields, with X Baty. 1st Brig. R.A.

Audacious, Capt. Tracey, flagship of Vice-Admiral G. O. Willes, C.B., was at Nagasaki on Nov. 20, and would proceed to Hong Kong early in December, calling at Chusan. The Sapphire was at Jin Chuen, Corea, on Nov. 9, and on return to Chefoo with Sir Harry Parkes, would proceed to Japan as senior officer's ship of that division. The Kestrel was at Chefoo on Nov. 12, and will winter at Tientsin. The Cockchafer left Shanghai on Nov. 19 for Chefoo. The Albatross left Shanghai on Nov. 19 for Hankow. The Curaçoa is at Shanghai, and remains as senior officer's ship, North China division. The Foxhound was at Pagoda Anchorage (Foochow) on Nov. 15, and remains. The Champion was at Singapore on Oct. 23; was to leave early in November for Hong Kong, to prepare to pay off and recommission. The Fly left Singapore on Oct. 12 for Borneo, and was to proceed to Hong Kong about middle of Nov. The Midge was at Hong Kong, preparing for commission. The Flying Fish was at Hong Kong on Nov. 3, preparing to pay off and recommission. Vice-Admiral Willes was at Shanghai on Nov. 21, with his flag flying in the Vigilant. He would proceed to Chusan early in December, rehoist his flag on board the Audacious, and then proceed to Hong Kong to meet Vice-Admiral Sir William Dowell, and hand over the command of the station. The Audacious was expected to arrive at Hong Kong on Jan. 11.

Boadicea, Capt. Edmund J. Church, flagship of Rear-Admiral Nowell Salmon, V.C., was at Simon's Town on Dec. 28; would leave for a cruise up the West Coast on Jan. 5. The Stork was at Simon's Bay on Dec. 12. The Algerine was at Ascension on Nov. 1, and would leave about a fortnight later for Monte Video.

Canada, Capt. Durrant, having on board Prince George of Wales, gave an entertainment on board, at Bermuda, on Nov. 21, prior to the departure of the ship for the Windward Islands. The programme included the serio-comic drama, "The Deal Boatman," concluding with the laughable farce, "Taming a Tiger," with a one-string violin solo between the pieces. The entertainment, which was held in the Theatre in the Spar Yard, Ireland Island, was a decided success, the audience during the entire evening heartily appreciating the efforts of the amateurs. It is difficult to say who acquitted themselves the best, for each and all, as far as their parts allowed, made a "hit." J. Haines (boatswain's mate), as Jacob Vance, invested the character with a naturalness which made itself felt through the entire piece; J. Williams, as Mrs. Bridgett, kept the audience in a continuous laugh; and the part of Mary was admirably sustained by A. Loft. The fun in the farce was kept up from beginning to end—the timidity of Jacob Muttar, the sangfroid of Beeswing, and the irascibility of Chili Chutnee were admirably portrayed by Messrs. Wheatley, Scott, and Pain respectively. Great credit is due to the musician, J. W. Wheatley, for his exertions in getting together a very creditable string band, and also for his excellent violin solo. The characters in "The Deal Boatman" were distributed as follows:—Sir John Haughton, W. H. Pain; Edward Leslie, J. W. Wheatley; George Prescott, A. Adams; Jacob Vance, J. Haines; Matt. Bramber, W. Minter; Mary, A. Loft; Mrs. Bridgett, J. Williams. In "Taming the Tiger" the following was the cast:—Chili Chutnee, W. H. Pain; Charles Beeswing, H. L. Scott; Jacob Muttar, J. W. Wheatley. Lieut. the Hon. S. Colville undertook the management of the whole affair, and thanks are due to him for his unceasing exertions to make the first attempt of the Canada Dramatic Club a success. The Canada left Bermuda on Dec. 14 for the Island of St. Kitt's.

Condor, Com. Jeffreys, arrived at Malta on Dec. 15 from Galibia Bay; she was paid off on Dec. 27, and recommissioned the following day, with a new crew brought out in the hired transport Italy. Com. Gunn relieves Com. Jeffreys.

Dart, Lieut.-Com. Moore, has recently returned to Sydney, after an extended cruise among the South Sea Islands. Among other places, she visited the Solomon Islands, to inquire into the reported murder of the Government agent and several other persons by natives. She landed a party of seamen, and sent a message to the chiefs of the village, about three miles north of the foreland Api, demanding that the murderers should be given up. The demand was refused, and the landing party, who were considerably augmented by the officers and crew of the Diamond, which arrived on the same day, attacked the village of Marachi, about five miles inland. The natives, however, escaped to the bush, and, it being useless to follow them, the sailors proceeded to burn down the villages, five in number, and the surrounding plantation. This was done without any interference on the part of the natives, and the attacking party returned to their vessels on the following morning without a single casualty.

Euphrates, Capt. Cardale, arrived at Port Said on New Year's Day and entered the Canal. She left Suez on Thursday.

Forward, Lieut. and Com. Furlonger, has joined the Channel Squadron at Gibraltar, and took H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh over to Tangier on Monday.

Heroine, Capt. Blackburne, was at Esquimault on Dec. 10. A correspondent, writing to the Western Morning News, says:—"The Heroine has just arrived here, after a cruise along the British Columbian coast in search of some little excitement. She left Victoria on the 13th of last month for Metlahkahtla, with Dr. Powell, Indian Commissioner, and Mr. McKay, the newly-appointed agent, on board, and reached her destination on the 22nd. Here the visitors met with a cold reception, being entertained by a heavy snowstorm, with the thermometer 21° below freezing point. So far as could be learnt, the dispute between the Indians of Bishop Ridley and Mr. Duncan still remained in the same unsettled state. The Indians of Mr. Duncan's party turned out armed on the arrival of the Heroine, and remained in the bush until 2 a.m., under the impression that she had come to 'razee' the village; but finding that her errand was one of peace, they soon came off in numbers to do a brisk business in venison, wild fowl, skins, &c. As it was evident matters could not be brought to a successful solution, it was determined the Heroine should sail on the 1st inst., but on account of a south-east gale setting in she was compelled to remain until the following day, Mr. McKay going to Fort Simpson and Dr. Powell returning with the vessel. The voyage, however, proved a very disagreeable one, from fogs, squalls, and general boisterous weather, until Cape Flattery Light was sighted, when the speed was increased to 11 knots, and the vessel finally anchored in Royal Roads. If the mission was not successful, it was at least respectably conducted, and we were not put to the humiliation of borrowing a gunboat from our obliging neighbours, and puzzling the Indians with the Stars and Stripes in British waters, as the late Government were. If a war-vessel is an essential precaution in connection with the spread of Evangelical faith among the Indians, it is to be hoped the missionary ship will always be a British one. The inhabitants here are strongly convinced of the necessity and great importance of keeping a ship stationed at Esquimalt, ready for any emergency that might arise with reference to the neighbouring and numerous tribes of Indians who live along the coast of British Columbia, and whose action may at any time call for immediate interference on our part."

Himalaya, Capt. Palliser, is bringing home the old crews of the Superb and Iris from Malta. The discipline on board this ship is remarkably good, we hear. The Malta Times of Dec. 22 says on this subject:—"The British Navy, as usual, is second to none. Yesterday morning, at 3 o'clock, about 500 officers and men belonging to the Superb and Iris, who had been taking passage in the Himalaya, and who were at that time quietly sleeping on board that ship, were roused by the sound of the bugle and by orderlies, and told to fall in at once to go to the Hibernia, the Himalaya having been suddenly by telegram told off for service. In an hour's time they were all ready. Does not this reflect credit on the dear old service and those belonging to it?"

Iris, Capt. Rice, was inspected on Dec. 20 by the Commander-in-Chief, preparatory to paying off. Was paid off on Dec. 22, and recommissioned.

Nelson, Comdre. Erskine, A.D.C., was at Hobart Town, Tasmania, on Christmas Day.

Northampton, Capt. Digby, flagship of Vice-Admira Sir John Commerell, V.C., was unable to pick up her moorings on arriving at Bermuda from Halifax, owing to the gale then blowing, and had to anchor for the night in Grassy Bay, and subsequently was driven ashore. A correspondent of the Hampshire Telegraph, writing from Bermuda on Dec. 4, gives the following account of the mishap:—"About 6 o'clock the next morning she was found to be dragging her anchors, and before assistance could reach her she was securely wedged on a coral reef, broadside-on to the wind and sea, and remained there all day. Owing to the weather, nothing could be done that day, but on Saturday, the weather having abated, the Canada, which was lying within the breakwater, was ordered to go outside and endeavour to tow her off. The attempt was made in the evening to lay out anchors, making a wire hawser fast to her, and steaming full speed ahead, but the Northampton was immovable. On Sunday morning it was repeated again without success. During the day, however, some of the Northampton's heavy weights were got out of her, and on Monday morning the Canada having again got into position—an excessively difficult matter, owing to the numerous rocks and shoals that existed all round—the attempt was again made. After the Canada had steamed full speed ahead for about half-an-hour, the Northampton glided into deep water." The amount of her damage was not known at the time the mails left, but the ship had been docked for examination, and a court-martial is to be held on the officers. The same letters state that H.M.S. Griffon grounded while entering the narrows, but she came off safely next tide, having sustained no damage beyond the stripping of a few sheets of copper. A court of inquiry was held, and the officers acquitted of blame, but the pilot was deprived of his certificate.

Opal, Capt. Brooke, has been detained at Ascension, owing to the ship's company having been prostrated by fever contracted during the late Niger Expedition. Capt. Brooke expects to be at the Cape by Jan. 24.

Royal Adelaide, Capt. Richard Carter, flag-ship of Admiral Sir Wm. Houston Stewart. A court-martial assembled on board this ship on Dec. 27, in Hamoaze, Devonport, for the trial of Walter William Dunn, 2nd-class signalman, for striking George Clark, corporal R.M.L.I., his superior officer. The court was composed as follows:—Capt. R. Carter, Royal Adelaide (president); Capt. G. S. Bosanquet, Cambridge; Com. McKechnie, Lion; Com. Castle, Cambridge; Com. Rainier, Impregnable, and Mr. H. H. Shanks, the deputy-judge-advocate. The circumstantial letter read showed that on a warrant for his committal to Cork Gaol for 42 days being read to him by Corporal Clark, the prisoner deliberately struck the corporal in the face with the back of his hand, saying, "Take that, you ——." At the time of the offence he was serving on board H.M.S. Orwell in Cork Harbour, but has since been transferred to the Royal Adelaide, and has also been in the hospital. Prisoner pleaded guilty, and handed in a written statement in migitation of the offence, in which he stated that on hearing the warrant of his committal to Cork Gaol read, he became excited, and struck the corporal, but had no ill-will or malice against him, previously or at the time. Up to within a short time of the offence prisoner had generally borne a fair character. The court, taking into consideration the fact of the prisoner pleading guilty, sentenced him to 18 calendar months' imprisonment with hard labour, and to be dismissed from her Majesty's service.

Serapis, Capt. A. E. Dupuis, arrived at Portsmouth last week from Bombay. During the voyage a first-class passenger, a Mrs. Hibgame, committed suicide by jumping overboard in the Arabian Sea. In crossing the Bay of Biscay a soldier also jumped overboard.

THE CRUISE OF THE 'FALCON:'

BY E. F. KNIGHT, BARRISTER-AT-LAW.

WITH MAPS AND NUMEROUS ILLUSTRATIONS.

From the SATURDAY REVIEW, December 29.

"It is a decided and most refreshing novelty to find a barrister-at-law telling how he took a yawl of 30 tons over 'many thousand miles of stormy water.' Very well, indeed, does Mr. Knight describe his sea voyages and his journey by land and river……So far as we know, it was an entirely new thing for an English yacht to attempt it, and peculiar interest therefore attaches to Mr. Knight's account of this wonderful inland voyage……That the cruise which thus ended was a remarkable one, and that he has described it admirably, will, we believe, be the impression of all who read his pages……The defects of his work are few and the merits many, and probably it will be generally admired as a record of adventurous travel by sea, land, and river, to which it would not be easy to find a parallel."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This medicine has resisted every test which time, prejudice, and invested interest could impose upon it, and it at length stands forth triumphant as the most reliable remedy for those derangements of the system so common at the change of seasons. As the air grows colder, the functions of the skin are retarded, requiring an occasional dose of Holloway's Pills to cause the liver and kidneys to freely act, thus compensating the system for diminished cutaneous action. As alteratives, aperients, and tonics, these Pills have no equal. To every aged and delicate person whose appetite is defective, digestion infirm, and tone of health low, this medicine will be a precious boon, conferring both ease and strength.

The Rev. A. PRITCHARD, M.A. (Oxon.), assisted by E. CARLISLE, M.A., late Foundation Scholar of St. John's College (19th Wrangler), and Seven other efficient Lecturers, PREPARES for Sandhurst, Woolwich, &c. Mr. Pritchard has had fifteen years' experience in tuition, and his pupils have been successful at all the recent Examinations, including 4th place, last Sandhurst; 2nd place, September Competition; and 3rd place, at October. All four candidates at the Woolwich Examination last month qualified, two placed 11th and 48th on list. Both these candidates failed last summer before joining Mr. Pritchard. Eight out of nine of the last Preliminary candidates sent up have been successful. "Hill Lands," standing in twelve acres has been specially built for the accommodation of Army Candidates.—Address, Rev. A. PRITCHARD, Wargrave, near Henley, Oxon. Nearest railway station, Twyford Junction, Great Western Railway.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

At the late Examination held on September 19 and 20, Major DE THOREN and Major MORGAN have fully maintained their former good repute for passing candidates. They sent up three and passed two,—
Mr. H. G. Morgan,
Mr. W. S. Carey.

At this establishment the classes are small, and the pupils receive a great deal of individual attention, which enables them the easier to grasp the subject.

Major DE THOREN has had great experience as a Military Instructor and also with Militia Officers.

Major MORGAN has passed the Staff College, and is the author of "Summary of Law" and "Summary of Tactics."

Apply to Major DE THOREN, Bellefield, Jersey.

Pupils received from nine years of age and upwards.

MILITARY EDUCATION, GERMANY.

—Colonel BERDOE WILKINSON, late R.E., formerly in charge of the Ordnance Survey in Ireland, and Lieutenant-Colonel WILKINSON SHAW, M.A. (Staff College), late Garrison-Instructor at Aldershot, prepare Candidates for Sandhurst and Woolwich, and for Line Commissions through the Militia.

At the five Militia Competitions which have taken place since September 1, 1881, Colonel WILKINSON and Lieutenant-Colonel SHAW have secured for their Pupils THIRTY-SEVEN COMMISSIONS, although they have only Prepared and sent up a very Limited Number of Candidates. A list of successful Pupils, showing the high places taken by them, will be furnished on application.

At the Militia Literary Examinations held during the same period, a Number of Pupils have also passed; in this Competition the FIRST PLACE was taken in April last by Lieutenant Lord Skelmersdale, and the SECOND PLACE in the recent October Examination by the only candidate sent up, Lieutenant the Honourable Victor A. Pelham.

The General Score for all Examinations now amounts to SEVENTY-ONE SUCCESSES achieved by Pupils during the last two years.

LIEUTENANTS of MILITIA desirous

of competing for Line Commissions can be received by the Rev. WALTER BAKER, M.A., at Batcombe Rectory, Evercreech, Bath. They will be thoroughly prepared in all Military Subjects by two Officers who for several years past have been engaged with distinguished success in this special work.

Great individual attention is secured, both Instructors are resident and give their whole time, very few Pupils are taken, and steady work is insisted on. Since the introduction of the Military Competitive, out of Forty-four Lieutenants of Militia sent up, Twenty-seven have been successful, several taking high places in the list.

A Large Staff of Experienced Tutors, all resident, assist in preparing for the Qualifying Examinations, and for the Sandhurst and Woolwich Competitions.

References to parents of pupils successful at all Examinations, INCLUDING SANDHURST and MILITIA COMPETITIVE in 1882 and 1883. All sent up for the last Militia Qualifying Examination passed.

MILITARY, HUNTING, SHOOTING, and FISHING BOOTMAKER, and SOLE MANUFACTURER OF THE MOUNTED SERVICE BOOT,

SIDE CLIP COLLARS, Registered.

COLLARS with Registered Band.

This improvement entirely obviates the difficulty of adjusting the Scarf with turn-down Collars. The Scarf can be put on and moved easily from side to side after Collar is buttoned.

Can be obtained of all Hosiers.

OROIDE GOLD JEWELLERY (REGD.)

"Recommends itself not alone to those of limited means, but to the wealthy, who, when frequenting large gatherings, whether at racecourses, theatres, public meetings, or even on that sacred thoroughfare, the king's highway, have known what it is to be robbed of their valuables."

OROIDE GOLD WATCHES,
Accurate timekeepers, 21s to 50s, safe and free per post (registered).
The "SERVICE" KEYLESS WATCH,
Open face, jewelled in eight holes, Two Guineas, post free.

"The watches of this patent are in no respect different from gold ones. The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose." OROIDE GOLD SCARF PINS, 2s 6d to 5s, post free.
LINKS and STUDS, Complete Suite, 5s 6d, 6s 6d.
ALBERT CHAINS, in all the Leading Fashions of fine Gold, 7s 6d and 10s 6d.
Safe and Free per Registered Post. Send for Illustrated Price Lists, post free. Cheques, London and Provincial Bank. P.O.O., Chief Office, London.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. CHLORODYNE.

From SYMES and Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Medical Hall, Simla, January 5, 1881. To J. T. DAVENPORT, Esq., 33 Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London.

Dear Sir,—We embrace this opportunity of congratulating you upon the wide-spread reputation this justly esteemed medicine, Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne, has earned for itself, not only in Hindostan, but all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported into the country, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES and Co., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a Liquid Medicine which assuages Pain of every kind, affords a calm, refreshing sleep without Headache, and invigorates the Nervous System when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff), discovered a remedy to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE.

The General Board of Health, London, report that it acts as a charm, one dose generally sufficient.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of COUGHS, ASTHMA, COLDS,
BRONCHITIS,
EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION, HYSTERIA, and is the true Palliative in
NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.
GREAT SPECIFIC for DIARRHŒA,
CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.
The immense sale of this remedy has given rise to many unscrupulous imitations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE.

DENTAL.—Mr. JOHN FAULKNER, L.D.S., has the pleasure to INFORM the CLIENTELE of the late G. WEAVER, L.D.S., of 41 Upper Baker Street, that he has SUCCEEDED to the above PRACTICE, and will carry on the same at the above address.

THE PARCELS POST and the DELIVERY of TEA.

THE PARCELS POST and the DISTRIBUTION of TEA to every place where there is a Post-Office in the United Kingdom.

THE PARCELS POST.—TEA of the highest excellence (as supplied to Dukes, Earls, Barons, and the County Families of England), sent free by Parcels Post in quantities of 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb., to any postal address in the United Kingdom, on receipt of a remittance for the price of the Tea and 3d.

THUS 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be sent to any address free, by post, on receipt of 8s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Half-Crown Tea can be sent free of post on receipt of 15s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea can be sent free of post on receipt of 15s 3d.

THE POSTAL LIMIT of 7 lb. will only really cover 6 lb. of Tea, as the weight of paper and twine has to be deducted, so that COOPER COOPER and CO. will send 6 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea free of post for 18s 3d, or 6 lb. of Two-and-Sixpenny Tea free of post for 15s 3d, or 6 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea free of post for 12s 3d.

PACKAGES containing 12 lb., 20 lb., 60 lb., or 100 lb. of TEA will be sent to any railway station in the United Kingdom absolutely free of carriage on receipt of remittance for the value of the Tea.

THE PARCELS POST.—4 lb., 5 lb., or 6 lb. of TEA will be delivered free of charge at your own houses by the postman, for 3d in addition to the cost of the tea.

THUS 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA will be delivered free at your own house for a remittance of 8s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea will be delivered free at your own door for a Post-Office Order for 10s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea will be sent free to your own homes for a cheque for 12s 3d.

THE PARCELS POST.—4 lb., 5 lb., or 6 lb. of THREE-SHILLING TEA despatched to any part of England, Wales, Scotland, or Ireland, by post for 3d in addition to the price of the Tea.

THUS 4 lb. of THREE-SHILLING TEA can be sent to the remotest address on receipt of remittance for 12s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea will be forwarded to any place where letters are delivered, postage paid, for 15s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea will be sent to any address in any postal district in these islands for 18s 3d.

TEAS of all descriptions on COOPER COOPER and CO.'S LIST, posted in parcels containing 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb. each by parcels post to any part of England, Wales, Ireland, or Scotland, in exchange for cash (in registered envelope). Post-Office Orders, cheques, postal orders, or stamps for the value of the tea, and 3d extra.

FOR example, a Package containing 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be sent to any place in the United Kingdom in exchange for 8s 3d in cash, enclosed in a registered envelope, and addressed to any of COOPER COOPER and CO.'S establishments in London.

OR, a Parcel containing 6 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be delivered by parcels post, carriage free, by remitting a Post-Office Order for 12s 3d.

OR, 5 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA will be despatched, free of post, for a postal order for 10s, and three penny postage stamps.

THUS, in the same manner, THREE-SHILLING TEA in parcels to the value of 12s 3d, 15s 3d, and 18s 3d each, containing respectively 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb. of tea, will be sent on receipt of postal orders, cheques, or cash for the several amounts.

CO-OPERATION.—COOPER COOPER and CO. also invite attention to the new System of Co-operation in the purchase of Tea by persons living in the country through the medium of the Parcels Post.

CO-OPERATION.—Thus, as COOPER COOPER and CO. are enabled to send packages containing 6 lb. of any of the Choice TEAS on their List to any place in the United Kingdom for 3d, it follows that if six families in a village are willing to club together, each can have a pound of tea sent for one halfpenny.

CO-OPERATION.—Or, as two parcels containing 6 lb. each can be sent for 6d, six families would be enabled, by joining together in one remittance, to order 2 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA each, at a cost of one penny only, in addition to the price of the tea.

CO-OPERATION.—This system will apply to every kind of TEA offered for Sale by COOPER COOPER and CO., and if followed out will practically enable them to place before customers in every county town and village in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, in the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man, in the Hebrides, and the Orkneys, Tea of the same choice kinds as sold in their various Establishments in London, at the same prices, with the addition of the nominal sum of one halfpenny a pound.

COMMISSARIAT AND TRANSPORT CORPS—WINCHESTER HOUSE, ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

THE HEALTH OF THE NAVY.

The Report of Sir John Watt Reid, K.C.B., Director-General of the Medical Department of the Navy, for 1882, was issued on New Year's Day. From this report we find that the returns show a slight increase of sickness over those of 1881, the ratio of cases entered in the sick-list being 6·45 per 1,000 more than in that year. There is an increase in the invaliding ratio, which is 45·03 per 1,000, against 31·26 per 1,000 in the preceding year. The total death-rate is 9·49 per 1,000, compared with 10·94 per 1,000 in 1881, but the death-rate for disease alone exceeds that of the previous year by 1·60 per 1,000, being 6·87 per 1,000, as compared with 5·27. This compares very favourably with the death-rate of our large towns, which averages from 18 to 20 per 1,000. The invaliding and death-rates have, as a matter of course, been augmented by the results of the sickness and casualties consequent on the Egyptian war. On the home station there was more enteric fever than usual; this increase is mainly due to an outbreak of the disease in a virulent form in the Seaflower, training-brig. On the Mediterranean station the operations in Egypt influenced the returns to a considerable extent, the ratios of sickness, invaliding, and death being much larger than those of late years. It must, however, be pointed out that a part of the excess of sickness on this station was due to a serious epidemic of remittent fever among several ships of the squadron, that occurred early in the year, and was caused by local conditions at Malta. An epidemic of yellow-fever was encountered on the North America and West Indies station; it was entirely confined to Port Royal, Jamaica, and 36 cases of the disease, with seven deaths, were reported. On the East Indies station the sickness and invaliding from febrile diseases, and chiefly from remittent fever, were more than usual; most of the disease was contracted on the East Coast of Africa. Cholera was prevalent in several ports in China and Japan, but chiefly owing to the precautions observed, the Chinese squadron suffered from it only to the extent of four cases, with two deaths. In the returns of the irregular force are included the cases of sickness and wounds of the Marine battalion employed in Egypt during the war, and these have had an appreciable effect in increasing the invaliding and death-rates of the force. The total force in the service afloat in the year 1882 was 43,475 officers and men, of whom 23,220, or 53·41 per cent., were between the ages of 15 and 25; 14,740, or 33·9 per cent., were between the ages of 25 and 35; 4,675, or 10·75 per cent., were between the ages of 35 and 45; and 840, or 1·93 per cent., were above 45 years of age. The total number of cases of disease and injury entered on the sick-list was 49,929. The total number of deaths was 413, of which number 299 were due to disease, and 144 to injury.

Obituary.

Com. Edward Griffiths, R.N., died last week at Portsmouth, aged 91. Entering the service as a Naval cadet as far back as April 2, 1803, he served on board the Gladiator, flagship of Rear-Admiral Holloway, and was wrecked in the Magnificent off Brest, in 1804. In 1806, he took part in the capture of four Spanish armed brigs off Havannah, being wounded by a musket-ball passing through his right thigh. He was present in the Franchise at the taking of Copenhagen in the following year, and at the capture of Samana, St. Domingo, in 1808. He was mate of the Tonnant in all the operations in the Chesapeake and on the coast of America in 1813-14, including the attack on New Orleans, where he served on shore with the rocket brigade; he was also present at the capture of the fort on the left bank of the Mississippi. Subsequently, he gained the Crimean medal for his services in the Crimean War, and was awarded a Naval pension of £50 per annum, in 1866.

In consequence of the breakage of slight fittings and glass which occurred during the recent trials of the guns of the Agamemnon, the Admiralty have directed that to avoid such results in the future, on the firing trials of all turret-ships, care is to be taken that glass sashes are unshipped and stowed below, and for openings to be left in the deck and deck-houses.

The trials of the Dolphin, recently supplied to the Government by Messrs. Dixon and Co., of Middlesbrough, terminated on Jan. 1. It is stated that the engines fell short of the 750 horse-power fixed by the contract, and the Steam Reserve officials at Sheerness have therefore declined to accept the responsibility of passing them. The final decision rests with the Admiralty.

Throat Irritation and Cough.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the Glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d, tins, 1s 1½d, labelled "James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, Gordon Holmes, M.D., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

London Amusements.

Free from any unfavourable influences of fog, frost, and snow, the London theatres are doing generally an excellent business. At Drury Lane, twelve performances of the pantomime of "Cinderella" are being given during the week, a circumstance hitherto without precedent, and this example is to be followed at Her Majesty's Theatre. It will be thus seen that there is no sign yet apparent of the boys and girls home for the holidays caring less than formerly for the splendid spectacular illustrations presented on the stage of those familiar fairy tales which they have known by heart since the earliest days of childhood.

The last nights of "The Glass of Fashion" have been announced at the Globe Theatre, and Mr. Pinero's new comedy, entitled "In Low Water," will be produced next week.

Next Thursday will be brought out at Toole's Theatre Mr. Arthur Law's new and original three-act farcical comedy, called "A Mint of Money." Mr. J. L. Toole represents a proprietor of oil wells and is styled, Kerosine Tredgold. Mr. Burnand's travesty of the Princess's drama of "Claudian" will be produced soon afterwards. On Tuesday next, Mr. Toole and his company will appear, by special request, before the Prince and the Princess of Wales, at Sandringham, and the pleasant little theatre in King William Street will be consequently closed on that evening.

The Savoy Theatre was closed on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings, to allow night rehearsals to take place of the new opera in a prologue and two acts, written by Mr. W. S. Gilbert and composed by Sir Arthur Sullivan. The opera will be produced this (Saturday) evening, under the title of "Princess Ida, or Castle Adamant."

On the same night will be reopened the Novelty Theatre, Great Queen Street, Long Acre, when Miss Ada Cavendish will reappear in London, as Mercy Merrick, in the drama of "The New Magdalen."

The English Opera Company, under the management of Mr. T. H. Friend, will commence a short season at Covent Garden Theatre on Monday next, with Victor Nessler's romantic opera of "The Piper of Hamelin." The company includes Madame Blanche Cole, Madame Rose Hersee, Miss Julia Gaylord, Miss Lucy Franklein, Mr. J. W. Turner, Mr. Charles Lyall, Mr. F. C. Packhard, and Mr. Albert McGuckin. During the season will be represented Gounod's opera of "Irene," and an opera, called "Victorian," founded on Longfellow's "Spanish Student."

THE CHANNEL SQUADRON.

Gibraltar, December 28, 1883.

THE Squadron has at length reassembled, the six ships being together for the first time since we left Portland on Oct. 26. On Thursday, the 20th, while at Vigo, the news reached us by telegram of the grounding of H.M.S. Euphrates, near Tarifa, and the Sultan was at once ordered off to her assistance; the order to get up steam was given at 6 p.m., and at 10 she steamed out of harbour. She had rather a busy time preparing for sea, as the ship was moored with the swivel on, all boats were out, and, it being Thursday, a large number of men were on shore, on leave for the night. The next day the Minotaur, flying the Duke of Edinburgh's flag, and the Achilles, arrived about noon, and exchanged the customary salutes. The Admiral only stayed about two hours, and then, acting on further telegrams, proceeded on to Gibraltar. Fortunately, the Euphrates was got off with little damage, and before either the Minotaur or Sultan arrived on the scene had proceeded on her way to the eastward. The Sultan arrived off Tarifa at daylight on Sunday, and seeing nothing of the trooper came on here, secured alongside the Mole, and commenced coaling at once. The Minotaur arrived in the afternoon, and anchored off the end of the Mole; she could not go alongside, as an Austrian frigate, the Donau, was in her berth. The Donau had lost three anchors in the gale which raged here the week before, and had come alongside the Mole for security. She was supplied with another anchor from the dockyard, and the next morning she hauled off, and the Minotaur took her place, so that both she and the Sultan were comfortably alongside for Christmas. The rest of the Squadron arrived on Wednesday, the 26th, having had a fine passage down, and spent their Christmas quietly at sea. The Sultan hauled off to make room for them, and the Agincourt went alongside. The Northumberland, Achilles, and Neptune anchored off the end of the Mole. Yesterday and to-day the second division, Agincourt, Northumberland, and Achilles, were coaling, going alongside in succession, and mooring off the neutral ground at the finish. To-morrow the Sultan and Neptune are to go alongside, and remain there. During our stay at Vigo we had very bright and pleasant weather, with the exception of one or two days. During the first week the nights were particularly beautiful, as there was a full moon and a cloudless sky. The country about was looking very pretty, and the roads were in capital condition for walking. Very fair shooting was got in the neighbourhood; a good many snipe and a few woodcock and plover were picked up. We had the misfortune to lose two seamen by falls from aloft, one named John Jenkins, in the Agincourt, and the other George Ritty, in the Sultan. They were both buried in the Protestant cemetery on shore. Besides our usual routine drills and evolutions, we manned and armed boats, exercised out stream anchors and cables, and also exercised steam-pinnaces at tactics and, with torpedoes, at an attack on the Agincourt. Since our arrival at Gibraltar there has been a great deal of saluting and official visiting going on, as, in addition to our Admirals, Generals, and other officials, there are four foreign men-of-war here,—the Austrian frigate Donau, and Danish corvette Dagmar, which were here before we arrived, and two Germans, the Prinz Adalbert, which arrived yesterday, and the Stein, which came in this morning. From all accounts, it must have been exceedingly bad weather the week before we came in; the gale is described as the most severe that has been experienced here for years. The little fishing village in Catalan Bay was quite wrecked, and a large Norwegian barque, laden with timber, was stranded and broken up on the beach close by; several other smaller craft were driven on shore, and a great deal of damage was done to the shipping in the anchorage. Lady Adye held a reception at the Convent last night, to meet the Duke of Edinburgh, which was numerously attended; and several entertainments, dances, &c., are in prospect. The mails have been very irregular lately, owing to their being occasionally snowed up in the north; letters and papers are five, six, and sometimes seven days old. The Italy, transport, with Naval and Military drafts for the Mediterranean, including a new crew for the Condor and H.M.S. Humber, en route for the East Indies, with the new crew for the Dryad, passed through on the 24th, only staying for a few hours. The Hankow, transport, which is going to China, arrived on the 26th, and left next day. Since our change of Admirals, no alteration in the programme of our future movements, promulgated by Admiral Dowell, has been notified, so we presume it is to be adhered to. The Forward has just arrived. [Next week the Duke entertains the Governor, consuls, foreign officers, and captains of the Fleet at dinner on board his flagship. At the review of the troops held to-day, the Duke wore the uniform of honorary colonel of the Royal Marines, and was attended by Lieutenant-Colonel French, R.M.A.]

Last week an instructor serving on board the Vernon, torpedo school, was confined to the ship, in consequence of his having committed a series of petty thefts, and it was thought that his mind had become deranged from overwork, as he was a man who had always borne an exceptionally good character. On Thursday his mania appears to have increased, and he was heard to threaten to blow up the ship. It was then discovered that the firing key was missing, and search was made for the instructor, who was found locked in the water-closet. On the door being forced open he was observed to throw the missing key overboard, and he was then placed under arrest. It appears also that during the morning he went to the chemical-room, where he attempted to commit suicide. He has been conveyed to Haslar Hospital.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL is universally in high repute for its unprecedented success during the last eighty years, in promoting the growth, restoring, improving, and beautifying the human hair. It may now also be had in a golden colour, and is especially suited for fair-haired children. Ask anywhere for Rowland's Macassar Oil, and avoid spurious imitations. Sizes 3s 6d, 7s, 10s 6d, and 21s; sent by post for 3d above these prices to A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20 Hatton Garden, London.

THE ROYAL CORPS OF NAVAL CONSTRUCTORS.

On Saturday last the following communication from Mr. N. Barnaby, C.B., Director of Naval Construction at the Admiralty, was received at Devonport Dockyard :—" The Director of Naval Construction, in addressing for the first time the members of the Royal Corps of Naval Constructors desires to congratulate them upon their incorporation under such favourable auspices. The Committee recommending the incorporation included three men of great distinction in different ways, all capable of judging clearly and distinctly from their different points of view on the merits of the case submitted to them. Admiral Sir Geoffrey Hornby yields to no one in intimate knowledge of the capabilities of the existing Navy of England and of its real needs. Sir Thomas Brassey has a wider knowledge and has shown a more patriotic interest in the welfare of the British Navy, than any person not connected with it that we have ever heard of in our or in past times. Mr. George Rendel, from the time when he designed the Staunch class of gunboat, has had an intimate acquaintance with our works, and has connected himself with their greatest advancement and improvement by his mechanical genius, of which all our latest ships bear the impress. The Board of Admiralty, which has adopted the recommendations of the Committee, includes the names of sailors of the greatest distinction, and is presided over by a man who has known the Navy from his boyhood, and has twice assisted in its government, first as Mr. Baring, and now as Lord Northbrook. That incorporation should have taken place under the reign of her Majesty Queen Victoria, and by her gracious permission, is an honour which will be remembered during the future history of the corps as that to be most highly prized. Those of us who are privileged to form its first members will never forget that we owe to Admiral Sir W. Houston Stewart the practical recommendations which form the basis of the scheme of the committee; nor shall we forget Dr. T. A. Hirst, the late Director of Studies at the Royal Naval College, and Mr. W. H. White, who was its distinguished teacher in naval architecture, the immediate scientific advisers of Sir Houston Stewart in the initiation of his proposals. In future years, the Director of Naval Construction and his successors in his high office will have the opportunity of reviewing the works with which the Corps may have been occupied. This year, the present head of the Corps contents himself with calling attention to the words with which the committee have been pleased to close their report. They say, speaking of the shipbuilding and engineer officers, 'We cannot conclude this report without bearing testimony to the ability and energy displayed by the professional officers in the discharge of their difficult and onerous duties. We have been most favourably impressed with their high sense of public duty, and their constant efforts to promote the efficiency of the Navy.' Relying confidently upon all the members of the Corps to continue to merit this encomium, for the sake of the noble country we have the honour to serve, the Director of Naval Construction wishes them all a happy new year."

The Ariel, tender to the Repulse; the Elk, tender to the Lord Warden; and the Seamew, tender to the Penelope, have been undergoing their annual refit at Sheerness. The Ariel has been completed. The Elk was completed on Jan. 4, and the Seamew will be completed on Jan. 19.

Nearly one-half of the men employed in Sheerness Dockyard are now working overtime, seven hours per week, in order to complete the Turquoise, screw corvette, and the Ready, composite gun-vessel, by the end of the financial year. To meet the extra outlay, the Admiralty have granted an additional £3,000.

NAVAL NOTES.

Further experiments with steel deck-plates have taken place at Eastney. The targets in this instance consisted of five 2-in. armour-plates, strongly set in a wooden frame, and placed at a slight angle to the line of fire. They were attacked with the 9-in. muzzle-loader, with uniform battering charges, each plate receiving a couple of rounds. Considering the severe test to which they were subjected at a range of about 100 yards, the targets withstood the ordeal remarkably well. One plate only succumbed to the attack, the damage being inflicted apparently by the blow of the butt-end of the projectile as the point glanced off. Two of the plates were not perforated, the graze of the shot where it struck and glanced off to sea being only marked by a well-defined bulge. The result of the experiments demonstrates the advantage which is likely to attend the peculiar contour which has been given to the under-water deck of the Imperieuse.

Officials of the Ordnance Department of the dockyard were busy during the past week at Plymouth, placing on board the various ships being brought forward for commission and held in readiness for the pendant, the machine-guns which arrived a few days since in the War-Office steamer Stanley. On board the Agamemnon, at Keyham, four Gardners were placed, whilst the Hyacinth, composite corvette, was furnished with two Gardners and two Nordenfelts; the Express, composite gunboat, with two Gardners; and the Hecate, turret-ship, with two Gardners and two Nordenfelts. The Prince Albert, iron armour-plated turret-ship, in basin at Keyham, also received two Gardners and four Nordenfelts. Of the vessels at the dockyard and in the stream, the Rapid and Royalist, composite corvettes, and the Pelican, sloop, were each equipped with two Gardners and two Nordenfelts, whilst the Hotspur, turret-ram, was supplied with two Gardners and six Nordenfelts, and the Conquest, corvette, with two Gardners and four Nordenfelts. On board the turret-ships the guns were placed in suitable positions on the superstructure, whilst on board the vessels of the corvette and sloop classes the Gardners were fixed in the topmasts and the Nordenfelts on the poop and forecastle. The Agamemnon, in addition, will during the week be supplied with ten Nordenfelt guns, which are at present lying at the Gunwharf. The breech-loading guns forming the remainder of the armament of the Pelican are expected almost daily, and on their arrival the vessel will be speedily completed for commission.

The state of the Navy is at last beginning to excite attention among politicians of both the great parties. The question is being discussed in the political clubs. Many yarns are being spun. One is worth repeating. An ex-Conservative First Lord was asked by a personal friend for his real, candid opinion as to the condition of the Navy, and answered, "Bad as bad can be." His friend then asked him why, if such were his belief, he did not rise in the House and speak frankly and fearlessly. "Because," answered the politician, "our Party could not stand it, any more than our opponents dare face the increased taxation such a course would necessitate." Aghast at such an answer, my friend exclaimed, "But surely you are endangering the safety of the Empire by not speaking out!" To which the politician and ex-Cabinet Minister replied that both sides regarded the subject from the same point of view, namely, that to advocate increased expenditure meant shutting that party out of office which had the temerity to propose even a penny in the Income-tax for the purpose. Thus office, and not England, seems to be the objective of our statesmen. Ought the nation to tolerate such a state of things a moment longer?—Hampshire Telegraph.

The Warspite, sister ship to the Impérieuse, will, in a few days, be floated out of dock at Chatham in the same fashion as was her consort at Portsmouth. These vessels take the rank of armoured cruisers, and present the most advanced type of their class. Their capacity for coal will enable them to keep at sea for a prolonged period, in addition to the navigating power conferred by a liberal amount of canvas, carried with a brig rig. The armour will be 10 in. thick; the armament will include four 18-ton guns; and the speed of the ship is expected to reach 16 knots. The four large guns will be mounted in as many barbettes—that is to say, each gun will revolve on a turntable inside a circular space bounded by a low armoured wall, over which the gun will fire. Turrets—that is to say, complete towers with portholes—are no longer in favour at the Admiralty. These towers must necessarily revolve, carrying their guns with them, and are very cumbrous contrivances, involving a risk of derangement in the mechanism by which they are moved. They afford very complete protection; but this is apparently less cared for now than in the early days of shell guns. Compound armour, an under-water steel deck, and watertight compartments, enter into the defensive elements of the Impérieuse and Warspite, according to the principles which now govern the construction of most armourclads, whether for our own or foreign Governments. Compared with the Inflexible, these vessels are rather more than one-third smaller, and considerably less than half the price. The weight of their guns is, of course, far less than that of the monsters carried by the larger ship. But although 18 tons fall far behind 80 tons, yet the smaller guns are much more powerful in proportion to their weight, being of later production and improved style. We have now breech-loaders instead of muzzle-loaders, and the guns are vastly increased in length, the 18-ton breech-loaders being seven yards long, the ponderous weapons of the Inflexible only exceeding them by two yards.

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—Imperfectly adapted Spectacles are the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Mr. H. SIR EDWARD SULLIVAN addressed a letter to the Morning Post on Tuesday, on the well-worn subject of the State of the Army. Sir Edward Sullivan is always a doughty champion, and in the present instance he may be said fairly to have out-Heroded Herod. There is an earnestness and sincerity in his language which cannot fail to have its effect in creating a feeling of misapprehension, even among those who are not sceptically inclined. As Sir Edward Sullivan says very truly, the condition of the Army would be ridiculous, were it not actually dangerous. Perhaps the strongest possible proof of the soundness of Sir Edward Sullivan's arguments is to be found in the letter of "An Old General," which appeared in the Morning Post of Wednesday. "An Old General" wrote with the view of refuting Sir Edward's assertion that the Army has been ruined by civil control. Almost in a panic at the continued Cassandra-like wails, "An Old General" has, he tells us, laid a synopsis of the arguments against the policy of the reformers before "the really best-informed authorities on the subject." And, in the interests alike of the reformers and the Army, he publishes their reply. We have read some weak defences; it would be difficult to find one weaker than this. It is intended as a justification of the War Office policy, but whoever "the best-informed authorities" may be who have drawn it up, our advice to them is,—do not try your hands at the same thing again. We can scarcely imagine that it will fulfil the purpose which "An Old General" supposes, for a more clumsily constructed and misleading effusion never was penned. To take the statements in this wonderful production seriatim; we are told, to begin with, that "it is very sad to think that many old officers should be dissatisfied with their position and prospects in the Army." It is, of course, very sad; but is it to be wondered at, considering the treatment to which the majority of "old officers" have been subjected during the last ten years? What chance has there been for the general body of officers since the campaign against a certain sable monarch closed with such a brilliant flourish of trumpets in 1874? Indignity after indignity has been heaped on those who have dissented from the views of a small clique. It is only natural that there should be dissatisfaction when the loaves and fishes of the service have been all but monopolised by a favoured few, who have revolved as satellites round one great luminary. Dissatisfaction is the inevitable result of favouritism in all spheres of life, and it must be looked for in the Army as elsewhere. "The loyalty and good-feeling of the regimental officers as a body is such that one need not take a gloomy view of affairs on that point." But some do take a very gloomy view. It is not long since an officer of high standing expressed himself in terms of anything but admiration with regard to the zeal and capacity of regimental officers generally. And has not the inspired organ of the reformers suggested a recourse to selection for all regimental commands, in order to overcome the evils attendant on a system which places "drones and dullards" in charge of battalions? "The Army of to-day is, in one respect, a far more efficient military machine for the use of England than it was before the Crimean War." On this point there is a diversity of opinion. In some respects, we have undoubtedly made progress. But what progress have we made during the last thirteen years? The Crimean War was fought thirty years ago. To tell us that the Army is more efficient now than it was thirty years back, is very much like telling people that "Queen Anne is dead." Of course, it is more efficient in the matter of arms and equipment. It would be a sad thing if it were not, considering the large sums of money it has cost, and the strenuous endeavours that have been made to render it so. In many ways the Army before the Crimean War was, however, greatly superior to the reformed Army of to-day. In size, strength, and endurance, the two will not bear comparison; but from the rust of a very long peace, the Army in 1854-55 was inexperienced and unready for the many exigencies of campaigning. In claiming for our young soldiers that they are as good as those who fought before Sebastopol, the claim is only a moderate one, and yet it cannot for a moment be admitted. "The officers come from the same class as formerly, and they are far better educated, both as gentlemen and soldiers, than they were then, and there is abroad amongst the young officers a longing desire to learn the art and science of their noble profession; they are most keen for war, and have a far higher military feeling and instinct than was felt by the great mass of our officers thirty years ago." We have not a word to utter against the present race of officers. They are Englishmen, and they will always do their duty when called upon; but it is ungenerous, to say the least of it, to condemn those who won our battles in the days of old. Whether they were better educated or not than those whose services we now secure, they were never found wanting when rough work had to be done, or hardships and privation to be borne. They led their men to victory on almost every occasion when they faced an enemy, and were as "keen for war" as any are now. We wish we could say of the present generation of "scientific soldiers" that they too have always led their men to victory; but, unfortunately, we cannot altogether obliterate the remembrance of Laing's Nek and Amajuba, though it would suit the reformers, perhaps, to do so. There may not have been amongst the purchase officers "a longing desire to learn the art and science of their noble profession," but it should not be forgotten that prior to 1870 nobody ever thought of making soldiers bookworms. It was the Germans who compelled us to regard warfare as a science; and it was a result of the experience gained in the campaign of 1870-71 that young officers were encouraged to display "a longing desire to learn the art and science of their noble profession." The reformers cannot take credit to themselves for this; the "higher education" has simply come in the ordinary course of things, and there are no grounds for supposing that, had Purchase never been interfered with, regimental officers would have been less ready to study the "art and science of their noble profession" than they are now. "As regards the men, they are exactly the same stuff as we have always enlisted." What! have the spread of education, the charms of short service, the fascination of Territorialism, the abolition of valued distinctions, the jumbling of Line and Militia into "one harmonious whole," the granting of deferred pay, and all the other innovations caused no improvement in the quality of our recruits? "Long service broke down because we could not obtain the numbers under it to keep our ranks full." And for the same reason short service surely broke down too, else why the return to long service? "Those are wrong who say we cannot get enough men." Are they? Then how comes it that there is not a battalion on home service recruited up to its full strength; that the establishment of the Royal Artillery is to be reduced by 2,000, in order to hide the difficulty of obtaining men; and that bounties are offered to induce time-expired men to re-engage in India? "Far from short service having broken down, and of our intending to hark back from it, our most recent steps have been to develop it still more, by enlisting men for the Guards for three years' service with the colours and nine years in Reserve, and this measure has refilled the Guards' ranks." Short service, that is, unmixed short service, has unquestionably broken down. There is, of course, no intention to "hark back" to long service, because that unavoidable and radical change has already been made. Taking men for the Guards for three years was an almost desperate resource, adopted when the Brigade was about 1,000 under its establishment. Had it failed, there would have been nothing for it but for the standard to have been reduced another inch or two!—

> "We have now done all those really interested in the inauguration of short service wished to do at the time, namely, to make the contract between the soldier and the State as pliable, and on the part of the man, as voluntary as possible, by allowing him to enlist for any period he wished, and to go on to serve towards pension, if he desired to do so. At first this was objected to on financial grounds, because some believed the idea that was propounded by the old school of officers, that the men would all go on to serve for a pension. Experience has now shown this to be imaginary. We have great difficulty in getting any men to serve towards pension, so the man can now make his own selection, and serve for a short or a long period, as it may best suit his 'book.'"

The above passage is about as nice a specimen of pliable and inaccurate writing as we have seen for some time. The Adjutant-General could have told "the best informed authorities" that already 6,700 men serving in India have extended their periods of service. But why were all these concessions made? Only, because men could not be got. It is all very well to induce an ignorant public to think that these benefits were conferred on the soldiers in the soldiers' interest. The Army knows only too well that softness of heart is not a characteristic of officials, and civilian War Ministers are far too intent upon saving money to sanction expenditure from feelings of pure generosity. Thomas Atkins of to-day may be—indeed, he is—much more pampered than were those who filled the ranks in ante-Crimean days. Suppose, however, that the Army was treated as it was treated then, would the same readiness be displayed on the part of the recruit-giving classes to enter the service? "The best informed authorities" then go into figures to show what an inestimable benefit short service has been:—"On January 1, 1883, there were 705 out of every 1,000 soldiers in our Army between 20 and 30 years of age, 206 men per 1,000 over 30 years, and only 89 per 1,000 under 20; 588 men per 1,000 were over 5 ft. 7 in. in height, and 838 men per 1,000 over 35 in. round the chest; 780 per 1,000 men over two years' service. No other Army in the world presents such a favourable condition of affairs." So much for official statistics. Now for some unpalatable facts. These are furnished by an "M.P." in the Morning Post of Thursday. "M.P." says:—

> "I have before me the actual numbers of men borne on the rolls of 10 battalions quartered at Dover, Portsmouth, and the Curragh on the 1st inst. The aggregate deficiency below their establishments in these 10 battalions is 1,221 rank and file, or an average of 122 men (more than one-fifth of their proper strength) short in each battalion. One battalion has a deficiency of 175 out of its fixed establishment of 520 rank and file. The average height of another battalion at one of the same stations, with its establishment now complete, and not included in the above 10, is 5 ft. 4½ in., and on October 1 last this same battalion had only 12 privates effective for guards and general duties. It has since been recruited to its full establishment, but will shortly have to send to its foreign battalion a draft of 200 men, which will again reduce its effective strength to zero, without even the effect of raising its foreign battalion to its full strength, of which it is now 300 short. Another of the 10 battalions above-mentioned was, on October 1 last, 251 men short, or a fraction under half its establishment, and it is still 168, or almost one-third, short."

These figures are absolutely irreconcilable with those of "the best informed authorities," and unless they can be plainly disproved, they are clear evidence of the complete collapse of our Military Humpty-Dumpty. The letter of "An Old General" winds up as follows :—

> "Now, Sir, is it conceivable that authorities who have built up for themselves reputations with the public which render them independent of any party, would risk their reputations by deliberately misleading the nation? And may not a good many of the statements regarding boy soldiers and attenuated battalions, &c., be the nightmares of brilliant intellects, slightly disordered upon this one point, and that a point upon which their really reliable information must be very scanty?"

These, we presume, are the words of "An Old General" himself. We would point out that the argument will cut two ways. There are none more jealous of their reputations, as a rule, than those who know that their reputations are at stake. The reputations of the reformers are at stake now. The public, in their ignorance, suppose that the Army has greatly benefited by the changes of the last thirteen years. These changes have been introduced at enormous cost, in order to meet the wishes of War Ministers, and have been carried out by a clique who, it is to be feared, preferred self-aggrandisement to the interests of the service. Scarcely a change has proved to be a change for the better. What more likely, therefore, than that those who see the risk they are running will try and save themselves from the consequences of their folly? The statements regarding boy soldiers and attenuated battalions may be nightmares? But are they? Who are the best judges? Regimental officers, clearly. And what say regimental officers? Let "An Old General" go down to Aldershot and ascertain for himself. After reading this synopsis of "the best informed authorities," the reformers, we expect, will feel very much disposed to say, "Save us from our friends!" Anything more damaging to their interests it would be impossible to conceive, and whoever the authors of it may be, they must be playing the part of enemies in the camp, for a lamer and more thoroughly condemnatory manifesto never was penned. Though professedly a defence, it is actually one of the most scathing criticisms we have yet met with on the Military policy of the last thirteen years. Another such manifesto is about all that is wanted to blow the bubble, and bring the whole edifice to the ground.

THE year 1883 was, in as far as our Navy is concerned, scant of promise and barren of performance. The Niger Expedition, admirably planned and successfully carried out by Captain Brooke, of the Opal, and the intrepid, manly conduct of Captain Johnstone, of the Dryad, in supporting British interests in Madagascar in the teeth of the insults heaped upon our flag by the French Admiral Pierre, his subordinates, and successor, are the only redeeming points. In the early days of 1883, Lord Alcester took his seat at the Board of Admiralty. His lordship's well-known ability, the confidence reposed in him by the Government, by the country, and above all, by the Navy, and the signal and exceptional opportunity he had enjoyed for studying the true condition of our Fleet, both as regards its matériel and its personnel, had led to great expectations being formed of the policy he would initiate for the reorganisation of the service. Seldom, however, has a great opportunity been more woefully neglected. From whatever motive, Lord Alcester has contented himself with framing an elaborate apology for the Admiralty policy of inaction, and the reasons which led him to bombard Alexandria. The Navy has continued to be administered by preconceived theories, instead of facts. The theory that "Britannia Rules the Waves" has been preached by every Member of the Admiralty, even by Sir Thomas Brassey, whose admirable work on the Navy most conclusively proves the contrary to be the case. Nevertheless, facts have been squared to theories, not theories to facts. The French have continued strengthening their Navy by "leaps and bounds," while our Fleet has actually retrograded since 1879, and we have now thirteen ships less in commission than we had then. Indeed, the year 1883 is not one upon which the administrators of the Navy have any cause to look back with satisfaction. In Newfoundland, on the West Coast of Africa, in Madagascar, and in China, the inferiority of our ships to those of France has been brought out in prominent relief. As Lord Charles Beresford has pointed out, we have not a single machine shell gun. In numbers, size, speed, and gun power, we have been everywhere out-matched. These facts have been repeatedly brought before the public, but as often have they been contradicted by those whose business it seems to be to endeavour to retain their party in power rather than frankly acknowledge the truth, and, by so doing, risk losing the positions they hold, should a reversal of public opinion follow on the truth becoming known. To expect such self-denial in politicians of the nineteenth centruy is perhaps absurd. An ex-Cabinet Minister and First Lord of the Admiralty has not been ashamed to admit that, in his public utterances, he studied his party's interests before those of the country. But we speak as Englishmen, and not as politicians. In England "we live, and move, and have our being," and not in France, nor in any other foreign country. Yet it seems to be one of the articles of faith of the Government to prefer all foreign countries to their own; or, are they influenced by an exaggerated fear of offending French susceptibilities? Our interests as a maritime, a colonial, and a commercial Power necessitate our maintaining a Navy strong enough in itself to "keep the seas and sweep the seas," whatever hostile coalition our ships may have to face. Is our Navy in a proper state and condition at this moment to undertake such a task? Most assuredly not. Yet the whole of our Naval policy is based on a desire to reduce the estimates, so as to enable the Chancellor of the Exchequer to pose before the taxpayers, at the end of each financial year, as the proud possessor of a glorious surplus. Some day the country may have to repent having allowed itself to be thus deceived. Far better would it be were the money, scraped together by starving the defensive forces of the country, spent on their proper armament. For two long years has the Bellerophon been fitting out as a sea-going gunnery ship. During the third year it has dawned upon the Admiralty that, at the present rate at which breech-loading ordnance is being supplied to the Navy, the Bellerophon would have to wait over two more years before she could possibly receive her new guns! So the sea-going gunnery-ship scheme is dropped forthwith, and the ship is to be got ready for sea with her old muzzle-loading guns on board. Is this the way in which the affairs of the Navy of England should be administered? We think not, and are supported in this opinion by many able and experienced officers and statesmen. In a most able letter to the Morning Post, Sir Edward Sullivan, this week, calls attention to the utter incapacity of the Navy to defend the country in case of need. On this subject Sir Edward most justly remarks that :—

> "No nation has ever existed in the whole world to which the efficiency of its Navy was of such vital importance as to Great Britain. During the last thirty years this dependence on our Navy has increased immensely—increased far more than most of us realise. It has increased exactly in proportion as our dependence on foreign nations for food has increased. Formerly the temporary loss of the command of the seas meant loss of wealth, loss of prestige, loss of honour, perhaps! Now it means loss of food! Following the teachings of the False Prophet, of Free-trade, we have blindly, madly, allowed our home supply of food to diminish till our dependence on foreign supplies for food has become absolute. . . . . . But, indeed, the very food we require might be in the hands of our enemies. We might be at war with France, or Russia, or America. Of what use, pray, would be our fortresses and defences, even of the 'silver thread,' if in case of war we were to be victualled by our enemies? There is no secret in this. All the world knows it, all the world talks of it, all nations take it into their calculations, every nation knows that if England goes to war with any maritime Power—with any first-class Power, in fact—food will at once reach famine prices. She will have to fight not for victory, but for food. France knows this and is openly acting on it. She makes no secret of her objects. All the world knows it. Why is she building an enormous fleet, adding to it every year? Not to fight the German. The dog and the fish don't fight. Not to fight Italy, or Spain, or America. No! In increasing her fleet she has but one object, and that is to be as strong, or stronger, on the seas than England. Once that is accomplished, England and her colonial empire are at her mercy. I know there are many persons in this country to whom such considerations go for nothing, who would welcome any cause that prevented England embarking in war; who see nothing noble, nothing to be proud of, in the empire of Great Britain; who, on the contrary, look upon it as an unclean thing, acquired by fraud and force, to be put aside at the earliest opportunity. These superfine cosmopolitans think that in these views they represent the feelings of the 'people;' but they do not, they never were more mistaken. . . . . . The British Navy must be strong, very strong; stronger than it has ever been before. It is the one condition of our national existence. If it is not at all times, and in all seasons, and in all places, able to keep the seas against all comers, we are not safe from disgrace and calamity. Well, what is its present condition? Amidst such contradictory statements as we have heard during the last twelve months, it is hard to say. It may be strong; but when we find that the French are stronger than we are in ships and guns at Madagascar, and again, stronger than we are in ships and guns in the China seas; when we look at the immense increase of their fleet at home; of the ships they have built, and the ships they are building, it would appear that, if we are not already outnumbered, we soon shall be; and then will come the tug of war."

What is our strength? The Admiralty have so far been unable even to make preparations to relieve five ships whose period of foreign service expired last year. Reliefs will also have to be provided for twenty-five ships this year, eleven completing their time by March next. The Admiralty, however, have neither the men nor the ships to respond to these requirements of the service. Money can be spent in paying high prices for private yachts, purchased into the service to accommodate private friends; and these yachts, like the Harrier, the Undine, and the Commander-in-Chief's yacht at Portsmouth, can be detailed to perform work for which they are utterly unsuited. Hideous, misshapen monsters like the Polyphemus can be constructed at a cost exceeding half a million of money. Nothing, however, is said about such expenditure, even though it has prevented many serviceable ships being built, and made the Admiralty curtail the number of ships now in commission by thirteen. Still, the Admiralty, secure in their supreme power, which no one but Parliament can call in question, laugh to scorn all idea of control, refuse sound advice when tendered, and continue in their despotic, autocratic career, well knowing that the Department need have no fear of being called to account, so long as the Ministry has a majority at its back in the House of Commons. Expediency is the only policy known at the Admiralty. Of foreign policy they have none. The Mobilisation Scheme, which we have for so many years advocated, has not yet been created. Our ships are built anyhow, there being no programme, as in France, aiming at the construction of a certain number of useful ships within a given time. All the Admiralty do is to adhere to the economical views enunciated by Mr. Childers, when First Lord, who laid down the "golden rule" that 20,000 tons of shipping constructed annually would more than compensate for the waste of the Navy in ships through loss and deterioration. The Constructor's Department has been allowed to do the rest, that is to say, to spend the money voted to build this tonnage as they liked, and much of it has been wasted, in consequence, on experimental shipbuilding. Indeed, Lord Henry Lennox has proved that a most serious deficiency exists between the actual tonnage built, and that for which money has been voted by Parliament. The Admiralty, it is true, have tried to explain this away by means of an argument which, however, does not hold water. The fact remains that Parliament has voted the money, that it has been spent, and that the tonnage has not been built. Lord Alcester, as we have before remarked, had a splendid opportunity afforded him, when he joined the Admiralty, of setting things right. The public have, ever since, been anxiously waiting to hear the truth from his lips. He could, indeed, even now, save the reputation and credit of his colleagues, and his country perhaps from disaster, did he choose to do so, by simply acknowledging in public that, until Parliament will grant larger supplies, the Admiralty can do nothing. They cannot make bricks without straw. No one expects them to do so. Hence, they should publicly declare the fact that they want the straw, and not assert that they have enough when they have not enough, simply to support the policy of the Treasury. That is all Lord Alcester has done since taking his seat at the Board. It is, therefore, high time for independent Members of the House to be moving, and "moving quickly," too. What is wanted is a Royal Commission to inquire into the whole administration of the Navy, both as to its personnel and its matériel, commencing at the Admiralty itself, continuing its inquiry through the Dockyards, and ending with the Fleet. No doubt, the question will again be pressed this Session, when we sincerely hope that Lord Henry Lennox will not shirk dividing the House upon his motion.

THE year 1883 opened brightly for the Royal Marines. They had been, as it were, discovered by the people of England, and everyone was proud of them. Their achievements in Egypt and their services in Ireland brought them prominently to the front, and their claims for recognition, as a body, were strongly urged, not only by ourselves, but by the Press generally. At last the corps thought that they would receive justice from their countrymen, although they knew this justice could or would only be conceded by Parliament. In the spring Mr. Hopwood, Member for Oldham, ably brought their case before the House of Commons, pointing out in what an anomalous position the corps were placed, and the grievances under which they laboured. He ended by moving for a Select Committee. The motion was seconded by Viscount Lewisham, and well supported on both sides of the House, but was strongly opposed by Mr. W. H. Smith, the late First Lord of the Admiralty. Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, on behalf of the Admiralty, acknowledged that the corps had not been fairly treated, and promised that their grievances should have the careful attention of the Government, who would do all they could to rectify them. He concluded by begging Mr. Hopwood to withdraw his motion; it was, however, pressed to a division, and lost by a majority of only 39. As the debate on this motion took place on the same evening as the explosion at the Home Office, it did not receive the attention which it otherwise would have done from the non-professional Press. As a result of Mr. Campbell-Bannerman's promise, a Committee was ordered to assemble at the War Office, under the presidency of Sir Alfred Hayter, the Under-Secretary of State for War, Sir Francis Festing, R.M.A., representing the Royal Marines. This Committee was directed to report as to the feasibility of opening the Staff of the Army generally to Marine officers. This Committee had numerous sittings, and at last reported, the military element being against, and Sir Francis Festing for, the course suggested. No result has of course followed on such an abortive attempt, and as it was only a Departmental Committee, it is doubtful if we shall hear any more about it. At the latter end of 1882 the Royal Marines were honoured by the appointment of Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh as Honorary Colonel, not Colonel-in-Chief, as at first announced. On his appointment it was decided to invite him to a banquet in London. As his engagements would not allow him to fix a day until his return from the Continent, it was only in April, 1883, it took place, when 13 Generals and 250 officers were present at St. James's Hall. The only guests present were H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, and H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, Lord Northbrook representing the Admiralty. Want of room prevented the committee from inviting other guests whom they would have liked to have seen present on the occasion. It was generally thought in the corps that the 700 men reduced the year before would have been again added to the establishment, but on the publication of the Estimates the numbers were again 12,400, at which strength the Marines now stand. The 300 men detached for special duty in Ireland after the murder of Mr. Burke and Lord Frederick Cavendish, when Dublin was in a state of panic, having concluded their onerous and responsible duties in assisting the police in arresting and bringing to justice those concerned in the murder, and seeing them safely hanged, were gradually withdrawn. Lord Spencer, the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, paid these men a high compliment in a speech delivered at a dinner given to Lord Wolseley shortly after they had left. The compliment is the only reward the officers ever received for a service which must have been very distasteful to every-one employed in it. On the expiration of Major-General Sir Charles Adair's period of staff employment in September last, Major-General Williams was appointed to succeed him as Deputy-Adjutant-General. Sir Charles Adair was greatly regretted by the whole corps on his retirement into private life. He left the service in a high state of efficiency, and was always looked on as an able, just, and impartial officer. Sir Francis Festing, having completed his staff time, and two additional years' extension, was superseded by Colonel Walsh as Assistant-Adjutant-General; shortly afterwards, Sir Francis was promoted to be Second Commandant at Eastney. We hope the ensuing year will be a more satisfactory one for the corps, and that it may not always be with them a case of hope deferred. The new Deputy-Adjutant-General has had considerable experience of official work, and of the wants of the Royal Marines, as Assistant-Adjutant-General, and as Commandant of the Royal Marine Artillery, and he will, no doubt, point out to the Admiralty the grievances under which the corps labour, and how they may easily be rectified. We trust also the friends of the Royal Marines in the House of Commons, will not leave affairs as they now stand, but will see that the pledges given last Session are redeemed.

Her Majesty the Queen was most graciously pleased to receive Mrs. Rawson, widow of Commander Rawson, R.N., who fell while leading the troops at Tel-el-Kebir, at Osborne, on January 10, and to condole with her on the great loss she then sustained.

Colonel Burton, R.M.L.I. (of notoriety in connection with the celebrated Burton Court-martial) has, we hear, at last sent in his papers. He will be succeeded by Major and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Hore, of the Plymouth Division, Captain and Brevet Major Innes becoming Major. There will then only be left one supernumerary Captain, who will be absorbed by the retirement of Major Tom, of the Plymouth Division, which will take place on January 19; after which the subaltern officers will regain their right of promotion, the senior, Lieutenant Skipwith, having just been ten years and four months in that rank, so that he will thus be promoted considerably before the twelve years at which time subalterns are bound to be promoted, whether there are vacancies or not.

Fleet Surgeon Maxwell Rodgers, M.D., took up his appointment as Senior Medical Officer of the Plymouth Division of Royal Marines, on Tuesday last, having returned to England from the Mediterranean in her Majesty's troopship Himalaya.

The Polyphemus, that "hideous, misshapen monster," and monstrous failure, which has cost the country nearly half a million of money, is taking in new boilers under the sheers at Portsmouth. What a pity that four fast cruisers were not built with the money wasted on this long-foretold failure!

A court of inquiry having, on January 3, under the presidency of Captain Rowley, R.N., investigated the circumstances attending the grounding of the Serapis, off Portland, on her last homeward voyage, and reported to the Admiralty that at the time of the accident the weather was extremely foggy, and the ship proceeding at an unnecessarily high rate of speed, their Lordships have superseded both Captain Dupuis and Navigating Lieutenant Turner, appointing in their stead Captain A. L. Douglas to the command of the Serapis, and Staff Commander J. R. W. Quinn for navigating duties.

The Royal Marine Office is making provision for the better equipment and manning of a battalion of Royal Marines when ordered on foreign service, both as regards matériel as well as personnel, and especially as regards the clerical staff. The question of transport and Army signalling is also being considered, and likely to come into force before long. The Admiralty, we are informed, are not adverse to these improvements.

As the inquiry into the circumstances attending the grounding of the Euphrates off Tariffa, and the docking of that ship on her return from Bombay, will necessarily take some time, the Admiralty have directed the dockyard authorities at Portsmouth to have the Crocodile ready to take the place of the Euphrates by February 24. The electric fittings of the Crocodile have accordingly been at once placed in hand.

"Anent the present position of Egypt," writes a correspondent, "I wish the Government would send out a battalion or brigade of Royal Marines. I believe the last battalion did more good for the service generally than all the grumbling and agitation in Parliament. Marines do not care one iota when on active service whether they serve under the Navy or Army, as long as they have a share of the work to be done. Employ the officers of Marines, and you will soon see the discontent disappear. I have studied this point, and am thoroughly of opinion that therein lies the remedy. In the present case, send out a good brigade, sending them straight up to Assouan; give the Royal Marine Artillery machine-guns to handle,—the Navy will recognise the guns, if the Army will not. If the Navy will spare a small body of Blue-jackets, I would suggest their having the guns, the Royal Marine Artillery acting with the Infantry for the defence of the place, the whole force being supported by half-a-dozen gunboats. The Army might remain quietly at Cairo, and wait the result. In my opinion, this would save the country millions, perhaps a disaster."

The Admiralty are empowered by the Naval Votes to enlist 4,500 boys annually, half to serve in the Fleet and half in training-ships. There would, however, be no difficulty in yearly recruiting an additional 2,000 boys for the training-ships, all strong, healthy lads, in every way superior to the recruits now joining the Line. It stands to reason that such capital raw material could easily be moulded into excellent seamen; and at a time when the Admiralty find it so very difficult to procure men to man the Navy, we can only wonder that their Lordships do not avail themselves of the supply ready to their hand, which only requires training to be of the greatest value.

An officer, holding a high command in the Navy, writes to us as follows:—"I read with great pleasure your long and able leader on the state of the Navy, in last Saturday's issue of the Army and Navy Gazette; and though I think you are perhaps a little hard on the Admiralty, who are doing their best to make bricks without straw, still, your suggestion with regard to Lord Alcester speaking his mind should do good. That order with reference to the C.D. Act is scandalous. I only wish that some of the sentimental philanthropists could see the miserable wrecks of humanity I have lately had before me. They would then, probably, admit that their success is ruining the Navy." We have received numerous letters on the same subject.

The range for musketry practice on Staddon Heights for the troops stationed at Plymouth and Devonport has, with the exception of skirmishing and volley-firing, been hitherto used almost exclusively by the regiments of the Line, the Royal Marines having a separate range over broken ground on the lower level of Mount Batten. This has long been felt to be insufficient, and it has now been decided to extend the protecting wall on the heights so as to give two additional ranges for the use of the Royal Marines. The Royal Engineers are about to commence the work, so as to carry it on during the cessation of musketry practice in the winter months, and, if possible, complete it before the spring.

The proposed changes in the Generals' List of the Royal Marines, it is said, meets with approval, and is likely to come into effect.

After repeated failures, the engines of the Wanderer and Dolphin, two cruisers built by contract for the Navy, have been made to work so as to give "very successful results," and the representatives of the Admiralty have accepted delivery of these vessels from the contractors, Messrs. Dixon and Co., who do not apparently build many ships for the Government. Firms who do, seldom have any difficulty in making their machinery work smoothly, as they have learned by experience how to lubricate it to a nicety. A correspondent asks whether palm oil does not enter into the mixture? We should not like to say. Perhaps.

Captain C. E. Domville will relieve Captain Nicholson in the command of the Temeraire, when a new crew is sent out to that ship, probably in April. Captain Nicholson will not succeed Captain Barnardiston as senior Naval officer at Bermuda.

No alteration has, as yet, been made in the Army Act, or the Queen's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions, in consequence of the representations made last Session respecting Marines when landed from ships for duty on shore. A promise was given by the Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty at the time, that in future the Marines, when so landed, should be under the Army Act; but the Admiralty have so far done nothing to redeem this promise. Truly, the Admiralty should "move more quickly," or the amount of accumulated arrears of administrative work in their hands will be so great, that the "decrepit" clerks will infallibly break down under its weight. No, we are wrong! from gazing at it, we should say.

Mr. John K. Mosse, Paymaster, R.N., is to be appointed to assist the Admiral Superintendent of Reserves in the place of Mr. Rickard, Assistant-Paymaster, at present Acting Secretary to Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh.

Commander J. L. Hammet, who served during the Egyptian campaign as Commander of the Minotaur, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir William Dowell, having been superseded by Commander C. Le Strange, personal equerry to H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, on the recent change of flags in the Channel Squadron, the Admiralty have taken the first opportunity of re-employing him, by appointing Commander Hammet to fill the vacancy in the Agincourt, created by the promotion of Commander J. C. Burnell to Post rank. The Admiralty could not well refuse to allow the Duke of Edinburgh to select his own personal equerry as Commander of his flagship, but they have shown their sense of justice and fair-play in re-employing Commander Hammet on the first opportunity.

The important appointment of Hydrographer to the Admiralty has been offered by their Lordships to Captain W. L. Wharton, R.N., at present in command of the Sylvia, surveying-vessel, stationed in the Magellan Straits. The selection of Captain Wharton to succeed Captain Evans at the Admiralty is one which will meet with general approval in the Navy.

It is rumoured at Plymouth that Dr. Payne, Chaplain of the Royal Naval Hospital, will succeed to the Chaplaincy of the Dockyard at Devonport, rendered vacant by the death of the late incumbent, the Rev. Francis C. Autridge, M.A.

A Committee, consisting of Rear-Admiral Sir Anthony Hoskins, chairman, and Captains Lord Walter Kerr and C. E. Domville, with Mr. W. H. F. Kay, Assistant-Paymaster, as secretary, is sitting at the Admiralty, Spring Gardens, to examine and report upon an exhaustive scheme of reform sent in to their Lordships by Captain Harry Rawson, C.B., of the Alexandra, on the "Character Question." Captain Rawson proposes to issue to seamen a new form of certificate, and suggests new rules for the award of character, medals, gratuities, punishments, &c. The Committee commenced its labours last week. We understand that the proposed reform is one on which neither pains nor labour had been spared,—most exhaustive and elaborate in detail, though, perhaps, a little too complicated,—but we do not doubt, from what we have heard, that it will form the ground-work of the conclusions arrived at by the Committee. We have reason to believe, for example, that the character of "exemplary" will be abolished, and that a new form of parchment certificate will be adopted. It is also probable that steps will be taken to endeavour to find some means of checking leave-breaking, and we fear the Committee may decide to recommend the infliction of more severe punishments than are at present inflicted, instead of recommending the "free-gangway" antidote, so often advocated in these columns. To stop leave-breaking, give leave whenever possible. The certainty of the punishment will never deter men from risking incurring it, however severe it may be, so long as the privilege is uncertain. In the home ports, we see no reason why all, except defaulters, guard, and watch-keepers, should not be allowed on shore every evening as soon as the duty for the day is done. It is quite time that these questions should be discussed at the Admiralty, and a solution found, for it is time something were done in these matters, as the numerous Orders, Circulars, &c., in existence, almost contradict each other. The task can, however, be confidently left in the able hands of Sir Anthony Hoskins and the officers assisting him, who are all men well known never to advocate half-measures.

Her Majesty's Government having decided to make another attempt to settle the questions in dispute between this country and France in regard to the Newfoundland Fisheries, Lord Granville has entered into negotiations with the Government of the French Republic on the subject, with a view, if possible, of settling this much-vexed question. It is to be hoped, however, that the interests of the Newfoundland Colonists will be carefully considered before any decisive step is taken in the matter. The negotiations are at present being conducted in Paris. The Admiralty have placed at the disposal of the Foreign Office all the information in the possession of their Lordships regarding the Newfoundland Fisheries, and it is expected that, on the arrival of Captain Fane, R.N., in England, further important information will be forthcoming, Captain Fane having for some time past been employed in command of the Tenedos on the Newfoundland coast.

Our respectable evening contemporary the Globe loses all its pleasant little philosophy, and becomes furibund as bull taunted by red-wreathed banderillero, when the Boer is presented to its gaze. Its next pet aversion is "Mossoo." Both Mynheer and Monsieur are tossed unmercifully on the syllogistic and dilemmatical horns of an infuriated little organ of the evening, when they venture to cross the path of the grinder; and if any one has a good word for either, or even ventures to cry "Fair-play!" the Globe rounds on him, and with all that it inherits crushes the breath out of him. We really were quite sorry for the poor Times last Saturday. Our large contemporary had a word to say—we admit, it came from a strange quarter—in favour of concession to the Boer demands (which we, for our own part, think very fairly put, so far as we can judge), and the Globe bursts into violent eruption, and covers all Blackfriars and Printing-House Square with the lava of its indignation and the ashes of its fiercest fires. The poor, dear natives will be all destroyed by their implacable foes, the Boers. The trade road "to the interior of Africa!" (dear Globe, do roll a little more on your axis!) will be closed by these domineering Dutchmen, and England will break her solemnly pledged word (such things have happened, vide Act of Settlement, vide Act of Union, Established Church, &c., passim), and the world will go to the deuce, if Kruger and Co. have their own way. But surely the black races may be left to "opt" as they please, and the last thing the Boers are likely to do is to obstruct the very road which is the channel for their trade and their supplies. Perpend, dear Globe, perpend!

Lieutenant O. Rowe, R.A., has been appointed Aide-de-Camp on the Staff of General H.S.H. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, commanding the Southern District, in succession to Captain Lord A. C. Seymour, Scots Guards.

The expeditionary force which landed in Egypt in August, 1882, had a very small march to make from the base at Ismailia to the lines at Tel-el-Kebir; and it had a canal and a railroad, thanks to a stupid or deceived enemy, parallel with the line of its advance. The heat was not abnormal, in fact the temperature was less than it is usually eodem loco in August and September, and yet the force suffered from it greatly, and the medical records tell how grievously the troops felt the effects of their short march and their sojourn in Cairo and Alexandria. Of course, men must sicken and die, before Bondholders weep; but it is really time to ask the solemn questions, What is the amount that England will pay in meal and malt, in life and gold, for what is called English supremacy in Egypt? and what does British supremacy mean? It seems to be the general opinion that British interests in Egypt must be protected against all comers, and that these interests are bounded by the Suez Canal in the east, by the Desert in the west, by Assouan—the First Cataract—in the south, and by Alexandria and the sea in the north. Ships can possibly secure the Canal,—that is, a Naval patrol of gunboats, &c.; the Desert is the very best defence on the west; there is no danger from the north; and so the sole direction whence attack can come is very precisely that whence it is coming, if ever it comes at all, from the south. But is the south Assouan? It would be very convenient, if it were. The fact is, however, against the conveniency, for, for many hundreds of years before the British Empire was dreamt of, while the predecessor of Queen Victoria was clad in the simple garb he had won by poetical licence from a defeated Pict, the Kingdom of Nubia, extending from Assouan nearly up to the Sixth Cataract, had either been a part of, dependency in, or temporary dominator of, portions of Egypt. There are various counsels given from Cairo, Alexandria, and London to the Egyptian Government and to our own, in relation to their duties. Some say, without the least care regarding the modus operandi, withdraw from Khartoum, and concentrate a force at Berber,—that is, at New or at Old Dongola, or at some suitable spot on the curve of the Nile south of the more direct course taken by the river through Nubia from Tanneh to Assouan. Others say, "Send a force to Assouan, and hold the Nile there against all comers;" but they do not concern themselves with the fact that such troops as the Mahdi could direct, swollen by all the Arabs of the Desert, and by the Nubians abandoned to their fate, could overlap the garrison of Assouan, and sweep down at either side of the First Cataract with the greatest ease to a point below the fortified position, thence ruling the river to Cairo, if not to the sea. An army at Assouan, with cavalry and artillery of a sort fit to work in the country, could, of course, make very short work of these rabblements. Where is that army to come from?

Lieutenant-Generals J. A. Street and J. A. Ewart will be retired this year under the five years' unemployed rule, not the age clause as stated.

The Colonial Office has now definitely appointed Colonel Clarke, C.M.G., R.A., to be Resident British Commissioner in Basutoland, although they had offered the position to another gentleman, and he will take up the position in about two months' time. Colonel Clarke has held several appointments in South Africa. In 1874 he was magistrate at Pietermaritzburg, and in 1876 and 1877 aide-de-camp to Sir Theophilus Shepstone. He was afterwards appointed Commissioner at Leydenberg, in the Transvaal, and in 1881 was made Resident Magistrate at Ontaing, Basutoland.

The Principal Medical Officer inspected during the week the whole of the recruits who joined the Aldershot Command during the past month. No improvement is observable in the quality of the lads now joining from regimental districts; on the contrary they seem to be a weedier lot than ever.

A Swiss paper says that the German Head-quarters Staff is fully aware that a war with France now-a-days would be more sanguinary than the last one, and that it has calculated how many thousand soldiers will have to be sacrificed in order to break through the formidable barrier of forts which stretches from Calais to the Swiss frontier. Also, in the event of getting through that barrier, how many army corps will be required to invest Paris. The opinion of the editor is, however, that Germany will not make war, unless for the purpose of self-defence; and we believe that France has no wish to act in any other way, but means to stand on the defensive.

The military gentlemen in France blame the Government very severely for the manner in which the Tonquin expedition has been muddled. The fault lies, however, with that Parliamentary system which necessitates so much pandering to ignorance, and such ill-advised parsimony, rather than with the Cabinet. The Government first of all despatched 500 men, then 1,000 with the unfortunate Commandant Rivière, then 2,000 men with Admiral Bouet, who was superseded because he considered his force too small; then 2,000 more men with Admiral Courbet, who distinguished himself by the capture of Sontay, beyond which he was not strong enough to advance; and now General Millot, with 3,000 men more. All along military men, who remembered what so recently happened to the French in Tunis, and to us at the Cape and in Egypt, were crying out that the force despatched to Tonquin was quite inadequate for the purpose for which it was intended, even supposing that the Celestial Army did not interfere. It was this system of sending out driblets which led to the state of affairs described by a French military paper:—"Our too feeble detachments were blockaded, as it were, in the posts which they occupied. Deprived of all means of transport, they could not move to any distance from the rivers. During this time, the enemy plucked up courage, and fortified themselves at Sontay and Bacninh, and as the latter place is four miles from a navigable river, it is no doubt for this reason that the attack has been postponed." The writer of the above remarks admits that cavalry could not act in a country of marshes and bamboos, but cavalry might have been employed to keep up communications between the main body and detachments. He recommends the employment of balloons, which would no doubt startle the Black Flags as much as they startled the Austrians at Fleurus; they would also enable the French to see what the enemy is doing. "On this subject," we quote again, "we should remember what happened during the war of Paraguay; the combined Argentine and Brazilian Army was held at bay for a whole year before the fortifications of Humaita, through the impossibility, owing to the nature of the country, of reconnoitring the works thrown up by Lopes; Humaita fell simply because a reconnaissance made in a captive balloon showed the existence of a road by which the place could be attacked." However, it is not at all certain that the French are in ignorance of the defences of Bacninh. We have heard of two French columns getting close to the place, and the Temps, which is a very well-informed paper, says that the enceinte has just been repaired, that it is defended by Krupp guns, and that the batteries are protected by plated casemates, against which it will be necessary to employ heavy naval guns. Although the intentions of China are yet a mystery, fresh transports are being continually despatched from Toulon, and if France was rather dilatory at first, she is now making up for lost time with great activity, and has evidently gone to work in good earnest.

The 23rd Battalion of the Line, which left Bourg the other day en route for Tonquin, was played out of the town, after having been inspected by the Colonel of the regiment. At the inspection, the Colonel read out the following order of the day, which is said to have excited great enthusiasm on the part of the battalion:—

"Soldiers of the 2nd Battalion of the 23rd of the Line.—You are going to be separated from us for a time, which I hope will not be long. The Republic sends you to Tonquin, to plant for ever the French flag, and to carry in its name, into those distant regions, liberty, security, progress, and respect for our arms. The country will keep its eye on you, and will spare you neither its solicitude nor its support. We, your comrades who remain at Bourg, will count your marches one by one; your victories and your mourning will be ours. You will have to fight against numerous and well-armed enemies, but they will not be able to stand against French discipline and valour. More redoubtable yonder will be bad conduct and intemperance. You must carefully abstain from such, if you wish to revisit your homes. . . . . . When you return to us, you will see your comrades of an evening in the barrack-rooms, listening with respectful envy to the tales of your voyages, your adventures, and your combats, and you will feel proud of having asked to go to Tonquin."

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

The several Infantry Brigades have recently been exercised in brigade drill, under their brigadiers, the roads having been too heavy for route marching. These drills were visited by Sir Archibald Alison, Bart., accompanied by Colonel Clarke, A.A.G.

The musketry instruction of recruits is being vigorously pushed forward, so that every man may be ready for the annual trained soldiers' course in the spring.

War games were played on Wednesday by eight officers, 2nd Dragoon Guards, assisted by two Artillery and two Infantry officers, Colonel Luck, 15th Hussars, chief umpire; and on Thursday by eight officers, 73rd Highlanders, assisted by two Cavalry and two Artillery officers, Lieutenant-Colonel Helsham Jones, R.E., chief umpire.

Lieutenant A. H. Bagnold, R.E., has arrived at the Camp from New Cross, and taken up duties in connection with the postal telegraphs.

An officers' veterinary class will assemble at the Army Veterinary School on Tuesday next.

Strong detachments of the Royal Engineer Troops (A and C), will shortly proceed to Chatham, there to be stationed.

Surgeon P. J. O'Sullivan, A.M.D., has arrived here for duty, and has taken over medical charge of the officers, women, and children, North Camp, from Surgeon-Major Cuffe, C.B.

Surgeon-Major Falwasser, A.M.D., has been ordered from Cyprus to Aldershot for duty.

Lieutenant C. C. Douglas, 26th Cameronians, has been appointed A.D.C. to Major-General J. Davies, ordered to Egypt to command a brigade.

Lieutenant Ferguson, 3rd Battalion, Rifle Brigade, has been posted to the 4th Battalion, in Bengal, and will embark for India during the ensuing month.

The Montreal correspondent of the Daily News telegraphed on the 10th inst.:—"In the last session of the Dominion Parliament, an Act was passed authorising the formation of a standing army composed of three batteries of artillery, one troop of cavalry, and two regiments of infantry, about twelve hundred men altogether. The recruiting for this force was completed to-day. In the district of Montreal alone, though only one hundred men were required, nearly twelve hundred applications were received. The majority of those applying were fine, able-bodied young men from the surrounding country. Several newly arrived immigrants are among the enlisted. Each man is required to be a genuine British subject, and to serve three years. He will be provided with a free kit. The pay per diem is a dollar for staff serjeants, 80 c. for serjeants, 70 c. for corporals, 40 c. for privates. All officers commanding the force have undergone three months' training at Aldershot or Woolwich."

MACHINE-GUNS.

SIR,—An article ("Notes on Machine-guns," by a "Commander, R.N.") recently published in your columns contains certain statements which tend rather to mislead than to instruct those who are in search of knowledge on this important subject, and is so evidently written by one who lacks intimate practical experience of the very numerous kinds of machine-guns now extant, that I venture to request you to allow me to make a few remarks anent the said article. I entirely concur with "Commander, R.N.," in his remarks on a quotation from a recent writer, but his statement that "it is to be regretted that it [Lord Charles Beresford's lecture] does not seem to have had any appreciable effect," is not just, either to the gallant lecturer or to the Admiralty; for, whether brought about by that lecturer or not, it is a fact that heavy and light shell machine or quick-firing guns are to be at once introduced into her Majesty's Navy. For instance, the armament of H.M.S. Imperieuse includes several quick-firing 6-pounder guns. Though, as "Commander, R.N.," asserts, we may not have a perfect machine-gun for use against torpedo-boats; yet, if the opinion of Naval officers, who have had actual practical experience with the Nordenfelt four-barrel 1-in. gun were taken, it would most certainly be found that they, one and all, consider that weapon to approach as near to such an ideal as is possible; and a study of the official reports by those who have not a practical knowledge of such weapons, of the many trials that have been instituted in this and other countries for the express purpose of deciding as to which is the best form of anti-torpedo-boat-gun, could but confirm that verdict. It is a pity that "Commander, R.N.," did not point out wherein the Nordenfelt gun failed to satisfy him. I also utterly fail to comprehend how "Commander, R.N.," or any other officer with practical experience, can pin his faith on a single-barrelled rifle-calibre machine-gun; and it would certainly be interesting to know his reasons for preferring a single-barrelled gun to one which has several barrels. "Commander, R.N.," says:—"It seems a pity that the inventor (Gardner) was persuaded to produce two and five-barrelled guns, which appear to me to be far less useful weapons, owing to their small penetrative power and want of effective range;" but surely the question of penetrative power has no connection whatever with rifle-calibre machine-guns, the power of such weapons being due to the degree of rapidity of fire, combined with mobility and a fair amount of accuracy, they possess; and as to range, a rifle-calibre machine-gun can have only the same range as that of a rifle with a similar barrel, and firing the same ammunition. Then, in discussing the practice made with the Nordenfelt four-barrelled 1-in. gun on board H.M.S. Excellent, "Commander, R N.," is not very clear, for in one place he says:—"During this year, on board the Excellent and her tenders, this gun was fired by one person whilst the aim was taken by another; thus used it has the same disadvantage as if fired by means of a crank, and it was impossible to make good practice, except by accident, with a moving platform and a moving object." But now-a-days the Nordenfelt 1-in. gun can be aimed and fired with accuracy and facility by one man, two sets of sights being provided, one on each side. While further on he states:—"Hence, a man to aim and one to fire are necessary. When the man works the lever independently, and relies on the man aiming to keep the object on, the hits are very numerous." In another part of his notes, "Commander, R.N.," makes the following remarks:—"I may here remark that all single-barrel machine-guns that have yet been invented are open to the disadvantage of getting heated after continuous firing; the lighter they are the more does this occur, and after many rounds these guns will frequently become useless, owing to the wearing of the barrel or leading." Perhaps he would kindly inform me how he proposes to prevent single-barrelled guns of any kind from getting heated after continuous firing for any length of time. Certainly this is an objection to the employment of a single-barrelled rifle-calibre machine-gun; but I have never known of any machine-gun having become useless by this cause, though from some of these weapons many thousands of rounds have been fired continuously. "Commander, R.N.," has made a mistake in regard to the Hotchkiss guns, as those supplied to the French Navy are of 37 milimètres calibre, not 27 milimètres or 33 milimètres, as he states; in fact, there are no Hotchkiss guns made of the latter two calibres. If, for the mere sake of protecting the gun's crews of a ship against the machine-gun fire, it is necessary, as "Commander, R.N.," asserts, to provide shields (machine-gun proof), and to introduce the muzzle pivotting system, then I think he is hardly justified in stating that "we may, I think, safely regard the present machine shell-firing guns as being not very formidable weapons." In conclusion, "Commander, R.N.," examines into the requirements of a perfect (?) machine-gun; but as he fails to distinguish between rifle calibre, 1-in. calibre, and light and heavy shell machine-guns, it is somewhat difficult to follow him. For instance, "Commander, R.N.," considers that a machine-gun should possess rapidity and accuracy of fire, range, lightness, no recoil, no vibration, and with all these properties the power of penetrating 1½ in. of steel at 1,800 yards range, and in addition, its barrel should not be heated by continuous firing. A machine shell-gun of this description would undoubtedly be a perfect weapon for certain purposes; but as a gun must have nearly 2-in. calibre to give this penetration, it would require to weigh over half a ton with its gearing to be fired without recoil, and this cannot therefore have reference to either rifle-calibre guns, which weigh from 13 to 300 lb., or to 1-in. or light shell machine-guns.—I am, &c.,

How we Defended Arabi. (Chapman and Hall, Limited.) THE book-making art which was shown by Mr. Broadley in his work on Tunis is not exhibited in the bulky volume of which the title appears at the beginning of these few lines,—not of criticism, but of commentary. But there is a great deal of what is technically called book-making in the structure and contents of the work, and there is a good deal of reticence and glossary, so to speak, displayed in the treatment of the most important matter in the cause célèbre which occupied the attention of the public very largely towards the close of last year. Mr. Broadley sets forth triumphantly the pieces of evidence which he could have adduced to show that Arabi, ex-Pasha, was not a traitor, and that he was a patriot General, acting under legally-constituted authority in defence of his country, and Mr. Broadley, the counsel who defended Arabi Pasha, nevertheless, instead of defending, persuaded him to plead guilty to a crime which involved the sentence of death, and which was commuted, by the constrained exercise of the Khedive's prerogative, into an exile for life, with the loss of all his honours and property,—a disgraced and self-acknowledged traitor. Surely whatever there may have been of diplomacy in the display of Mr. Broadley's management of Arabi's case, there is scarcely much ground for boastfulness as regards the success of the advocate in regard to the fate of his client!

The History of the Year. (Cassell and Co.)—The public have shown their interest in Cassell's History of the Year by causing a second edition to be called for. In compliance with this requirement, the present volume has been prepared mainly upon the same lines as its predecessor. Some alterations have also been carried out, but are of no great consequence. The matter has been arranged in a manner well calculated to facilitate the inquiries of the student. The principal events which occurred during the last year in Great Britain and Ireland receive the first attention. Then follow "The Colonies and India," foreign countries, including Egypt, Turkey, and the Levant, Western Europe, and the Mediterranean, "The Eastern Powers," "The Northern Nations," and America. When all this has been completed (and a troublesome task its preparation must have been), the reader will find some very important mems. connected with Trade and Finance, Religion and Morals, and Science. Turning from these very useful subjects, he may take recreation in the fields of Literature, the Drama, Music, the Fine Arts, Sports, and Athletics, not forgetting Ladies' Dress and Fashions. The volume concludes with a capital résumé of the principal events that occurred in connection with politics and the Houses of Parliament. It would be impossible to overrate the sterling value that belongs to this well-arranged compilation.

At the annual general court of the Royal Humane Society, held at 4 Trafalgar Square, W.C., on the 8th inst., His Grace the Duke of Argyll was re-elected as president. The secretary, Capt. Home, read a brief report of the proceedings for the past year, by which it appears that 327 persons were rewarded by the society for saving life from drowning. The boats of the society attended daily at the Serpentine during the hours appointed by the authorities for bathing; it is estimated that 198,000 persons bathed there during the past year, and only one fatality occurred. Thirty-six persons were rescued by the society's boatmen whilst bathing. The secretary reported that prizes had been awarded by the society for proficiency in "swimming exercises, with reference to saving life from drowning," at 12 of the leading schools in England and at four of her Majesty's training-ships. The competitions at the schools and ships were most satisfactorily carried out, and the practice of recovering dummies from the bottom by means of diving was considered highly conducive to the advancement of a knowledge of saving life from drowning. The general court awarded the Stanhope gold medal to W. Simpson, captain of the foretop, of her Majesty's schooner Harrier, this being considered the most meritorious case of the year, the man having jumped overboard on a dark night in Pomony Harbour, Johanna Island, and succeeded in saving the life of a shipmate. The danger incurred was very great, as the place is known to be infested with sharks. The meeting adjourned with a vote of thanks to the chairman (Mr. J. M. Case).

8th Hussars. The regiment will stay at Meean Meer for the Camp of Exercise.

13th Hussars. The will of Gen. J. Lawrenson, col. of the regiment, who died on Oct. 30 last at the Alexandra Hotel, Hyde Park, was proved on the 11th ult., by Major-Gen. E. Howard Vyse and Col. J. G. Kinloch, the executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £44,000. The testator gives an annuity of £620 to his sister, Mrs. Jane Simson Aynsworth; annuities of £300 each to his sister, Miss Emma Duncan Lawrenson, and to his niece, Miss Georgina Margaret Lawrenson, with certain benefits of survivorship; and legacies to his executors, to a friend, and to his groom.

14th Hussars. Major and Staff Pymr. O'Dowd is ordered to return to England from India.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Lieut. Kelly aud 13 men B Brig., R.H.A.; Capts. Hoggan, Holland, Kuper, and Simpson, and Lieuts. Rownsley, St. John, White, Baynes, Block, and Coghill, and 195 men of the Field and Garrison Artillery, sailed for India on Thursday, in H.M.S. Serapis.

A special General Order from the War Office notifies that the following alterations in the organisation of the regiment have been approved, and will take effect from April 1, 1884:—"1. In addition to the depôts for horse artillery and for each territorial division, as now existing, four field artillery depôts (one for each brigade) are to be formed for the purpose of receiving and training recruits for field artillery, and for providing drafts for the batteries of that branch serving abroad. 2. Pars. 10 and 11 of G.O. 72 of 1882 are hereby cancelled, and all drafts for batteries of horse, field, and garrison artillery serving abroad will for the future be trained at the depôts and despatched from thence, and not from the service batteries at home, as at present. 3. The new field depôts will be designated and stationed as follows, and each will consist of the establishment laid down in Army Circulars:—1st Brigade Depôt, at Newcastle; 2nd do., at Colchester; 3rd do., at Hilsea; 4th do., at Fermoy. 4. Consequent on the foregoing the following changes of stations of territorial depôts and of the affiliation of the new field artillery depôts will have effect:—Territorial Depôts—Northern Division, Newcastle to Sunderland; Eastern Division, Colchester to Yarmouth (ultimately, as already arranged). Field Artillery Depôts—1st Brigade, Newcastle, affiliated to Northern, Lancashire, and Scottish Divisions; 2nd Brigade, Colchester, affiliated to Eastern, Cinque Ports, and London Divisions; 3rd Brigade, Hilsea, affiliated to the Southern, Western, and Welsh Divisions; and 4th Brigade, Fermoy, affiliated to the North Irish and South Irish Divisions. 5. Recruits on enlistment in the several territorial districts (except where enlisted by a battery to complete its own establishment) are to be posted at once to the territorial (garrison) or affiliated field artillery depôt, according as they fulfil the prescribed physical conditions. 6. As depôt batteries are formed solely for the training and instruction of recruits, they are not to be called upon to take part in field days, except on special occasions. 7. Recruits are not to be posted to service batteries until they have passed their drills, and when posted are not, except on emergency, to be transferred to any other battery without their own consent and previous reference to head-quarters if at home, to the Commander-in-Chief of the Presidency if in India, and to the General officer commanding at other stations abroad, the object being to make every recruit feel that so long as a soldier conducts himself properly nothing but the urgency of service or his own conduct will lead to his transfer from the service battery to which he was originally posted."

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The Times says:—"The Military authorities having refused permission to General Gordon to proceed to the Congo, he has been compelled, at great pecuniary sacrifice, to resign his commission in the English Army, in order that he may be able to fulfil his engagement with the King of the Belgians. He will leave for the Congo in about a fortnight's time. One of the principal objects of his mission will be the suppression of the slave-trade in the Niam-Niam, the district in which the Soudanese slave-dealers mainly procure their supplies. He will endeavour to accomplish this by so organising and arming the tribes there as to enable them to make efficient resistance against the raids of the slave-dealers."

Coldstream Guards. Col. F. C. Manningham-Buller died suddenly on Thursday morning at Hopton Hall, Derbyshire, where he was on a visit to his brother-in-law, Mr. Chandos Pole-Gell. The deceased was the fifth son of the late Sir Edward Manningham-Buller, and was born in the year 1837. He entered the Army in 1855 as an ensign and lieut., and was promoted to lieut. and capt. in 1860. He became capt. and lieut.-col. in 1870, major in 1881, and col. in 1882. He served with the 2nd Batn. in the late Egyptian war, and was present at Tel-el-Mahuta and Tel-el-Kebir (medal with clasp and Khedive's star). Col. Manningham-Buller married, in 1881, Alice Jessie, daughter of the late Mr. W. Davenport, of Maer, Staffordshire.

3rd Buffs (East Kent Regiment). Col. Parnell, C.B., who has just completed his five years' term of command of the 2nd Batn., has left Hong Kong in the P. and O. steamer Verona. Lieut.-Col. Hobson has taken over command until the arrival of Col. Parnell's successor from England.

4th King's Own (Royal Lancaster Regiment). The 2nd Batn. left Bombay on Dec. 12 for Poona. The regiment, which is under the command of Col. Stokes, numbers 436 rank and file and 18 officers. They were to do the journey to Poona by road in nine marches, and were to arrive in Poona on Dec. 21.

6th Royal Warwickshire Regiment. The funeral of the late Lieut.-Col. Bonamy, late of the regiment, took place at Brighton on Saturday.

8th King's (Liverpool Regiment). Lieut. Seton sailed in charge of the draft for the 2nd Batn. on board the Euphrates on Dec. 10. The exchange between Capt. Bright-Smith, 2nd Batn., and Capt. Jackson, 3rd Hussars, has been sanctioned. Capt. Jackson will sail for India in an early trooper to join the 2nd Batn. at Ranikhet.

11th Devonshire Regiment. Gen. Sir Francis Seymour, K.C.B., col. of the regiment, her Majesty's Master of the Ceremonies, has arrived at Kensington Palace, after a long visit to Wiesbaden.

34th Border Regiment. Major Gray and Lieuts. Richards and Bellamy sailed for India on Thursday in H.M.S. Serapis, with a draft of 126 men.

46th Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. Lieut.-Col. Richardson, C.B., who was severely wounded at Tel-el-Kebir, has arrived at Ramleh from leave on medical certificate, and taken over the command.

47th North Lancashire Regiment. The head-quarters and service companies will embark at Gibraltar for conveyance to India in H.M.S. Serapis, which sailed from Portsmouth on Thursday. Major Hall, Capts. Sawyer and Lindesay, and 67 men left in the Serapis.

ROYAL MARINES.

Capt. E. E. G. Bird, Chatham Division, retires from the corps at his own request.

The under-mentioned officers have been granted leave of absence, viz.:—Capt. W. T. Adair, R.M.L.I., from the 11th inst. until the 1st prox.; Capt. and Brevet Major W. La T. Cockcraft, R.M.A., two months; Lieut. F. C. Cotter, R.M.L.I., two months; Lieut. J. W. Grant, R.M.A., two months; Lieut.-Col. P. R. Holmes, R.M.L.I., two months; Capt. and Brevet Major G. A. Heseltine, R.M.L.I., one month; Lieut. H. C. Kelly, R.M.L.I., three weeks; Capt. S. Polkinghorne, R.M.L.I., 14 days; Capt. A. C. Pearson, R.M.L.I., two months; Capt. H. E. Robbins, R.M.L.I., two months; Capt. A. C. Smyth, R.M.L.I., three weeks; Lieut. W. F. Trotter, R.M.A., three months; and Lieut. H. L. Talbot, R.M.A., three months.

59th East Lancashire Regiment. The 5 and 9, Lillywhites' Gazette, has the following:—"We have much pleasure in reporting progress, though not as yet completion, in the erection of our Afghan memorial at Nottingham. We last week received a drawing of the same, together with a notification that the local authorities had sanctioned a site for its erection within the grounds of Nottingham Castle. The situation is on an elevated plateau, and if the obelisk is completed, as we hope it may be, as proposed, viz., by adding steps and asphalting round, it will be very effective. To carry this out creditably, it has been found necessary to ensure a good foundation, and to obtain this the services of the borough engineer were kindly offered and accepted; and on his suggestion, excavations were made 11 ft. deep and 8 ft. square, and as the ground was found to be made, shoring had to be resorted to. This unexpected and additional task will of necessity entail a further outlay, for which we anticipate no difficulty in raising the necessary funds, as already several officers now serving have signified their willingness to add to their original subscriptions, whilst old officers of the regiment will also, we feel sure, come forward; so that we have every hope of the long-expected memorial being erected in a position and in a manner creditable alike both to the old 59th, 2nd Nottinghamshire Regiment, and the successors to their honours and history, the 2nd Batn. the East Lancashire Regiment, and also the fine old town which once boasted a regiment (two battalions) raised and called after her, in which her sons could serve their Queen and country, and assist in adding brilliant pages to our English history in the name and under the title of the county and town of Nottingham: but alas! Tempora mutantur."

68th Durham Light Infantry. Lieut. Templer and 102 men sailed for India on Thursday, in H.M.S. Serapis.

71st Highland Light Infantry. Major De Lancey has joined head-quarters at Dublin, on the completion of his term of duty with the depôt.

77th Middlesex Regiment. Major Jervis-White, who appeared in the Gazette of the 28th ult. as retired on retired pay, with the honorary rank of lieut.-col., entered the Army as a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin; appointed ensign by purchase, Nov. 18, 1863; promoted lieut. by purchase, March 30, 1866; appointed instructor of musketry, May 17, 1869; promoted capt. by purchase, March 22, 1871; promoted major, July 1, 1881.

103rd Royal Dublin Fusiliers. The head-quarters and service companies sailed from Portsmouth on Thursday in H.M.S. Serapis, for Gibraltar. The embarking strength consisted of the following, viz.;—Lieut.-Col. Glasse; Majors Corballis and Shaw; Capts. Hickley, Pentland, Hughes, and Povah; Lieuts. Vincent, Horrocks, Guyon, English, Rowe, Talbot, Marshall, Leicester, and Gray (adjutant); Capt. and Pymr. Kitson, and Qrmr. Hills; 620 men, 32 women, and 55 children. On disembarking, at Gibraltar, the Serapis will receive the 1st Batn. North Lancashire Regt., for passage to Bombay.

106th Durham Light Infantry. At the recent gale at Gibraltar, a Norwegian ship was stranded on the eastern beach. Two officers and twenty men, 106th, and one officer and serjeant, 49th Regt., joined hands through the surf, and succeeded in getting one of the crew ashore. A large wave came, and washed the saving party away. One unfortunate non-commissioned officer was drowned,—Corpl. Lederita, the son of a captain who was formerly in the 2nd Bombay L.I.

The Auxiliary Forces.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

Middlesex. H.R.H. Princess Christian on Tuesday distributed the prizes to the men of this regiment who during the past year have distinguished themselves by their superior skill in shooting and swordsmanship, and by their general efficiency. The ceremony took place at the head-quarters of the regiment, 43 Albemarle Street. Princess Christian, who was accompanied by Col. Eliot, was received on her arrival at about 3 o'clock by a guard of honour under the command of Lieut. Mathews. Lieut.-Col. Harfield, addressing the Princess, proceeded to make a statement as to the condition and prospects of the regiment. His efforts hitherto, he said, had been in the direction of securing efficiency, and those efforts, thanks to the exertions of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men, had been attended with success. Lieut.-Gen. Higginson, at the close of the distribution, on behalf of the regiment, tendered its thanks to her Royal Highness for the honour she had done it by her presence. The members of the regiment were men of independent means. It might be supposed that they were content with performing their ordinary duties, enjoying the use of their club-room in good-fellowship, and waiting till they were called on to discharge duties beyond their annual training, but that was not so. When the troops were about to embark for the Egyptian Campaign, the colonel came forward to offer to perform the Saturday and Sunday duties in the Home District in each week in order to afford relief to the Regular forces. On the occasion of her Majesty reviewing the troops on their return from Egypt, the regiment turned out in a manner which not only elicited the admiration of the civilised world, but which was worthy of any of the troops of the Regular forces.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

A meeting of Metropolitan Commanding Officers of Volunteers was held on Monday in the theatre of the United Service Institution, Whitehall, for the purpose of considering the steps to be taken in the promotion of a review on Easter Monday, and to discuss various general questions connected with the Volunteers, their position as a force, and their equipment. Lord Ranelagh presided. The following resolution was moved by Lord Ranelagh, and seconded by Lieut.-Col. Edis:—"That a review be held on Easter Monday, and that the following officers be appointed to act as a committee to make the necessary arrangements, to select such locality as they may find most suitable for the review, and to report to an adjourned meeting, viz., Lord Ranelagh, Cols. Ward, Brown, Laurie, Ray, Drew, Alt, and Edis, Major Bird, Col. Wilkinson, and Lieut.-Col. Routledge (hon. secs.)."

NON-EXECUTIVE PAY IN THE NAVY.

SIR,—Your correspondent who writes on the subject of "Engineers versus Paymasters" deserves credit for his ingenuity. He evidently held a brief from the engineers. It is misleading and incorrect to take the old paymasters or old engineers as the basis for such a statement. For example, to proceed in the same order as the paragraph, &c., in question. What the average, &c., service and age of the engineers may be I do not know; but I do know that, barring death, vacancies, and some special promotions for gallantry, such as Winterbottom, Gibson, Perry, Beechy Rogers, and possibly, Hickson, the average promotion of assistant-paymasters since 1868 has run in an increasing ratio from 9 to 15½ years. The latest promotions in the respective branches are an engineer of 11¾ years standing to chief engineer, and assistant-paymaster of 15½ years to paymaster. As the promotion to chief engineer depends on the ability of the officer to pass for the rank (and you will observe that of the first 78 on the list of engineers only three have so passed), it is absurd to speak of and put down the pay of engineers of 17 years' standing at 11s. (vide article); for they are of 17 years' standing through their own inability or want of capacity to pass for the higher rank, through no fault of their own, be it said, but because new regulations have come into force which they were never educated up to. Your correspondent also carefully suppresses the fact that every chief engineer in a ship receives pay for being "in charge of engines," varying from 1s. to about 5s. a day, which is practically part of his pay. (I do not go into allowances, which are common to all branches, such as "Flagship allowance," &c., which paymasters, chief engineers, doctors, and navigators get more or less equally—merely into what can strictly be called "pay.") He also omits the fact that chief engineers are retired at 55, and paymasters at 60, which would deduct some £3,000 from the total of the paymasters' cash during service. Another most material point omitted is that he leaves the public to believe that engineers cannot get over 22s. a day. He is technically correct as regards chief engineers; but what about the inspectors and chief inspectors, whose pay ranges from 28s. to 32s. a day, plus 3s. when in Steam Reserves? Comparisons are odious, very odious; but when such incorrect and deliberately misleading statements—I cannot call them facts—are brought forward in a journal as influential as the Army and Navy Gazette, it leads people to believe that they are right. A proper statement should start from promotions as they are at present; but there is no comparison. Lieutenants are worst off, doctors best; and only that the engineers get their education at the expense of the State, I do not see why they should not get the same pay as the medicos. Still, recrimination will do no good. Let all ranks pull together. Then, perhaps, there may be a chance of securing the introduction of beneficent reforms.—I am, &c., R. N.

* Acting Sub-Lieutenants who entered the Britannia prior to Dec. 31, 1875, are not required to go through a Pilotage Course. The officers who follow the course are not examined on its completion, but on the next examination day at the Hydrographic Department. The examination day is the fourth Wednesday in each month.

5.—Engineer Officers.—Four courses at dates to be arranged, and to last about nine weeks.

Capt. the Hon. Edmund Fremantle will, we hear, succeed Capt. Sir Walter Hunt Grubbe in the command of the Sultan.

M. Eugene Albert, of Brussels, has manufactured, and Mr. Arthur Chappell will shortly introduce into this country, a new clarionet, called "The Indestructible," not without reason, for instead of wood the tube is made of metal—silver, German silver, or brass, drawn on a polished steel mandrel—covered with vulcanite, which is little affected by changes of temperature, and is said to be capable of standing 170 degrees of heat without injury to the instrument.

On the recommendation of the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, 210 silver medals for long service and good conduct have just been awarded to as many non-commissioned officers and men of the Army. The recipients of this much coveted honour are as follows:—Household Cavalry, 2; Royal Horse Artillery, 3; Cavalry of the Line, 22; Royal Artillery, 22; Royal Engineers, 9; Infantry of the Line, 140; Commissariat and Transport Corps, 5; Army Hospital Corps, 4; and School of Musketry, Royal Military College, and General Staff, 1 each. One hundred and nineteen of the recipients are non-commissioned officers.

A Royal Warrant was promulgated yesterday announcing that in future the pay of the men comprising the Supplementary Army Reserve (Supplemental Reserve) will be 4d. per day, and will be issued in the same manner as the pay of the other sections of the 1st-Class Army Reserve. The men of Section D will not be granted deferred pay.

The following reductions are stated to have been made by the Council of the Empire in the Russian Budget for 1884:—6,500,000 roubles in the Commissariat Administration; 1,500,000 roubles in the Chief Artillery Department; and 5,800,000 roubles in the estimates of the Ministry of Marine. This looks like peace.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh has issued an order regulating the dress of Naval officers serving in the Channel Squadron. Tail coats are never to be worn without epaulettes, and this dress is reserved for balls and full-dress dinner parties. For ordinary official dinners, regimental mess dinners, and other similar entertainments, jackets, blue waistcoats, and gold-laced trowsers are to be worn. This order has given general satisfaction throughout the Squadron.

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1884.

THE news from the Soudan is still anything but definite. The particulars of the disaster have become more circumstantial in their character, but they add little to our real information. Perhaps the most reliable evidence yet to hand is that of a man, a native of Khartoum, and well known there, who had started with General Hicks from Duem, and who returned to Cairo with a lance-thrust in his back which he alleges he obtained in an engagement with the enemy. About all particulars of that engagement he is singularly vague; he has been able to tell nothing either of the number of the attacked or of the attacking force, but this renders his story, so far as it goes, all the more trustworthy, perhaps. What he does relate is that he, with a "great many others," and all the Englishmen were in a place where, in consequence of the trees, they were unable to fight "all together," but they were attacked, and got into small groups, and so fought until they were killed, or fell down as if they were killed, "which was what I did." From this position of comparative safety, he appears to have observed that after a time there were no cartouches left, that Hicks Pasha then gave the order to fix bayonets, and with sword in his right hand and revolver in his left, surrounded by his Staff, he put himself at the head of his troops, charged his assailants, and in a few moments was overpowered. After the battle was over, he says, some 150 wounded men, like himself, were discovered, and the Mahdi gave orders not to hurt them, and when an Englishman came in (Vizetelly?); he told the men to treat him well, for the English had fought bravely. Nevertheless, he had the heads cut off Hicks and his officers, and placed them over the gates of Obeid. The above is his story, bearing, as we think, the stamp of truth. But from Dongola there comes another story, not conflicting with the above, nor holding out hope of the survival of Hicks Pasha, but implying that part of the Army may be saved. According to this account, Hicks Pasha and one-half of his Army, with all the European officers, were attacked and killed as stated, but the other half of the Army with Alaidin were not in the battle. At first sight it seems highly improbable that Hicks Pasha and all his Staff should be with one-half of the Army, and Alaidin alone with the other half; but a letter from Khartoum, dated December 1, gives this story an air of probability, for it states that there is a current rumour that quarrels took place between Hicks and Alaidin; "that the former was unwilling" to stay near the water,—perhaps the lake at Rahad,—and that he wished to push on, but Alaidin and half the army refused to obey his orders, and remained behind. It is possible that this story, rumoured in Khartoum on December 1, has now found its way to Dongola, and been telegraphed from there as news, or it may have come from Melbais to Dongola by an independent source, which would, of course, be a confirmation of it. In either case, one is hardly anxious to find it true. If the whole Army died with Hicks, one can indulge in a little satisfaction at their courage in the midst of a great disaster. If one-half deserted him, one's feelings of sympathy are not very warm towards them; they can hardly, moreover, have escaped death later, but the uncertainty as to their fate might render it incumbent upon Egypt to try another expedition to secure their safety. As regards the reconquest of the Soudan, people are prone to talk glibly, as if it were a suburb of Cairo that required the services of a few extra policemen. To reconquer it means, first, to defeat the Mahdi, an achievement which would require a disciplined force estimated by different Military authorities at from 15,000 to 30,000 men. Now, Egypt has certainly not got this force, and neither England nor Turkey seem willing to lend it, so that this would alone seem tolerably decisive. But suppose it is reconquered. What happens next? Who is going to hold it? Let us take the boundary of Suakim, Berber, and Khartoum only, and, according to good Military authorities, this requires 16,000 men. Where is this permanent garrison to be found? Even the boundary at Wady Halfa is estimated to require 7,000 men, and this is the maximum which Egypt can safely produce of fighting material.

Major J. A. Fergusson, Rifle Brigade, has been appointed Brigade-Major in Ceylon, in succession to Lieutenant-Colonel Currie, 41st Regiment.

The painful circumstances connected with the death of Private J. Swift, 85th King's Shropshire Light Infantry, who committed suicide at Aldershot, on the 29th ult., in the guard-room, where he had been confined for drunkenness, has been the subject of inquiry at the Camp during the present week, and a full report received at the Horse Guards. The coroner's jury found a verdict of temporary insanity, and expressed themselves of opinion that the Acting Adjutant exercised undue harshness in ordering the deceased to be confined in the guard-room when he was not intoxicated. Unfortunately, this appears to be too true, though it is pretty clear that the deceased was suffering from the effects of previous hard-drinking, and was in a state of tremor on guard-mounting parade, when ordered into confinement by the Adjutant. Surely this was a case where the man should have been made a prisoner at large, as permitted by regulation, and sent to his barrack-room, pending further investigation. Another sad feature in the case is that the man's life must have been saved had medical aid been promptly at hand, when, as the medical evidence at the inquest shows, it would have been comparatively easy to pick up the vessels and stop the hæmorrhage; as it was, the unfortunate man was conveyed to the hospital on a stretcher, and bled to death on the way.

Major C. T. Barrow, 26th Cameronians, and Captain M. J. E. Fenwick, 39th Regiment, have been selected for employment in Egypt under Mr. Clifford Lloyd. These officers are under orders to proceed by overland route to assume their duties at the earliest possible date.

The Permanent Committee on Infantry Equipment, Colonel Harrison, C.B., C.M.G., president, assembled at Head-quarters, Aldershot, on Monday last, for further consideration of the Valise equipment question. An equipment, modified in accordance with the suggestions of the Committee, has been submitted for further trial and report, and will shortly be experimented with in conjunction with the new Infantry garment, the invention of the Active Service Dress Committee. The present service water-bottle having been condemned, the question of a substitute was also under consideration, and the merits and demerits of various inventions in leather, wood, glass, and tin fully gone into. It is quite possible that this committee may yet invent a mode of carrying the Wallace spade before that instrument becomes an obsolete weapon of war.

We believe that it has been decided to abolish the Staff appointment of Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General for Musketry at Aldershot on April 1 next. It is vain to hope that the authorities will reconsider their decision in this matter. Their consistency and tenacity of purpose in wrong-doing is indubitable. With the abolition of regimental musketry-instructors, and the introduction of a complicated and experimental system of musketry instruction, it is more than ever necessary, at such a station as Aldershot, that there should be a Staff officer specially appointed to superintend the musketry instruction of the troops, and this will speedily be found out should this unwise step be taken.

Amongst the General Orders issued on the 1st inst. is one containing the regulations for Section D (or Supplemental Reserve) of the First-Class Army Reserve, which was constituted by Royal Warrant of March 21, 1883, having been provided for, in case it should be required, in the Reserve Forces Act of 1882. The peculiarity of this Supplemental Reserve is that the men enrolled therein cannot be called out for service until all the other sections of the First-Class Army Reserve have been first called out, consequently in cases similar to the Egyptian Expedition of 1882, when only 10,000 Reserve men were called for, the services of Section D will not be brought into requisition. According to the General Order, "Section D (or Supplemental Reserve) of the First-Class Army Reserve will be composed of men who have completed their first period of limited engagement, who obtain at least a 'good' character on leaving the colours, and who retain it during service, if any, in Section B. The term of service will be four years, and will commence the day after discharge from the colours, or from Section B of the First-Class Army Reserve." In the Army Circulars for this month, there also appears a Royal Warrant with regard to the pay of Section D, which will be 4d. per day, but the men will not be entitled to any deferred pay.

General Order 9, of 1884, issued on the 1st inst., contains a list of the officers who successfully passed the final examination of the Staff College in December. The list contains the names of 20 officers, thus coinciding exactly with the number who passed into the College at the examination held in June 1881. The coincidence, however, goes no farther, for of the 20 who passed in as above, only 15 are among the 20 who have now passed out, the total being completed by the addition of four officers who passed in at the Entrance Examination of 1880 and one officer of 1879. Of the remaining five who passed in in 1881, three failed to pass the probationary examination in 1882; one is on the sick-list, and one is absent on foreign service in Egypt. Of the batch who have just passed out, two officers, Captain Sawyer, Lancaster Regiment (4th Foot), and Captain Verner, Rifle Brigade, have passed with honours; and five officers besides have gained honourable mention, of whom Captain Barter, South Yorkshire Regiment (105th Foot), obtains his honourable mention for his knowledge of the French language, which means that his marks reached at least ·9 of the maximum possible in the subject. That French is considered most important by the authorities, is evidenced by its being now made compulsory upon all officers before they can be selected for the appointment of Aide-de-Camp; and after the present year, instead of being an optional subject, it will form a part of the obligatory portions of the final examination of the Staff College, while all other modern languages will still be treated as optional or extra subjects. We are glad to notice this growing recognition of the importance of foreign languages, and having regard to the very large number of candidates at every examination for entrance to the Royal Military College (the number of candidates being generally about four times as many as the vacancies), we would almost venture to suggest that French might with advantage be made obligatory in that examination, as well as in that for the Staff College.

Bearing in mind the fact that there is at present a great dearth of officers in the subaltern ranks of the Infantry, we are glad to welcome a step in the right direction which the authorities have taken towards rectifying the existing state of affairs,—we refer to the increase in the number of cadets to be admitted to the Royal Military College in February next from 112, as officially advertised in October last, to 132, as shown by the list of successful candidates just published. We hear, however, that to make room at the College for the extra 20 cadets, it is intended to give commissions to 20 of the cadets who entered the College in September last, and who have, consequently, only passed through the short term of three months. These cadets will thus escape their second term of five months, and will obtain their commissions six months sooner than they would have done in the ordinary course. A similar remedy was applied for a similar dearth of young officers in 1878, and frequently since then calls have been made upon the Militia candidates to supply the extra number required to fill vacancies in the Line. It will therefore be seen that the present large number of Line vacancies—we believe there will still remain several unfilled, even after the extra 20 alluded to have all been absorbed—is no new feature in the arrangements for supplying the Army with officers; and moreover, with the present limited accommodation at Sandhurst, we see little prospect of improvement, so long as the Indian Staff Corps is allowed to drain the British Army of its young officers to an unlimited extent. Under these circumstances, we find it very difficult to understand why the authorities take no steps whatever to remedy an evil which they know from experience is liable to appear at any moment. Is it absolutely impossible to arrange for the admission of a few extra cadets, without being obliged to turn out others who have not completed half their course of instruction? One would have thought it more in accordance with common-sense, and more conducive to the efficiency of regiments, to have a number of cadets who have completed their course of instruction waiting for vacancies to arise, rather than to have regiments often two, or three, or even more officers short of their establishment, waiting, sometimes for months, before fresh officers are gazetted to the vacancies. But increased accommodation would probably mean a slight increase in the Army Estimates, and so once again efficiency must be sacrificed to the prevailing rage for petty economies.

In this week's Punch, we have two amusing specimens of military after-dinner speeches. "The speech of the past" is of that old-fashioned harmless kind, which had the great merit of brevity, to compensate for its want of originality. "The speech of the future, by a scientific-looking person in blue spectacles," is hardly a travestie on the inspired utterances of our most advanced reformers. In the public press, including the daily and weekly papers, and the magazines, the opponents to the illusory schemes which have reduced the Army to a lamentable condition of inefficiency and discontent, are increasing in number and earnestness. This paper which, in steadfast advocacy of the true interests of the Army, may claim to be nulli secundus, gladly hails the assistance of Punch, because ridicule is more powerful than argument, in dealing with those who have proved themselves nearly impervious to the "inexorable logic of facts."

The annual field-firing recently carried out at Aldershot by the troops has not given very satisfactory results. It appears rather odd that the practice of the Cavalry should have been much better than that of the Infantry, though the former fired at longer ranges. It seems, however, that while the Infantry fired by brigades, the Cavalry fired by regiments; and may, therefore, have been more "in hand" than the Infantry, and thus made better practice. It would appear that the more men there are firing at a time, and the more rattle and noise made by the shooting, the less care and attention is paid by individuals to their own particular practice; and consequently, a greater expenditure of ammunition takes place, without adequate results. This points to the necessity for a closer and more unceasing supervision being exercised over the firing after the reinforcement of the fighting-line takes place, instead of what appears to be the general tendency, a relaxation of the efforts to control the fire, in proportion as the numbers in the fighting-line increase. Measures could easily be taken to make this annual field-firing a much more valuable means of instructing our young soldiers than it is at present.

An Infantry battalion, not long stationed at Aldershot, has lost many men by desertion during the past few weeks. It is believed that not a few of these absentees have served in other corps, where they are now wanted, and that dread of detection, had they remained at Aldershot, is the cause of their flight. From a recent issue of the Police Gazette, it appears that there were 126 desertions from regiments and corps on the Home Establishment during the month of December, 1883; of these, 29, nearly one-fourth of the whole number, were from the Royal Artillery. With desertions on the increase, and recruiting at a standstill, the Artillery arm of the service will soon be in a worse condition than it is at present.

Perhaps one of the nuisances most keenly felt by the soldier, and one that is the subject of very reasonable grumbling, is that, after having been detained on duty unavoidably until long after the dinner-hour, he is obliged to sit down to a half-cold and decidedly greasy repast, or else to one in which the heat has been retained at the cost of drying it to a cinder in the regulation oven. A dinner under either of these conditions is a source of much vexation. To remedy this grievance, Serjeant J. Brown, master cook, Commissariat and Transport Corps, quartered at Aldershot, invented, some time ago, a contrivance termed a "hot-water oven," consisting of an oblong metallic box, the top, sides, one end, and bottom of which are hollow, as also is the partition dividing the oven into two, an upper and lower compartment. At the top is an orifice closed by a screw-cap, through which is introduced the boiling water, entirely filling the space between the outer and inner case. The heat thus obtained for the interior will keep the dinners of 24 men, if in basins or canteens, or a larger number in dishes, quite warm and in no way deteriorated in quality from when first cut. This ingenious contrivance enables the cooks to keep the meals warm for four hours. The oven takes about six gallons of water, which, when it has performed its duty, is released by a tap. So successful has the invention proved, that four are in constant use at Aldershot, whilst two more have been sent to Woolwich and Chelsea. Unquestionably, the oven will be a boon to the service, and the ingenuity which brought it into existence should be suitably rewarded.

The Navy.

NAVAL KNIGHTS OF WINDSOR.

ADMIRALTY, January 8, 1884.

The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty do hereby give notice to such Lieutenants of the Royal Navy, and to such Lieutenants retired with the rank of Commander, as are desirous of being recommended for the appointment of Naval Knight of Windsor, under the will of the late Samuel Travers, Esq., that they must apply at this office, either personally or by letter, on or before the 12th day of February next, when they will be informed of the nature of the certificates and testimonials which are required to show that they come within the meaning of the will, an extract from which is herewith appended:—"These gentlemen are to be superannuated or disabled Lieutenants of English men-of-war, single men, without children, inclined to lead a virtuous, studious, and devout life; to be removed if they give occasion for scandal." By the Act 30 and 31 Victoria, cap. 100, widowers are deemed single men within the meaning of the will in question. The vacancy is in addition to that which was notified in the London Gazette of the 28th ult.

ADMIRALTY, January 5, 1884.

The announcement contained in the London Gazette of January 1, 1884, of the promotion of Sub-Lieutenant Henry Dacres Kirwan to the rank of Lieutenant in her Majesty's Fleet, is hereby cancelled.

ADMIRALTY, January 7, 1884.

Assistant-Paymaster William James Hubbard has been promoted to the rank of Paymaster in her Majesty's Fleet (January 5).

ADMIRALTY, January 7, 1884.

ADMIRALTY, January 8, 1884.

In accordance with the provisions of her Majesty's Orders in Council of February 22, 1870, and March 3, 1873, Assistant-Paymaster Hugh Ross Dalgleish has been placed on the Retired List of his rank (January 4).

APPOINTMENTS.

Commanders—J. Lacon Hammet, to the Agincourt, vice John C. Burnell; Alfred Carpenter, to the Myrmidon, commissioned; J. Harrington Martin, to the Excellent, additional.

Staff Commanders—James R. W. Quinn, to the Serapis, vice Turner; W. W. Vine, to the Enchantress, vice Hills.

Lieutenants—William Farr, to the Wrangler, vice Charles R. Arbuthnot; Frederick Vernon Isaac, to the Britomart, vice W. E. B. Atkinson; Arthur Thomas Target, to the Lion, for service in the Liberty, vice C. W. G. Spring; Francis W. Keary, Andrew Charles Williamson, and James Henry Cunningham East, to the Myrmidon; Francis C. B. B. Simpson, to the Temeraire, for gunnery duties, vice G. L. Poë; William Abraham Ludington Quixans Henriques, to the Temeraire, vice Henry H. Boteler; G. T. Wingfield, to the President, additional; William C. H. Snell, Woodham A. Connop, G. M. Dolphin, F. H. Eagles, F. G. McKinstry, Walter O. Thurburn, and Saul Hewitt, to the Vernon, additional, for short course of torpedo instruction; H. A. Ogle, to the Duncan, vice Adair; Southwell G. T. Bourke, to the Hercules, vice Millett; George Le C. Egerton, to the Vernon, additional, for the Vesuvius, vice Gallwey; F. H. Hamilton, to the Vernon, vice Egerton.

Deputy-Inspector-General of Hospitals and Fleets—Gordon Jackson, to the Chatham Division, R.M., for temporary service, vice Breen.

Staff Surgeon—Thomas Conry, to Melville Hospital, vice Comerford.

Chief Engineers—C. Francis Hulford, to the Pembroke, additional, for service in the Ready; Edwin G. Ashworth, to the Indus, additional, for the Prince Albert, vice Finch; Robert J. Barker, to the Vernon, additional; Henry C. Goldsmith, to the Starling, on promotion.

Surgeons—William M. Rae, to the Dasher, vice Conry; Leonard H. Kellett, M.D., to the Duke of Wellington, vice Rae.

Gunners—Arthur Hicks, to the Indus, for service in the Wild Swan; George Cuthbert, to the Asia, additional, vice Smith; Frederick Hubbard, to the Dryad (recommissioned); Charles May, to the Asia, additional, vice Rockett; Henry A. Beaver, to the Cambridge, additional, vice Blampey; John Blampey, to the Indus, additional, vice Edwards; John McCarthy, to the Indus, additional, vice Hicks; John Alford, to the Asia, for the Phaeton; Charles O. H. Martin, to the Excellent, vice Alford: Henry W. Webb, to the Fantome, vice Sweeny.

COASTGUARD.

Surgeons and Agents—Mr. Frederick W. Apthorp, to Chichester Harbour, vice Dutton; Mr. Thomas Baron, to Killingholme, for service in the Rapid, vice Pears.

Chief Boatmen—Thomas Neill, Malahide, to be chief boatman-in-charge, Ballycroneen, vice Grogan, pensioned; John Wynn, Upper Cove, to be chief boatman-in-charge, Dunany Point, vice Stewart, pensioned; Richard Jeffers, Castletown, to be chief boatman-in-charge, Ballygally, vice Spencer, promoted.

Commissioned Boatmen—William Crowley, Balbriggan, to be chief boatman, Malahide, vice Neill, promoted; Edward W. Pearce, Arthurstown, to be chief boatman, Upper Cove, vice John Wynn, promoted; John Bell, Beer, to be chief boatman, Wyke, vice James Bennett, promoted.

ALEXANDRA, Capt. Harry Rawson, C.B., flagship of Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, K.C.B., was at Malta on Dec. 31, with the Monarch, Inflexible, Superb, Iris, Hecla, Condor, Cockatrice, and Helicon.

AMETHYST, Capt. Brent. senior naval officer on the South-east Coast of America, was at Monte Video on Dec. 12, and would remain there for Christmas. The Rambler, at Monte Video, was going to Buenos Ayres; the Rifleman was at Falkland Islands, and would remain; the Wrangler, then at Colonia, was to return to Monte Video, where she will remain.

CANADA, Capt. Durrant, arrived at St. Kitt's on Jan. 7, and will leave on Jan. 12 for Antigua.

EURYALUS, Capt. Hastings, C.B., flagship of Rear-Admiral Sir W. Hewett, V.C., was at Suakim on Dec. 26, and would remain. The London was at Zanzibar, and will be paid off on arrival of H.M.S. Orontes on Jan. 16. The Briton would leave Trincomalee at the beginning of December for Calcutta. The Tourmaline left Zanzibar on Dec. 6 for Tamatave, conveying Consul Graves and Vice-Consul Pickersgill; she will remain as senior officer on the coast of Madagascar. The Woodlark was at Suakim, and would remain. The Ranger was at Suakim; will leave for Aden on Dec. 27, calling at Musawwá for mails, &c., returning to Suakim. The Dragon was at Bombay, and will probably proceed to the Persian Gulf when defects are made good. The Philomel was in the Persian Gulf, and remains. The Sphinx arrived at Suakim on Dec. 25, and will shortly visit Musawwá. The Coquette left Suakim on Dec. 23 for Musawwá.

GOSHAWK, Lieut. and Com. W. J. Moore, arrived at Madeira on Jan. 8, and would probably leave on Jan. 10 for Cape Coast Castle.

HIMALAYA, Capt. Palliser, from Malta and Gibraltar on Dec. 29 and Jan. 2 respectively, arrived at Portsmouth on Monday. She brought home the paid-off crews of the Superb, Iris, and Condor, as also drafts from the Mediterranean garrisons. She left Portsmouth on Tuesday for Plymouth, to make good defects. The Himalaya will take on board a new crew for the Nelson, and Naval supernumeraries for the Australian station, and leave Plymouth for Sydney, N.S.W., on Jan. 29.

HUMBER, Com. Cæsar Hawkins, arrived at Port Said on Monday, and sailed at once for Suakim and Zanzibar.

JUMNA, Capt. Singleton, arrived at Malta on Monday, en route for Bombay.

MAGPIE, Com. the Hon. Foley Vereker, was at Singapore on Dec. 7, when the captain and officers of the ship gave an "At Home" to the residents at the Tanglin Club, which had been kindly placed at their disposal for the purpose. The party was a great success.

MYRMIDON, Com. Alfred Carpenter, was commissioned on Jan. 10 at Sheerness. She will resume the surveying work in the Red Sea, commenced two years ago by Capt. Pelham Aldrich in the Fawn. Owing to the enormous expense of refitting the Myrmidon, it is generally believed that she will be the last wooden vessel taken in hand at any of the Royal Dockyards, composite vessels being found far cheaper to refit, and also more durable.

NORTHAMPTON, Capt. Digby, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir John Commerell, V.C. A correspondent, writing from Bermuda, says:—"Just a line to tell you of a few movements out here which may interest your readers. First, I must tell you that the Northampton has been on shore. She went outside Bermuda for shot practice, and when she returned it was late in the day, so they anchored in Grassy Bay. During the night it blew a perfect hurricane, and she dragged and went ashore. She was on shore about four days, and had to take out about 400 tons before she could be towed off, which was done by the Canada, she being the only ship capable of doing anything, for the Garnet and Flamingo were in the hands of dockyard: a fine fleet to protect the interests of the British nation! About 30 feet of the keel appears to have been rubbed off, but no further damage done. A court-martial sat on the 13th ult. to try the captain, staff commander, and the officers of the middle and morning watches. Captain and staff commander acquitted, and the officers of the watches severely reprimanded. The Griffon has gone to Haitian waters and the Foam to Jamaica; the Garnet sailed for different ports in the West Indies; Flamingo at Bermuda, and so is the Fantome. The Tenedos has arrived safely at Bermuda, and will go into dock for repairs, which will take at least two months. Two men were killed aloft in the Northampton on the 18th ult. Sir Thomas Brassey was at Bermuda during the time the Northampton was on shore, so he will be able to give his colleagues a good account of the affair."

PEGASUS, Com. A. K. Bickford, was at Penang on Jan. 4.

Capt. A. L. Douglas, R.N., who takes over the command of H.M.S. Serapis at Portsmouth, in succession to Capt. A. E. Dupuis, is an officer who has seen much active service on the coast of Africa and elsewhere. He was specially selected as instructor in the use of Harvey's torpedo to the men of the Channel and Reserve Squadrons in 1872, and as Director of the Imperial Japanese Naval College in Yeddo, for his valuable services in connection with which he received the thanks of the Emperor of Japan and the Lords of the Admiralty.

The Admiralty purpose bringing out a new edition of the "Steam Manual," for the use of the Fleet and the Dockyards, and have entrusted the revision to Mr. J. H. Ellis, late Chief Inspector of Machinery at Portsmouth.

The Queen's Physician, Dr. Fairbank, has written strongly recommending LENTILLA, or TONIC DAILY FOOD. It cures indigestion, heartburn, constipation, liver and stomach complaints, &c., besides having such wondrous nourishing properties. Makes soups, porridge, biscuits, puddings, custards, &c. Tins, 1 lb., 1s 6d; ½ lb., 10d. Barrels, 28 lb., 30s; 14 lb., 16s. Of all Chemists. Proprietor, H. J. DEACON, Beckenham, Kent.

THE CHANNEL SQUADRON.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT).

Gibraltar, January 5, 1884.

On Saturday last, the 29th, there was a review on the North Front of all the available troops in garrison. The Duke of Edinburgh, who wore a General's uniform, as Hon. Col. of the Royal Marines, accompanied the Governor, Sir John Adye, to witness it. The division, under the command of Lieut.-Gen. Adams, was composed of two brigades, the first consisting of detachments of Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers and the North Lancashire Regiment, under Col. Brackenbury, C.B., R.A., and the second of the Essex and Berkshire Regts. and the Durham L.I., under Col. White, Essex Regt. They marched past in double-company columns, and then massed columns, after which there was a short sham-fight. When cease firing was sounded, the division formed in line of quarter-columns advanced in review order, and gave a Royal salute, which brought the afternoon's proceedings to a close. On, Monday we had general exercise aloft in the forenoon. The Duke went over to Tangier in the Forward for the day, returning in the evening. In the afternoon a football match was played, Army v. Navy, the military got the best of it, scoring three tries to nothing. The Himalaya came in on Wednesday morning, and after coaling and taking in a few passengers for England, left again in the afternoon. She had on board the old crews of the Superb, Iris, and Condor, homeward bound from Malta, on paying off. The next morning the Jumna passed, outward bound. On Thursday night, the Governor and Lady Adye gave a New Year's ball at the Convent. The Duke attended it, as did also a large number of officers of the Squadron. There were about 500 guests present, but it was not overcrowded, as the rooms at the Convent are so admirably adapted for ball-giving on a large scale. The decorations were very pretty, the music good, both in selection and execution, the floor capital, and the whole enjoyable in the extreme. Last night the Garrison Dramatic Company repeated, for the especial benefit of the Squadron, a performance, which they had given a short time previously, of the comedy so dear to amateurs, "Still Waters Run Deep," and the very excellent farce, "A Thumping Legacy." Both pieces were done full justice to, and were received with much applause. General regret is felt here that the Dramatic Company are about to lose the valuable services of Capt. Moore Lane, who for some time past has been their mainstay. He leaves shortly with the North Lancashire Regiment for India. The United States' frigate Trenton, Capt. Phythian, has called in here on her way to the East from New York. She arrived on Dec. 28, and left on Jan. 3. She has on board the Corean Minister, who has been in America contracting a treaty between the two countries; he is accompanied by a secretary and an attaché. These two generally wear European dress, but the Minister himself always appears in the national dress, which is very peculiar. The Trenton, on leaving here, touches first at Marseilles, whence the Embassy are to visit Paris and probably London before continuing their journey home. The Governor of Algeciras, Gen. José de Aizpúrua, paid an official visit to the Duke on Tuesday, who returned it yesterday. The ships of the Squadron are taking it in turn to make runs with Whitehead torpedoes from the torpedo-boat attached to the Dockyard, each ship supplying a full boat's crew, including stokers, and small-arm firing at the rifle-range has been commenced. Special and privilege leave have been given as usual, and a day's general leave has been given to each watch. The 1st Division, Minotaur, Sultan, and Neptune, remain secured alongside the Mole; and the 2nd, Agincourt, Northumberland, and Achilles, moored off the neutral ground. Another correspondent, writing from Gibraltar on Jan. 2, announces the occurrence of a serious riot on shore among the Naval liberty men, five of whom assaulted and injured a civilian so severely that his life is despaired of. He continues:—"All the public-houses have been closed, and it seems likely that the blue-jackets will have anything but a pleasant time. The men who committed the attack are in prison. It is very unfortunate that this occurrence should have taken place, especially as the blue-jackets have a very bad reputation here, gained principally by their bad conduct whenever general leave is given. This affair must be put down to the men in the eastern division, as the Plymouth ships do not commence to give their leave until noon to-morrow, and now there is every probability of it being stopped."

The Duke of Edinburgh assisted at the concert given at the theatre at Gibraltar on Jan. 11, for the benefit of the widow and children of the late bandmaster of the 56th Regt. His Royal Highness played the violin obbligato to Gounod's "Ave Maria." An official dinner party was given on Jan. 1, by Capt. the Hon. E. Fremantle, R.N., and Mrs. Fremantle, followed by another on Jan. 2, at the Palace, the residence of Sir H. Burford-Hancock, the Chief Justice of Gibraltar; H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh was present at both dinner parties.

At the quarterly meeting of the directors of the Naval Medical Supplemental Fund, held on the 8th inst., Sir W. N. E. Smart, K.C.B., M.D., Inspector-General, in the chair, the sum of £86 was distributed amongst the several applicants.

The Admiralty have granted the Naval pension of £50 per annum, vacant by the death of Com. F. H. Prior, to Retired Com. G. B. Goolden.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in packets, labelled—"JAMES EPPS and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence.

THE FEATHER BONNET.

SIR,—Perhaps you will do me the favour to give a place to a few lines on a head-dress for our Auxiliaries. Some time ago, I observed that it was complained of the want of a suitable head-dress for the Highland Militia corps in full dress. The small bonnet was not deemed sufficient. Hoping to be of some use, I caused a plain helmet, with a neat thistle at the top, and the usual check band to be prepared, and I submitted this to the authorities at the War Office. I am not aware of the result; but I see there is a proposal to do away with the martial feather bonnet, which I was proud to wear in the 42nd Royal Highlanders, then handed it over to my son in the 78th Highlanders. It cost £12, and was good wear. It should not be too high, and "the fox-tails" kept in restraint. Those in authority would, no doubt, see to this, and their orders should be respectfully submitted to.—I am, &c.,

J. E. ALEXANDER, General.

Teignmouth, Devon, Jan. 7.

ADMIRALTY FORETHOUGHT.

SIR,—I noticed in the columns of a daily paper that H.M.S. Jumna sailed from Portsmouth on Saturday, the 29th ult., in a "dense fog." Now, Sir, on board this ship there were nearly 1,600 human beings, the entire regiment of the 7th Dragoon Guards forming part of her living cargo. Might I ask if the Admiralty have secured the special intervention of Providence, that they can with impunity send their ships to sea in perfect safety, no matter what the state of the weather may be? It does not appear to me that her Majesty's ships have any immunity from shipwreck or other disaster, and to despatch a valuable ship, having on board valuable lives, to sea in a "dense fog" is, to my mind, a most inhuman proceeding. During the prevalence of the late heavy fogs in the Channel, frequent collisions between vessels took place, and many ships went ashore and lives were lost. One would imagine that the Army was full to repletion, and that the loss of a thousand men or so was of no consequence. There was no earthly reason why the Jumna should not have been detained for 12 or 24 hours. I trust, Sir, that you will, in the interests of humanity and common-sense, either publish this letter, or notice the subject prominently in your journal.—I am, &c.,

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL is universally in high repute for its unprecedented success during the last eighty years, in promoting the growth, restoring, improving, and beautifying the human hair. It may now also be had in a golden colour, and is especially suited for fair-haired children. Ask anywhere for Rowland's Macassar Oil, and avoid spurious imitations. Sizes 3s 6d, 7s, 10s 6d, and 21s; sent by post for 3d above these prices to A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20 Hatton Garden, London.

London Amusements.

Twelfth Night at DRURY LANE was celebrated with all the honours on Monday evening. After the elaborately embellished pantomime of "Cinderella" was brought to a conclusion, the stage was filled at midnight by more than 200 guests, all more or less celebrated, invited by the liberal lessee, Mr. Augustus Harris, to witness the annual cutting of "the Baddeley cake," and partake of the supplementary concomitants so generously provided by the manager. In the front of the house, occupying stalls, pit, and boxes, were to be seen the subordinate members of the company, with others employed by the management, enjoying portable banquets similarly provided, and having an uninterrupted view of a scene they are likely long to remember. Mr. James Fernandez, in his official capacity as Master of the Drury Lane Fund, in an admirable speech, explained the history and conditions of the Baddeley bequest, and cut the huge twelfth cake in the long-prescribed fashion.

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE was opened on Monday night by the English Opera Company, whose performances have been so successful during a prolonged provincial tour, with Victor Nessler's opera of "The Piper of Hamelin." The English version is ably rendered by Mr. Henry Hersee, and the vocal executants, Madame Rose Hersee, Miss Armstrong, Miss Devrient, and Messrs. McGuckin, James Sauvage, Rousby, and Charles Lyall, most adequately interpret the pleasing music of the composer. On Tuesday evening "Maritana" was performed, and "Faust," with Miss Julia Gaylord and Mr. F. C. Packard, and the indispensable "Il Trovatore" have varied the operatic programme of the week. Mr. J. T. Carrodus is the leader of the orchestra, and Mr. Gilbert H. Betjemann the conductor.

The SAVOY THEATRE has secured another decided success by the production of "The Princess Ida," in which Sir Arthur Sullivan's admirable rendering of the lyrics of Mr. W. S. Gilbert proves once again how happy is the alliance of composer and author. The libretto is a revised version of Mr. Gilbert's musical burlesque produced at the Olympic in January, 1870, but the text has been somewhat expanded, and new songs have been supplied full of quaint drollery. Miss Leonora Braham as the Princess Ida, Miss Brandram as the cynical Lady Blanche, and Miss Jessie Bond as the lively Melissa, are prominent in the cast; while Mr. Durward Lely as Cyril, Miss George Grossmith as King Gama, Mr. Bracy as Prince Hilarion, and Mr. Temple and Mr. Barrington as Arac and King Hildebrand, sing and act with excellent effect, though hardly filling the positions to which they have been accustomed. Lavish expenditure has been bestowed upon the costumes, and Messrs. Emden and Hawes have supplied some very picturesque scenery. Since the first night, Mr. Alfred Cellier has officiated as conductor, and some judicious compression has brought the representation within more reasonable limits.

The NOVELTY THEATRE in Great Queen Street, Long Acre, seems at last likely to prove a successful speculation, under the proprietorship of Miss Nelly Harris. Mr. Wilkie Collins's effective drama of "The New Magdalen,"—originally produced at the Olympic May 19, 1873, after a consecutive run of two hundred nights, had its prosperous career prolonged at the Charing Cross Theatre in January, 1875, showing how firm a hold the powerful acting of Miss Ada Cavendish as Mercy Merrick had taken of the play-going public—has been revived. Resuming her original character, and playing it with force and finish, this accomplished actress again succeeds in enthralling the attention of her audience. Aided by an excellent company and appropriate accessories, the striking situations of the drama forcibly impress the imagination of the spectators. Mr. Frank Archer advantageously resumes his original assumption of the Rev. Julian Grey, Mr. Quinton plays Horace Holmcroft with ease and spirit, Miss Louise Willes is earnest and emphatic as Grace Roseberry, and Miss Le Thière, again appearing as the stately and refined Lady Janet Roy, exhibits well-studied art in a difficult department of the stage, with possibly the excusable reflection that there need be no fear of a rival.

The new theatre, erected for Mr. Edgar Bruce, at the corner of Coventry Street, Piccadilly, is to be designated the PRINCE'S THEATRE. The opening is fixed for Friday next, the 18th inst., and the first programme will comprise Mr. W. S. Gilbert's fairy comedy of "The Palace of Truth."

The 200th representation of the highly successful comedy, "Confusion," will take place at the VAUDEVILLE on Wednesday next.

Com. Eardley-Wilmot, employed on service at the Admiralty, has been directed by their Lordships to confer with the various Dockyard authorities as to the fitting of conning-towers in the Raleigh and other ships being completed or brought forward for commission.

HOW TO AVOID THE INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF STIMULANTS.—The present system of living—partaking of too rich foods, as pastry, saccharine and fatty substances, alcoholic drinks, and an insufficient amount of exercise—frequently deranges the liver. I would advise all bilious people, unless they are careful to keep the liver acting freely, to exercise great care in the use of alcoholic drinks, avoid sugar, and always dilute largely with water. Experience shows that porter, mild ales, port wine, dark sherries, sweet champagne, liqueurs, and brandies, are all very apt to disagree; while light white wines, and gin or old whisky largely diluted with soda water, will be found the least objectionable. ENO'S FRUIT SALT is peculiarly adapted for any constitutional weakness of the liver; it possesses the powers of reparation when digestion has been disturbed or lost, and places the invalid on the right track to health. A world of woes is avoided by those who keep and use ENO'S FRUIT SALT, therefore no family should ever be without it. CAUTION.—Legal Rights are protected in every Civilised Country. Examine each bottle, and see the Capsule is marked "ENO'S FRUIT SALT." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Directions, in Sixteen Languages, how to Prevent Disease. Prepared only at ENO'S Fruit Salt Works, Hatcham, London, S.E., by J. C. ENO'S Patent.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—DEBILITATED CONSTITUTIONS.—When climate, age, or hardships have undermined the health, skin diseases are prone to arise, and augment the existing weakness. Holloway's medicaments daily prove most serviceable even under the most untoward circumstances. This well known and highly-esteemed unguent possesses the finest balsamic virtues, which soothe and heal, without inflaming or irritating the most tender skin or most sensitive sore. Holloway's Ointment and Pills are infallible for curing bad legs, varicose veins, swelled ankles, erysipelas, scaly skin, and every variety of skin disease. Over all these disorders Holloway's remedies exert a quick and favourable action, and, where cure is possible, gradually but certainly arrive at that consummation. They are invaluable in the cure of scrofula and scurvy.

ARMY and MILITIA.

Officers of the Army prepared for Promotion, Officers of the Militia for the MILITARY COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS, at
BERKSHIRE.

The Abbey is situated on the Thames, about six miles from Oxford, and five minutes' walk from Abingdon Station, G.W.R.

The Studies are under the direction of Lieutenant-Colonel COLVILE, late 11th Foot, Graduate of the Staff College (Author of "Military Tribunals"), assisted by Captain STEWART, late Royal Artillery, Lieutenant-Colonel WHALLEY, late 2nd Dragoon Guards, and one other experienced Officer.

RESULTS FOR 1883.

In March, nine competed, two passed, and two others were offered Cavalry Commissions; one obtained special mention in Tactics with 525 marks, another special mention in Law with 500 marks.

In September, 1883, eight competed, half passed, taking the following places on the list:—3rd, 17th (tie), 38th, and 50th (the first attempt).

Next Term commences January 5, 1884.

Further particulars, on application to

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

At the late Examination held on September 19 and 20, Major DE THOREN and Major MORGAN have fully maintained their former good repute for passing candidates. They sent up three and passed two,—
Mr. H. G. Morgan,
Mr. W. S. Carey.

At this establishment the classes are small, and the pupils receive a great deal of individual attention, which enables them the easier to grasp the subject.

MILITARY EDUCATION, GERMANY.—Colonel BERDOE WILKINSON, late R.E., formerly in charge of the Ordnance Survey in Ireland, and Lieutenant-Colonel WILKINSON SHAW, M.A. (Staff College), late Garrison-Instructor at Aldershot, prepare Candidates for Sandhurst and Woolwich, and for Line Commissions through the Militia.

At the five Militia Competitions which have taken place since September 1, 1881, Colonel WILKINSON and Lieutenant-Colonel SHAW have secured for their Pupils THIRTY-SEVEN COMMISSIONS, although they have only Prepared and sent up a very Limited Number of Candidates. A list of successful Pupils, showing the high places taken by them, will be furnished on application.

At the Militia Literary Examinations held during the same period, a Number of Pupils have also passed; in this Competition the FIRST PLACE was taken in April last by Lieutenant Lord Skelmersdale, and the SECOND PLACE in the recent October Examination by the only candidate sent up, Lieutenant the Honourable Victor A. Pelham.

The General Score for all Examinations now amounts to SEVENTY-ONE SUCCESSES achieved by Pupils during the last two years.

LIEUTENANTS of MILITIA desirous of competing for Line Commissions can be received by the Rev. WALTER BAKER, M.A., at Batcombe Rectory, Evercreech, Bath. They will be thoroughly prepared in all Military Subjects by two Officers who for several years past have been engaged with distinguished success in this special work.

Great individual attention is secured, both Instructors are resident and give their whole time, very few Pupils are taken, and steady work is insisted on. Since the introduction of the Military Competitive, out of Forty-four Lieutenants of Militia sent up, Twenty-seven have been successful, several taking high places in the list.

A Large Staff of Experienced Tutors, all resident, assist in preparing for the Qualifying Examinations, and for the Sandhurst and Woolwich Competitions.

References to parents of pupils successful at all Examinations, INCLUDING SANDHURST and MILITIA COMPETITIVE in 1882 and 1883. All sent up for the last Militia Qualifying Examination passed.

THE MOUNTED SERVICE BOOT.—PATENT.

As adopted by the Volunteer Mounted Infantry.

A COMPLETELY NEW and USEFUL INVENTION. By a CAVALRY OFFICER.

It is equally suitable for riding or walking, and consists of an upper and lower part, which, when adjusted by the peculiar arrangement of the spur, forms a complete riding boot, and at the same time the comfort of a boot and gaiter for walking is ensured. The lower part can be worn also as an ordinary walking boot. ECONOMY, COMFORT, and PORTABILITY.

Specially recommended to all Officers and Sportsmen going Abroad.

OROIDE GOLD JEWELLERY (REGD.)

"Recommends itself not alone to those of limited means, but to the wealthy, who, when frequenting large gatherings, whether at racecourses, theatres, public meetings, or even on that sacred thoroughfare, the king's highway, have known what it is to be robbed of their valuables."

OROIDE GOLD WATCHES,
Accurate timekeepers, 21s to 50s, safe and free per post (registered).
The "SERVICE" KEYLESS WATCH,
Open face, jewelled in eight holes, Two Guineas, post free.

"The watches of this patent are in no respect different from gold ones. The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose." OROIDE GOLD SCARF PINS, 2s 6d to 5s, post free.
ALBERT CHAINS, in all the Leading Fashions of fine Gold, 7s 6d and 10s 6d.

ON November 25 last, Major-General Gordon ("Chinese") drew up a "Memorandum on the present state of affairs in Egypt, consequent upon the defeat of Colonel Hicks's army," which was published in the Army and Navy Gazette of December 1, 1883. In that paper, which we commend to the attention of our readers and the public, the fall of Khartoum was indicated as likely if the Mahdi advanced, and it was pointed out that with Khartoum would fall Senaer and the provinces south-east and south-west, with all their garrisons; that the revenues of those provinces would cease, and all the expenses of government, &c., fall on Egypt Proper. Up to the time of writing, the Mahdi has not advanced, some of the garrisons of the posts south of it have effected a junction with the defenders of the city, and the conditions dealt with by General Gordon have not actually arisen. But the British Government have, nevertheless, resolved that Khartoum must fall at the sound of their trumpet, and in defiance, as it seems to us, of all political and strategical considerations and exigencies, certainly in direct antagonism to General Gordon, who, as a soldier, as an engineer, as a Governor of the very territory in which we are concerned, pointed out that "if Khartoum were abandoned or taken, there would be no object in defending any position south of Assouan, more especially as the Nubian and Bahhuda Deserts lie between that town and Khartoum," they have, it is said, determined on taking a position at Wady Halfa, on the Second Cataract, which is as bad a compromise as could be well imagined; and on ordering the unfortunate officer of the Khedive who commands at Khartoum to evacuate that city (for such it is, of the African type), and thereby rouse to active opposition to the retreat all the hordes which are in possession of the country between the White Nile and the Red Sea. Not to speak of the vast region and of the garrisons which would thus be abandoned, there is the difficulty, as we believe insuperable now, of drawing away the troops of Khartoum in such a way as to cover the fugitive population. Whatever may be the result, there can be not the smallest foundation for the assertion that the Government could not have saved Khartoum, even if it proved they could not save it now. If, on the news of Hicks Pasha's defeat, orders had been sent to India to send the 6,000 Native Infantry, two regiments of Cavalry, and the Aden troops available to land at Kosseir and march across to Keneh (eight marches), on the Nile, below Assouan, all the Gendarmerie and the Army under Evelyn Wood could have been sent on with the utmost security to Berber, on the bend of the Nile south of the Cataracts, below Wady Halfa, to open communications with Khartoum, and ere this day the city would not only have been saved, but have been a base of operations against the Madhi and his rebels. Baker's project of a march from Massowah direct on Khartoum, with the Abyssinians on the left flank, may have been more difficult, but it certainly would have been very effective; and that officer, bold and cautious as he has proved himself to be on the spot, and full of information, would not have proposed the operation had he doubted its success. The relief of Sinkat, however, could not, it seems, be tried with the means at his disposal, and far less could he march to relieve Khartoum; but is it not incredible that no policy could be formulated, either of fighting or flying, as soon as Hicks Pasha's force was annihilated? The Egyptians had a policy, indeed. They were all for saving the Soudan, and fighting for it as well as they could; and when the loyal and able men we had with such delight installed as Ministers were ordered to abandon the Soudan, and hand over the great Nile provinces to slavery and barbarism, they resigned. The Mahdi, meantime, gives us every chance. He certainly takes a leaf out of our book, and likes plenty of time to deliberate. Meantime, in London especially, there is an astounding clamour in the Press. "Let the Government be firm and energetic," exclaims every organ, with a voice worth listening to, or not. But how the firmness and energy are to be displayed are points on which the organs differ immensely. "Seize on Egypt at once," cries one, "and put Englishmen in all offices, under a British Dictator at Cairo, and all will be well!" "Establish a Protectorate, but do not annex," says another. "Keep Khartoum, and drop the Soudan like a hot potato, we beg of you!" shouts one. "Drop Khartoum and fortify Berber," suggests another. "Send Indian troops instanter!" "No; ask the Turks to do the work!" "Whatever you do, keep the Turks out!" "Keep Clifford quiet." "Make Clifford Lloyd and Baring absolute." "Restore Ismail." "Do not think of Ismail or Halim, whatever you do." "Tewfik is weak and unfit to govern." "Tewfik is insolent, and displays extraordinary resolution." But the general consensus is that Mr. Gladstone ought to declare that the British Army is to remain in Egypt for an indefinite period, and that no foreign Power will be allowed to interfere in the administration or settlement of the country. Meantime, the Khedive and the Ministers declare they will not consent to abandon the Soudan, and that they will hand over the administration to our representatives. "Capital!" cry the capitalists. "We will then have Egypt in our pockets, and Egypt will pay the cost of the Army, and the Bondholders will be secured." But is that so very certain? And are public faith and honour to be sacrificed to expediency, if the expediency be demonstrable or probable? Is England to lose her proud place as the Standard-bearer of Right among the Nations? Shall her voice be choked in her throat, if some great Power, with the precedent of Egypt, declares it is expedient to annex some European kingdom close to our shores? Has any one calculated the loss and the drain of life and money in guarding summer and winter some fancy frontier, across a fancy Egypt, from the Red Sea and across the Nile to the Libyan mountain ranges? Is it an undertaking to be accepted with gaiety to deal with the Arabs, the Berbers, the Soudanees, for our escape from the Upper Nile, and then to create an Anglo-African empire in the north, just as we have discovered that the idea is impracticable in the south of the Dark Continent? Surely, England is bound by the trust she has assumed to protect the Khedive, instead of counselling him to surrender the regions where his ancestors had introduced some show of civilisation and government, and had all but extinguished the slave-trade? To say she cannot fight the Mahdi—the Power that was ready to fight Russia "with or without allies" in 1870, that marched on Coomassie and Magdala—is preposterous. Egypt is its base, and the sea its highway, and there is only one impediment,—the price to be paid for redeeming our honour and our good name, and restoring our prestige to the operation. When that is done, and Egypt Proper is secure for taxpaying purposes, then let us march out, bag and baggage, in the full assurance that no one will venture to take the vacant place against our will.

WHEN the Unification system was first introduced into the Army Medical Department, Army Doctors were called upon to perform the duties of storekeepers, purveyors, &c. Of course, the Doctors protested against the imposition upon them of duties which they very properly considered both undignified and unprofessional. For a considerable time their complaints were unheeded, and it was not until this feeling of indignation became so pronounced as to debar candidates from coming forward for commissions in the Department, that an effort was made to relieve them of the work formerly carried out by the Purveyors' Branch. When the Director-General did take the matter up, it was in no uncertain spirit. He wrote a minute on the subject, couched in language of a most condemnatory nature. This minute has been not inaptly designated the charter of the Army Medical Department. The following extract may be quoted as evidence of the extent to which feeling was allowed to run at the time in Whitehall Yard:—"In accordance with Clause 44 of Army Circulars, 1873, the medical officer in charge of each station hospital took over the hospital equipment and stores, and became responsible for their safe custody, as well as for the rendering of hospital accounts, stoppages, &c. The clerical duties and responsibilities connected with the charge of equipment, dieting, &c., have been found to be so heavy, and to occupy so much of his time, that the performance of his duty as a medical officer is almost, if not altogether impossible. The natural consequence of such a condition of things is that at all the important station hospitals the services of one medical officer (the senior) are lost to the public, as far as his profession is concerned. It will not be difficult to understand that if the medical officer is to receive and take charge of stores, &c., deficiencies in which entail pecuniary loss to him, and at the same time to take charge of sick and wounded, loss of whom does not affect him financially, he is placed in a difficult position, for if his time is taken up in watching over the safe custody of the hospital equipment and in the preparation and rendering of accounts, cooking of diets, and the various duties required of him by Clause 44, he cannot devote his attention to the sick." It will be admitted that this is very clear and forcible language for a prominent official to address to the Secretary of State for War. The remedy proposed by the Director-General was to increase the number of the Army Hospital Corps, and to hand over the storekeeping and purveying duties to them; "and thus,"—we again quote the Director-General,—"release medical officers from a duty which they are not intended to perform, and allow them to revert to their legitimate duties." Now, we consider that every word the Director-General wrote was perfectly fair argument, and the strict, literal truth. His views were thoroughly in accord with those of thinking soldiers. It was unquestionably derogatory to professional men that they should be removed from their legitimate duties, and converted into indifferent quartermasters; called upon, in fact, to discharge duties little more important than those of chemists' assistants. But, strange to say, within a few weeks of his penning the crushing minute from which we have quoted, this same Director-General proposed that the members of his staff should once more be taken from their professional work, and turned into commanders of men. To us, it seems that the disciplinary duties now imposed upon the Army doctor are as unprofessional as those of storekeepers and purveyors,—nay, more so. Whilst we should be the first to strenuously oppose any attempt that might be made to again lower the doctors' social and professional status, by converting him for the nonce into an indifferent sort of storekeeper or purveyor, we shall continue to condemn a system which requires him to discharge duties connected with the command, drill, and discipline of men, when he could be very much better employed in the particular sphere for which he has been specially trained. The doctor has so much to do in treating the sick, healing the wounded, studying his profession, and devising means for the prevention and spread of disease, that it is not fair either to him, his profession, or the State, which pays him highly as a professional man, to lower him in the eyes of the service, and render the organisation of his Department a byword throughout a noble profession.

THE position held by his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh as an Admiral of the Royal Navy, as the late head of the Royal Naval Reserve, and last, but not least, as Master of the Trinity Board, has on many occasions induced his Royal Highness to take an interest in the well-being of the Mercantile Marine of this country, in the relation held by that service to the Royal Navy. His Royal Highness, not long since, spoke of the Naval Reserve as being composed of the pick of the Merchant Navy. This, of course, refers to seamen. We have from time to time advocated the desirability of a reform in the Board of Trade regulations with regard to the number of foreigners employed in our merchant ships, with a view to their reduction in numbers, so as to raise the status of the British seaman, and cause a larger and better supply to be depended on by the Royal Navy in times of need. There is, however, another class in the Mercantile Marine upon which the Navy, through the Reserve, is also in a measure supposed to depend, and that is the class of apprentices who are embryo officers, and from whose ranks the Midshipmen of the Naval Reserve are recruited. By an Order in Council of October 15, 1872, a number of Midshipmen, not exceeding 200, were authorised to be added to the Naval Reserve from those lads who had been educated for a period of two years in the Worcester or Conway, training-ships, and had joined the Mercantile Marine. On quitting these training-ships, a fair knowledge of navigation has been instilled into the youngsters, who then, in order to complete their nautical education, are apprenticed to such shipowners as are prepared to receive them, and they go through the term of their apprenticeship in a sailing vessel. During this period, in order that they may be prepared to pass their first examination for second mate when the time comes, it is absolutely necessary that the knowledge gained in the training-ships should be kept up; and with other apprentices, who have not had the advantage of the training system, it is still more necessary that they should receive from the captains or officers of the ship a certain amount of instruction in navigation, as well as in seamanship, and the question is,—Do captains of ships interest themselves to see that this instruction is imparted? We fear that in very many cases little interest is shown, and that where real instruction takes place, it is the exception, and not the rule throughout the Merchant Service, for, though it may be attended to by a conscientious Captain here and there, it is rare to find the slightest attempt made to impart a knowledge of navigation to the apprentice, either in taking sights or working a day's work; there are many masters who do not recognise this as part of their duty, and if a youngster gains any insight at all into this important part of his profession, it is only through the kindly feeling of perhaps one of the junior officers. Not long ago, a passenger in a large sailing ship took compassion on one of the apprentices, and offered to teach him navigation, and on one occasion when it was the youngster's watch below, he took him to the cabin table to give him a lesson, but only once; he was told by the Captain that apprentices could not be brought in there, and so ended the philanthropic efforts of the passenger. Thus, although this young fellow might, the next voyage, be in the cabin in his own right as third mate, yet because he was an apprentice he could not be admitted even for half an hour to learn an important part of his profession. It is true that the indentures which bind the apprentice, after going through a preamble as to the duties expected from him, provide that, "in consideration whereof, the said master will, and shall, use all proper means to teach the said apprentice, or cause him to be taught, the business of a seaman," &c., but this clause is not sufficiently definite. The "business of a seaman" might well be interpreted a sufficient instruction in practical seamanship to create an A.B., and there end the obligation, ignoring the fact that the generality of apprentices do not enter simply to become able seamen, but officers, and that, therefore, they require an education distinct from that to be acquired before the mast; an instruction in navigation which will prepare them for the examination they will have to meet. So long as the terms of indentures remain as at present, so long may captains and owners feel that they are in no way bound to impart further instruction than they, for the most part, now do; but it is surely in the interests of the Merchant Service generally that the status of its rising officers should be improved, by altering the terms of indentures, was to provide for more certain instruction than apprentices at present receive. If smart and good officers are expected to be raised from apprentices, owners should be bound by the Board of Trade to compel their captains to give them instruction, not only in seamanship, but in navigation, the use of the sextant, and of charts; and entries should be made in the ship's log of the number of hours per week given to each apprentice. Failing this, without just cause, the apprentice should have grounds for damages on his return to England. If masters of vessels realised that any failure on their part to insure necessary instruction would subject them to a fine, or, at least, to a misunderstanding with their owners, the present happy-go-lucky state of things would soon be altered for the better; and aspirants for the Royal Naval Reserve would have better opportunities of keeping up or increasing their knowledge in navigation, after quitting the training ships, than they have at present.

Captain John F. G. Grant, R.N., has been selected by the Admiralty to relieve Captain Barnardiston as Senior Naval Officer in charge of the dockyard establishment at Bermuda.

It would be more to the credit of Alderman Baker and his Portsmouth supporters if, instead of troubling the Admiralty about Seaman Endersby, and thus damaging the discipline of our Navy, he and they identified themselves with the learned Recorder of that borough, and made the Contagious Diseases question the theme for discussion and legislation. The Recorder, in his opening speech on Monday last, remarked on the fearful effect of the suspension of the Act, and the vile degradation of the female portion of the town, extending itself even to those of minor age, as well as the misery which it must entail on both sexes. In fact, Portsmouth can boast of having reached a stage in this disease even worse than that which existed before the introduction of the Act. It is discreditable to find, in our largest arsenal, a citizen, holding a foremost position among his townsmen, agitating for measures which can only increase the insubordination now, unfortunately, so prevalent in our Fleet; while the lives of the present generation of seamen and those of their future offspring may be ruined by disease because Radical politicians have not the honesty to oppose the false sentimentality of their Parliamentary gods. By the action of this alderman and others, such mutinous rascals as Endersby and Price appear as martyrs, when they were only rewarded according to their deeds, and deserved the lash in addition to what they received. If the discipline of the Navy is to be subject to the will and caprice of seaport shopkeepers, our Admirals and Captains had better resign their appointments, than allow a noble profession to be ruled by the mob. We know that all who imitate Price and Endersby will find members of courts-martial acting justly, and in the interests of the service, without being deterred by political agitators.

While advocating the adoption of a general mess throughout the Naval service, we must protest against overcrowding mess places, such as we observe in the new pattern sloops (lately termed corvettes), of the Satellite class. Their wardroom is similar in size to that of the Osprey class, and intended to hold eight officers; but there being no gunroom, six officers of that rank increases the number of human beings to fourteen; a species of "crowding" which, during the long voyages for which the Pacific is famous, does not tend to equability of temperament. We, therefore, hope that the Admiralty will cause better arrangements to be made in vessels of this class now in course of preparation.

What is a "Vice-Admiral of the Coast?" This subject is about to be elucidated by Sir Sherston Baker, Barrister-at-Law. The work has the approval of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, who have subscribed to it. Intending subscribers should communicate with the author at Library Chambers, Temple.

Vice-Admiral Sir William Dowell and Staff left England on Wednesday in the P. and O. steamer Siam, for Hong Kong, where he is expected to arrive about March 3.

The Admiralty are revising the code of instructions for the prevention of fires in her Majesty's Dockyards. Their Lordships were recently forced to inquire "whether during the dinner hour the workshops are closed and the fires put out, or whether the shops are left open, and men told off to remain in charge." We wonder how private firms would carry on business under such administration.

We hear that since the recent change in the command of the Superb, the comfort of all on board has been materially reduced. We thought the Iron Duke episode would have been warning enough, but Captain Cleveland appears to be of a different opinion.

In selecting Captain Drummond to relieve Captain Fane in the command of the Tenedos, the Admiralty have chosen an officer eminently fitted for the delicate service on which the Tenedos is employed in watching our fishery interests on the coast of Newfoundland.

The policy of Lord Clarendon towards Portugal during the height of the slave trade, 1850-3, appears to be fast becoming a matter of history, and more especially as regards our control over that portion of the West Coast of Africa lying between 5 deg. 12 min. and 8 deg. south latitude, and which our distinguished Commanders on that station so faithfully carried out. Is the good work done by Hotham, Bruce, Eardley-Wilmot, and their gallant captains to be forgotten, and consigned to the shelves in Downing Street and the British Museum, because a Radical Government some 30 years after have not the courage to still deny to Portugal what Palmerston and his noble colleague at the Foreign Office so persistently withheld, and which that nation would never be able to administer, even were she aided in her occupation of the territory? We trust that the hand of the Government will be forced, when Parliament meets, by those gentlemen who last session so openly spoke in favour of our maintaining the right of unrestricted intercourse with the natives of the territory between the afore-mentioned parallels, as the interests of our commerce render the same imperative.

An enthusiastic and, we imagine, a greatly enamoured lady, writing to a weekly "gossip" from Nice, says,—"Captain Potter" (U.S. flagship Lancaster) "is the handsomest man ever was seen, and if the officers only fight as well as they dance, we should have to look out for ourselves, if we were at war with the United States."

Captain F. G. D. Bedford, R.N., has issued a "Sailor's Handbook," which, from its comprehensiveness, should find a place on board every ship and in every officer's library, whatever service the ship or the officer may be on. The work is as valuable to the merchant seaman as it is to the Naval officer. As Captain Bedford most justly remarks in his preface, "When about to leave one port for another, there are many questions which present themselves to a sailor, and which may be briefly and comprehensively summed up under these two headings, viz.:—(1), How to make the voyage to the best advantage; and (2), what conveniences will be found on arrival!" Under the first of these Captain Bedford classes the length of passage, both in time and distance; and, considering the season of the year, gives the best track to be followed; the atmospherical changes the vessel may possibly have to pass through; the charts and books required; and the pilotage and anchorage of the port bound to. Under the second heading, we find information about the Consular authorities; the telegraphic, postal, steam, and other means of communication; the amount of fresh supplies and naval stores that can be procured, and the facilities for watering, coaling, docking, and making good such repairs as may be needed. Many of these facts could, of course, be obtained from the Admiralty charts and sailing directions, but there has been a great want felt for many years of a summary of this information in a form ready to hand and eye. Captain Bedford's "Handbook" is, however, much more than a summary of these authorities. He has collected most valuable information from reliable sources, and in so doing, has been assisted by many of his brother-officers, and has also had the eminent co-operation of Commander T. A. Hull, R.N. This officer has drawn up concise sailing directions for each section of the work, seven in number, commencing with North America, and ending with the Pacific. Captain G. R. Noel, R.N., has also undertaken the compilation of the list of foreign ships-of-war, given at the end of the book. This table, or series of tables, we should say, will be found most reliable. Taking the French and English Navies for comparison, we find that France possesses 77 armoured ships, of 415,930 tons, and that England possesses 67 armoured ships, of 450,509 tons. It is surely time, therefore, that the Admiralty did commence "to move quickly" in the building line. We can strongly recommend this most useful handbook to the notice of all Naval men. It is of handy size, and very well got-up by the publishers, Messrs. Griffin and Co., of Portsmouth.

Three German squadrons will be commissioned for a term of five months in the course of the coming spring. The first or heavy division will be composed of four ironclads of the Sachsen class and a despatch-boat. The second or light division will consist of four ironclad gunboats of the Wespe type, and the third division will be formed of torpedo-boats only.

Admiral Courbet speaks very highly of the way in which the Foreign Legion behaved at the capture of Sontay. The men fought, he says, in the most gallant fashion, exhibiting remarkable solidity and the utmost devotion for the adoptive country. We believe that the privates in this corps are usually considered rather a rough lot, but that does not render them unfit for hard work. The Legion, which was created when Louis Philippe was King, earned the gratitude of France by aiding her to conquer Algeria, in which colony it is permanently stationed. It served during the siege of Sebastopol with so much credit, that when the Crimean War was over, Marshal Vaillant, who was then Minister of War, ordered the formation of two Foreign Regiments. In 1861, one of these regiments was suppressed, and the name of Legion has stuck to the one which remains, just as the Algerian skirmishers are called Turcos in unofficial language. The Legion also served in Mexico, and it is a very handy corps for any foreign expedition.

The Gartenlaube of last month (a German magazine, published in Leipzig) contains an article by the master of a brigantine called the Mataram, relating a wonderful story of piracy in the Chinese Seas. The Mataram sailed from Hong Kong for Amoy, under the Dutch flag. Among the crew were over a dozen European seamen, besides Chinamen. The Mataram is at one place boarded by "about 12 Chinese pirates." They take the ship and cargo, and allow the master to get off with his boat. After many days of storm and suffering, he reaches Singh Island, near Hong Kong. He offered no resistance to the pirates. Having gone ashore to lay his case before the Consul, he is informed that he will be introduced to the English Commodore and the American Admiral next day. He is then informed that the gunboat Swift is in Swatow, and is ordered to that port, which he reaches, and then leaves on board the Swift for Pratar Island. He next describes the hurry of the Swift, how they only had one hour on shore, where he picked up some of his things and others belonging to his vessel, and then leaves again with the Swift. His vessel has in the meantime been picked up by another ship, and is duly delivered over to him. He finishes up his narrative by saying:—"What a pity no Dutch man-of-war was there, otherwise the robbers would not have escaped punishment! The conduct of the Swift can only assist the pirates, and therefore I do not consider it wrong to say that the next vessel that should be plundered by the Chinese ought to be an English ship." The Chinese, however, know better than to tackle an English craft manned by a dozen British seamen.

From Copenhagen, we are informed that the Danish Government has decided to proceed this month with the armour-plate trials ordered last year. It is said that the French Creuzot Works, unable to get their trial steel-plate ready in time, has asked for delay, but that the Danish authorities have decided to proceed with the trials, and have informed the Messrs. Schneider that unless their plate is forthwith delivered, they will be excluded from the competition. This shows that even in Denmark no great opinion is held of solid steel armour. Indeed, it is only in France that it is used, and then only under water, and merely to encourage native industry.

A distinguished-service reward of £100 per annum has been conferred upon Lieutenant-General Sir R. Bright, K.C.B., who recently relinquished the command of the Meerut Division.

The approximate number of troops taking part in the manœuvres which commenced at Meean Meer on Saturday last is 6,500. The Cavalry Brigade, consisting of K-B, Royal Horse Artillery, 6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers), 8th Hussars, and the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, is under the command of Colonel A. R. D. Mackenzie. The 1st Infantry Brigade, 1st Goorkha Light Infantry and the 19th and 24th Punjab N.I., is under command of Colonel P. Story, 1st Goorkhas; and the 2nd Infantry Brigade, 30th Regiment, 4th Battalion, 60th Rifles, and 22nd Punjab N.I., and the 4th Goorkhas, under Colonel G. B. Wolseley, A.D.C.

A good-service pension has been conferred upon Colonel Sir Charles M. MacGregor, K.C.B., Quartermaster-General in India. The following is the official record of Colonel (local Major-General) MacGregor's war services:—Indian Mutiny, 1857-58-59.—Actions of Narnaul, Gangiri, Pettiala, and Mainpuri; siege and capture of Lucknow; operations in Oudh; actions of Barra, Nawabganj, Dariabad, and Bhamorighat (wounded); passage of the Gogra; actions of Viziragaon, Machligaon, Kamdakot, Maharajpore (wounded), Serwaghat (wounded), and Pachgaon (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp). China War, 1860.—Action of Sinho (twice wounded); surrender of Pekin (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp, brevet of Major). Bhootan Campaign, 1864-66.—Actions of Dalimkot (wounded), Chamorchi, Bala (wounded), and Nagola (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp, brevet of Lieutenant-Colonel). Abyssinian Expedition, 1867-68.—Action of Aragi; capture of Magdala (mentioned in despatches, medal). Afghan War, 1878-79-80.—Operations in the Bazaar and Jellalabad Valleys; action of Charasiah; capture of Kabul; operations round Kabul; recovery of guns near Kila Kasi; in command of 3rd Infantry Brigade, on the march from Kabul to the relief of Kandahar, and in the battle of September 1; in command of the Murree Field Force in the operations against the Murrees (mentioned in despatches, medal with three clasps and bronze star; C.B., K.C.B.)

The French Army for 1884 is to consist of 518,642 men, out of which must be taken 26,726 Gendarmes. The conscription for this year will furnish 161,631 recruits,—101,604 for the Infantry, 28,000 for the Artillery, 17,000 for the Cavalry, &c. The probability is that a Colonial Corps will be almost immediately created, with the consent of Parliament, so that the Government may always have in hand a force of 10,000 men for expeditionary purposes.

The unhappy "incompatibilities" which exist between the Red Prince and the Princess his wife, who is mother of the Duchess of Connaught, have been exercising the Berlin gossips and causing excitement in high places, but we believe the reports which have appeared in print are exaggerated.

The Minister of Education has moved in the South-Australian Assembly that, in order to encourage the breeding of horses in South Australia and their shipment from Port Darwin for the remount service in India, 99 years' leases of areas not exceeding 5,000 square miles of land south of the 26th parallel of latitude, and 10,000 square miles north of that latitude, be granted to any company whose bona fides should be satisfactory to the Government. He explained that lately a number of gentlemen had proposed to enter upon a scheme for breeding horses for India, and wrote to the Government upon the matter. They intended to form a company composed of Australians and Indians, that company to make direct overtures to the Indian Government to secure the right of supplying at any rate the major portion of the remounts required for the Indian service. The proposal underwent considerable discussion, but no decision was arrived at.

We believe that, as far as the rank and file were concerned, the appeal made by the French Government for volunteers to go to Tonquin fell very flat; and the fact is, that there was no inducement held out for men to go. The French soldier, being forced to serve, waits with impatience for the hour of his liberation to arrive, and it is very rare for a man to remain with his corps a day beyond his legal period. We see that the Progrès Militaire speaks of detachments of volunteers on their way to Tonquin, but these volunteers seem to have been drawn by lot. The Progrès, criticising these detachments, says:—"This raising of twelve men per Infantry regiment has permitted one to form some idea of what the mobilisation of a whole regiment would be in the way of equipment. The men left in campaigning uniform, without rations or ammunition, and yet their knapsacks and musettes were so stuffed with necessaries, linen, &c., that it would have been impossible for them to have carried a reserve of rations or cartridges, or even to fire a shot, encumbered as they were. We saw some men carrying a pair of red breeches under the arm (we hope a reserve pair)." The Progrès recommends some modifications. It thinks that no man should carry more than two shirts, that gloves should be done away with, and that buttons which do not require to be polished should be adopted.

The Globe of January 17 remarks that the views of the Commanding Officers outside the Metropolitan districts have yet to be taken on the question concerning which opinion was about equally divided at the conference of the Volunteer Metropolitan Commanding Officers at Pall Mall,—viz., that there should be several small and local, instead of one large and general Volunteer Review at Easter. Now, we believe the Horse Guards, or more properly the War Office, are putting out their fingers very decidedly, in order to get hold of the Volunteers, and appropriate them as a tangible part and portion of the Military body-politic of the kingdom, and that the action of conferences of Volunteer Commanding Officers, except as boards of advisers with purely consultative faculties, is likely to be greatly constrained. Last week there was a preliminary meeting of officers, after which Lord Ranelagh had an interview with General Higginson as the officer commanding the Home District, but failed to obtain any recognition of his delegation or of his representative character from that cautious and courteous officer. A reference to the Duke of Cambridge was not more successful, and the Horse Guards showed just the tip of an iron finger through a rent in the velvet glove with which they have hitherto generally stroked the purring Volunteer. But the cat may have claws, and may resent the touch of the cold steel on its back. It is a matter for very delicate handling, but no one can question, we think, the soundness of the views of the authorities at Pall Mall. There may be some soreness at the assumption of authority, and there may even be some friction and a little temper in the course of the operation; but if the Volunteers are to become body and soul, military and national, they must part with just so much of their voluntary principle as will enable them to render the service their magnificent organisation could give as an integral part of the Army available for the defence of the country; and they have shown enough of patriotism, spirit, and discipline in the past to induce us to think they will not shirk the sacrifice which every good citizen must make of some of his free-will.

The use of German moss litter as bedding for horses appears to be rapidly extending on the Continent, both in civil and military stables, in consequence of the advantages it possesses over straw or any other material yet tried. In a recent issue of the Schweizerische Zeitschrift für Artillerie und Genie, we observe that it has been tried very severely in a Swiss cavalry regiment, and the trial has been considered so satisfactory, from sanitary and economical points of view, that it is to be continued on a very large scale. The beneficial effect on the hoofs was particularly marked.

Simultaneously with the announcement that three officers have been lent at pretty high rates of interest to the Egyptian Government, there appears the statement that 1,500 Egyptian Government employés are to be suppressed. It will need great patriotism and enlightenment to induce these wretched starvelings to regard with affection this rule of the "sole control" in their own country, and to welcome the reform to their warm hearts or empty bellies with open arms.

It appears from the French papers that during the recent fighting in Tonquin, not only the Foreign Legion, but the Algerian sharpshooters, or Turcos, greatly distinguished themselves, the latter exhibiting too much impetuosity in quest of the bubble reputation at the cannon's mouth, and suffering heavily. It is asked on all sides why the French Government does not make the most of the Natives in North Africa? Here is what an old officer writes, in a letter, dated from Algiers, on January 4:—"You know what intrepid soldiers the Turcos are. There are nearly three millions of Arabs in Algeria, who represent at the least 150,000 valid men, warriors at heart. Why not utilise them? Our Army would at once be increased, and by what men! Nothing stops them. Never has a Turco fled before the enemy. It is really to be regretted that, seeing all the services they have rendered, only four regiments of Turcos have been created. They might be kept in garrison in the south of France, where they would quickly become initiated into our civilisation. Haste must be made to augment these regiments, especially as a universal conflagration may break out at any moment. It must not be forgotten that there are 150,000 men who, utilised in time of war, would render France two great services,—First, they would help to defeat the enemy; second, they would reassure the mother-country against an insurrection in Algeria." Père Bugeaud, as the old Marshal was familiarly called, was greatly in favour of raising Arab regiments, because the Arabs are soldiers at a very early age, and serve until they are very old. However, succeeding French Governments have always avoided arming many of them, rather doubting their affection. The Turcos, by the way, were created by Marshal Soult.

A combined percussion and time-fuze for common and shrapnel shell, the invention of a German artillery officer, Captain Hofmann, is being tried at the Tegel range, near Berlin, by the Artillery Commission. As the fuze is of a very simple construction and readily adjustable, it is probable that a large number will be issued to several batteries for a more extensive trial.

The French, who already had a school at St. Maixent for preparing non-commissioned officers of infantry for commissions in that arm, and a similar school for the cavalry at Saumur, have now opened a third school at Versailles for artillery and engineers. The non-commissioned officers remain a year at these establishments, at the expiration of which period they have to pass an examination, which decides whether they shall receive a commission or be sent back to their corps.

The following appears in the Canada Militia Gazette:—"The formation of three Schools of Infantry having been authorised, the requisite number of Militiamen will be enrolled, and formed into one corps, to be known as the 'Infantry School Corps.' The following officers are appointed to the corps:—Lieutenant-Colonels G. J. Maunsell, from Deputy-Adjutant-General Military District No. 4; G. D'O. d'Orsonnens, from Brigade-Major 7th and 8th Brigade Divisions, Quebec; and W. D. Otter, from 2nd Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada. To be Captains: Majors W. D. Gordon, from 14th Battalion; B. H. Vidal, from 12th Battalion; and Captain and Major H. Smith, from Adjutant 40th Battalion. To be Lieutenants: Captain C. J. Coursol, from 65th Battalion; Lieutenants H. C. Freer (R.M.C.), her Majesty's South Staffordshire Regiment; J. W. Sears (R.M.C.), Lieutenant her Majesty's South Staffordshire Regiment; D. D. Young; T. D. R. Hemming; and R. L. Wadmore. The Infantry Schools will be established as follows, until further orders:—At Fredericton, N.B., for the Maritime Provinces, under Colonel Maunsell, Commandant. At St. John's, Quebec, for the Province of Quebec, under Colonel d'Orsonnens, Commandant. At Toronto, Ontario, for the Province of Ontario, under Colonel Otter, Commandant.

We are informed that in many regiments in India, the new regulations about mess entertainments are virtually a dead-letter. Commanding officers will not enforce them, and generals commanding districts do not choose to interfere. In some regiments, mess entertainments are given exactly as before; in others, the rules are evaded by various subterfuges; in only a few cases is the spirit as well as the letter of the order acted up to. We cannot think that commanding officers who sanction these proceedings are justified in their action. It is better, far better, that even unpopular regulations should be strictly carried out, than that authority should be openly set at defiance. It is not for commanding officers to say when superior orders are to be obeyed, and when they are to be evaded. It is clearly their duty at all times to support authority with the loyal determination to show their juniors an example of obedience. For our own part, we have always been of opinion that there was much to be said in favour of the official regulations of mess entertainments. It is said that poor men ought not to enter the Army. Yet poor men do enter the Army in large numbers, and it is necessary to recognise the fact, and protect them even, it may be, against their own wish to incur debt. It is an error to suppose that real hospitality will be checked by the new rules. Those who can afford to entertain, and desire to do so, may still invite their friends to mess as often as they please. Those who cannot afford to entertain even on a small scale are no longer compelled to do so. The essence of true hospitality is that it should be voluntary; yet it is notorious that under the old system many officers subscribed to entertainments only because public opinion in the regiment compelled them to do so. Any attempt to interfere with the right of officers to show individual hospitality to their private friends we should certainly deprecate. There is, however, no intention to do this. Balls and dinner parties and other entertainments can still be given under certain well-defined conditions, which preclude the possibility of their becoming a tax on those who cannot afford to pay for them. The new rules are intended to strike a blow at all official entertainments, at the system of "mess guests," and at balls and parties given by the regiment as a body, from which the senior officers were wont to derive the chief credit, while the younger officers were compelled to share the expense. We believe that when the new rules are properly understood, and if they receive a fair trial, they will be generally appreciated by officers, who will be glad to be relieved from the burden of showing and accepting hospitality of the compulsory, official, and formal nature, to which we have alluded above.

The Bulletin de la Réunion des Officiers advocates the creation of subterranean railways for strategical purposes; underground lines, for example, between Calais and Verdun, Nantes and Toul, La Rochelle and Belfort; and the writer thinks that such railways would pay in time of peace. "If," he says, "before the war of 1870, three underground railways had had for termini Metz, Strasburg, and Belfort at one end, and Calais, Nantes, and La Rochelle on the other, the French Army, transported by these three lines at the rate of 450 trains a day, would have surprised the German Army before its formation as early as July 22." In fact, the Bulletin has much to say in favour of these lines, in which we shall not believe till we see them at work. It scouts the idea of the Germans being able to damage them by means of borings and dynamite, for a dynamite petard of 20lb. would not bring down more masonry, earth, &c., than could be cleared away in an hour. But perhaps it will be time to discuss this matter when the Channel Tunnel is made and turns out a success. We have heard of Frenchmen proposing to bore all the way to Berlin.

The Globe of last night speaks of the gallant officer who is in command at Khartoum as "a British officer." Colonel Coëtlogon is not in the British service. It was made a sine quâ non by our Government that the Englishmen selected by Baker Pasha for the Soudan Army should not be in the service, not even half-pay officers were to be taken. Colonel Coëtlogon is in the service of Egypt. Our contemporary also speaks of "the British Consul at Khartoum." There is no such official there. Mr. Mieville was named for the post of Consul there, but he did not join, and is now doing good work at the Foreign Office.

The strategic railway extending along the German coast from Hadersleben to Memel is progressing rapidly. On the 22nd ult., the line from Wismar to Doberan and Rostock was opened, and the portion from Rostock to Stralsund, viâ Ribnitz and Damgarten, will now be taken in hand. When this line is finished, it will be possible to transport troops and war material along the Baltic coast from Jutland to the Russian frontier without interruption.

Our opposite neighbours appear to have no very clear view of the state of Tonquin or the intentions of the Chinese Government; the rumours upon this subject are most conflicting in the French Press. One day we are assured that China has no idea of fighting, and that the French will be allowed to have it all their own way without coming in contact with any of the Regulars of the Imperial Army. The next day we are treated to information of a very different character, and to such paragraphs as these:—"The capture of Sontay has excited a very hostile spirit in China, and has strengthened the hands of the war-party at Pekin, where serious preparations for war are being made. The attack upon Betang and other French military posts shows that the country is in a very disturbed and disaffected condition, and that the whole Delta is infested with pirates." Or this: "While the Chinese Government is negotiating in Europe, the Black Flags and the Annamites are laying waste Tonquin with fire and sword. The native governors driven from their posts have placed themselves at the head of the pirates, and are indulging in a guerilla war of a far more ferocious character than was ever waged before." The French, who complain that their influence does not extend ten miles from the river occupied by their gunboats, say that the pirates who are now desolating the Delta are the remnant of the force which escaped from Sontay, and that it will require a force of 20,000 men to settle the country. It may be taken as some proof that rough work is still anticipated, that numerous transports are being despatched to the scene of action. We regret to see that sad complaints have been made of some of the provisions furnished by the contractors for the troops, and that Admiral Peyron, the Minister of Marine, is going to summon a court of inquiry. It appears to be generally supposed that Admiral Courbet will attack Bacninh on the 19th, and so the probability is that he will not leave many laurels to be reaped by his successor, General Millot, who will have little to do but to pacify a conquered country,—an arduous, inglorious, and unpleasant job.

Although the principle of the magazine-rifle has been accepted for the German Army, no definite decision has as yet been arrived at as to the peculiar form of mechanism to be adopted. It is urged by many experienced officers that the calibre of the Mauser rifle (·45 in.) does not represent the lowest limit suitable for a military arm, and that the general introduction into the Army of the repeating-rifle should, therefore, be deferred until a smaller bore has been adopted. Among the latest models of magazine guns sent in to the German War Office for trial is one constructed by Messrs. Vormueller, Simson, and Luck, of Suhl, which is favourably spoken of in military circles. This arm belongs to that class of which the "Spencer" is the prototype, being fitted with a magazine in the butt, into which twelve cartridges can be inserted. Captain Zimbaluk, a Russian cavalry officer, has invented an apparatus which, when attached to the Berdan rifle, enables that rifle to be discharged fifteen to twenty times in a minute. General Gourko has expressed himself satisfied of the utility of this apparatus, and a considerable number has been ordered for experimental purposes.

The German Minister of War has issued an order to the effect that the Landsturm, or last reserves, of the 1st, 2nd, 5th, and 6th Army Corps are to be provided with uniforms. The Landsturm has not seen active service since 1813, when it was founded, and the above order has, therefore, created some surprise. As the kit of the Regular Army would prove too cumbrous for these ancient warriors, they will be provided with summer uniforms made of ticking, and with blouses made of light cloth for the winter. In the place of the spiked helmet they will wear cloth caps, and they will be armed with the needle-gun and swords. Like our Volunteers, the Landsturm is only called into action in the event of an impending invasion by a foreign Power, and they would no doubt prove very serviceable for garrisoning fortresses, and thus replacing a large portion of the Regular Army.

A serious hardship has arisen as a result of the so-called amalgamation of the Line and Militia into Territorial Regiments. In order to put the matter plainly, we will take a case. Eight years ago, a Lieutenant A obtained his commission in a Line regiment, after passing a competitive examination at which four candidates presented themselves for every vacancy. On joining his regiment he was of course sent to recruits' drill, and was kept working at that and at sword exercise for about four and a half hours daily. As he was fond of his profession and showed intelligence, he was dismissed drill at the end of two months, and was considered very lucky to have got off so cheaply. His troubles, however, were by no means at an end. In rapid succession he was obliged, whether he liked it or not, to pass through courses in signalling, musketry, and field engineering, not to speak of a garrison class; and in due time he faced successfully the trying ordeal of the Staff College. Of course, the last was voluntary. When with his regiment, owing to the paucity of officers, he generally found himself on guard on court-martial duty, or on duty as regimental orderly officer almost daily, and this often in disagreeable and out-of-the-way places. At last, after eight years of this kind of thing, he joined the regimental depôt,—still a subaltern. And what did our hero find there? Why, that the subalterns of what was once the local Militia, but which has now developed into the third and fourth battalions of the regiment to which he has the honour to belong, are being promoted after serving for three trainings,—in fact, in plain English, after less than six months of actual service with the colours! As long as the Militia was entirely a separate service from the Line, any difference in seniority was of little consequence, as the officers of the two had nothing to do with each other. Now, however, matters are very different! During the annual training of the Militia regiments the officers belonging to them sit on district courts-martial, together with those of the Line, and it is consequently by no means impossible for Lieutenant A to find himself sitting as the junior member of a court-martial, along with Militia captains whose length of actual service, reckoned by months, hardly equals his own counted by years. But there is another aspect of the question which, although a sentimental one, is by no means unworthy of consideration. It is impossible for nine out of ten civilians to comprehend that there is any substantial difference between the second battalion and the third battalion of the same regiment. Consequently, if Captain Bluster, of the 3rd Battalion of the Heavilandshire Fusiliers, meets at the same festive board Lieutenant Mudcrusher, of the 2nd Battalion of the same gallant corps, he would, in nine cases out of ten, be considered to rank socially before the latter. Thus Line officers are constantly finding themselves ranking socially after men who were at school when they joined her Majesty's service, and who, unable or unwilling to enter any regular profession, content themselves with a month's soldiering annually. It may be all very well to say that this is an imaginary grievance. Nobody who has read the columns of announcements of births, deaths, and marriages in the Times during the last eight months can doubt that there are many officers of the Militia who are ready enough to assume the new titles of their regiments, altogether ignoring the battalion to which they belong, and hence allow themselves to be confused with their brethren of the Line. The fact that both Line and Militia will for the future wear identical uniforms will not tend to decrease the confusion. By the time that many of the subalterns of the Line have obtained their companies, their contemporaries in the Militia will in many cases be aspiring to field-rank, and thus the officers of the Regular Army will throughout their service be always liable to be serving with, and junior to, men possessing not one-half their professional knowledge. There are several points in connection with the new scheme which have hardly received the amount of attention they deserve.

The study of the Russian language by officers of the German Army has always been encouraged by the German Minister of War; but as a knowledge of the same does not offer many advantages from a social point of view, and is, moreover, very difficult to acquire, it has been mastered by only a comparatively small number of officers. Within the last six months, however, a great change has taken place in this direction, as the junior officers of several regiments are now studying the Russian tongue in corpore. It is by apparently insignificant circumstances such as these that the German public is reminded of the great impending struggle, and of the quarter in which the outbreak is to be expected. Some importance may be attached to the fact that the first to arrange regular classes for the study of the language in question were the officers of the Railway Regiment, which corps will have to perform very arduous duties in the event of a German invasion of Russia, as the railway gauge in the latter country is wider than that adopted by other nations on the continent of Europe. During the late Franco-German war, both French and German rolling stock was employed for the transport of German troops; but in Russia, it will only be possible to use wide-gauge carriages, &c. The Railway Regiment will have to find a remedy for this, and also to provide suitable engine-drivers, stokers, &c., from its ranks.

Permission has been given to Lieut.-Com. Chadwick, U.S.N., of the United States Legation, to visit Portsmouth dockyard, and to make special inquiries with reference to machine-guns.

We learn by telegram from India that Gen. Hill, with two mountain guns and some infantry, has advanced into the Akha country, and joined Major Beresford's advanced column. The march proves to be more difficult than was expected, owing to the thick jungle and the numerous ravines which intersect the path. The special correspondent of the Englishman states that some cases of cholera have occurred among the force.

"The Luxotype" is the rather infelicitous name of the very admirable invention patented by Messrs. Brown, Barnes, and Bell for the reproduction of photographs by the ordinary printing-press, without the intervention of draughtsman or engraver; and if all the work produced be as meritorious as that of the specimens which have been forwarded to us by the patentees, we have no hesitation in hailing the Luxotype as one of the most valuable and beautiful improvements introduced to the literary world for many years past. The illustrations are produced on metal blocks, solely by the action of light and chemicals, and the block is then used in the press in the ordinary way. The results are admirable. The precision and realism of the photograph are reproduced, with the addition of an artistic effect like that of a fine mezzotint, and the capabilities of reproduction are limited only by the power of the photographer himself. As we have already observed, the Luxotype patent contains one very important feature,—namely, that by the use of a peculiar process, blocks are made direct from the object, and can enable the artist to dispense with the services of the draughtsman or the engraver. This alone must be regarded as affording abundant evidence of the practical advantages to be obtained by the use of the process known as the Luxotype, a process whereby a photograph is used, instead of a drawing.

The Army.

5th Dragoon Guards. We understand it is likely that the steps in succession to Lieut.-Col. Truman, promoted into the 7th Dragoon Guards, will be given in the regiment, Major Kenyon-Stow becoming lieut.-col., Brevet Major Hemming, major, and Lieut. the Hon. K. D. Lawrence, capt.

7th Dragoon Guards. The head-quarters and service troops are timed to reach Bombay on the 26th inst. in H.M.S. Jumna, from Portsmouth, when the regiment will at once proceed to Mhow. The retirement of Major and Qrmr. Lewis with the rank of lieut.-col., after nearly 40 years' service in this regt., including the Cape War of 1848, foreign service in India, and the late Egyptian Campaign, has been marked by the presentation to him, on the part of a very considerable number of officers who had served in the regt., of a purse of over 150 sovereigns, and a handsome gong clock, surmounted by the Egyptian sphinx. We understand that Lieut.-Col. Lewis has been strongly recommended for one of the good-service pensions.

1st (Royal) Dragoons. Lieut. Rhodes has been selected for an appointment in Egypt under Mr. Clifford Lloyd, on a salary of £500 per annum.

8th Hussars. The regiment is taking part in the manœuvres at Meean Meer, which commences on the 12th inst. Major Lushington proceeds home from India on 15 months' leave of absence.

10th Hussars. The regiment will leave Lucknow on the 28th inst., en route to England. Capt. Sandeman joins the School of Musketry on March 1.

13th Hussars. Lieut. Baden-Powell has been appointed Brigade-Major of Cavalry under the Duke of Connaught, at Meerut.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Lieut.-Col. F. W. de Winton, lately employed on the Staff of the Marquis of Lorne in Canada, has been selected for the command of the batteries stationed at Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Lieut.-Col. W. Rooke, late in command of the Auxiliary Artillery of the Northern Division at Newcastle-on-Tyne, has been ordered to embark for service at Barbadoes.

Major C. B. Wickham has been promoted to No. 8 Baty. 1st Brig. Scottish Division, vice Major C. W. Long, ordered home from India. The last-mentioned officer has been appointed to the Riding Establishment.

A correspondent writes :—"Consequent on the promotion of Capt. Baddeley, R.A., Commandant, No. 1 Field Battery, Hyderabad Contingent, to a majority, he has vacated and proceeded to England. Major Baddeley has made over the charge of his battery to Lieut. Urquhart, R.A., Bolarum."

The Government of India have decided that the baggage mules of mountain batteries, British and native, shall belong to the Transport Department, as in the case of the batteries of the Punjab Frontier Force, the baggage mules of which are already borne on the rolls of the Transport Department. They are no longer to form part of the battery establishments. The number of mules per battery has been fixed at 76 and 48, for a British and native battery respectively.

Major J. L. Bell, commanding L Baty. 4th Brig., died at Mooltan on the 10th ult. Major Bell had been in bad health for some time past, and had only lately returned from six months' leave on medical certificate.

The St. James's Gazette says :—"One of our 'service' contemporaries recently informed us that 'a battery of Royal Artillery quartered in one of our principal southern fortresses was thirty-seven under its established strength.' This was told as being something unusual; but as a matter of fact it is no worse, or rather it is better, than the normal condition of most of the batteries. The establishment of every battery of garrison artillery is 109 gunners, exclusive of all officers and full non-commissioned officers, and each battery is bound, if possible, to complete itself up to that strength, so that pecuniary rewards are offered to non-commissioned officers and men to induce them to do so. How far is this accomplished? There are at present five batteries of Royal Artillery stationed at Portsmouth, which ought to show a strength of 545 gunners. But we happen to know that in these five batteries there is a deficiency of between 170 and 180 men. What is more, the five batteries have only fifty men, or one eleventh of their full number, actually available for mounting guard and similar duties. No wonder we hear that as a sufficient number of recruits cannot be obtained to complete the force up to its 'established' strength, that strength is to be brought down to the number that can be induced to join the ranks. Such seems to be the eminently satisfactory result of recent changes and 'reforms' in the organisation of the most important of all the branches of our fighting forces."

"A Cut-out One" writes :—"In accordance with a now well-known Order, many subalterns of the Royal Artillery were about a month ago informed that they were now too senior to obtain the much-coveted Horse-Artillery jackets. Amongst those who were thus disappointed were Lieuts. Bruen, Alexander, Faber, and Hibbert; but, Sir, since the Circular appeared cutting out these officers (and many others also), several appointments have been made to Horse Artillery of officers whose commissions bear dates between those of the officers cut out. For example, Lieut. Talbot's commission is the same as Lieut. Faber's; the former has got Royal Horse Artillery since the circular; the latter has not, on account of being too senior, although Lieut. Talbot is the senior of the two. Lieuts. W. Russell, Robinson, Toms, and Vereker have also been appointed since the circular; they are all senior to Lieut. Hibbert, who is cut out for being too senior. Lieut. Bruen's case is too well known to need comment from me. I could mention several officers who have been cut out who are just as highly recommended by their majors as it was possible for the favoured ones, who have obtained their jackets, to have been. All we want, Sir, is justice. If we really are cut out for being too senior, we must grin and bear it; we must, I suppose, do the same if we are cut out of the Royal Horse Artillery through a process of deliberate favouritism."

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Capt. F. J. Day has taken up the appointment of secretary to the Royal Engineer Institute, Chatham, vice Major R. H. Vetch.

The Joint War-Office and India-Office Committee, which has been sitting to consider and report upon the terms and conditions of service in India of the Royal Engineers, has adjourned sine die, pending the appointment of a new Chairman, in succession to Mr. A. W. Peel, M.P., who has been selected by the Government for nomination as Speaker of the House of Commons. The members of the Committee are :—Major-Gen. Sir Andrew Clarke, K.C.M.G., Inspector-General of Fortifications; Gen. Sir A. Taylor, K.C.B., President of the Indian Engineers' College at Cooper's Hill; Lieut.-Gen. J. Strachey, Major-Gen. A. Johnson, Col. Sir J. Stokes, K.C.B., Deputy Adjt.-Gen. R.E. at Headquarters; and Mr. Ralph Knox, C.B., Accountant-General at the War Office. Lieut. E. S. E. Childers is the Secretary of the Committee, whose labours will be of a comprehensive scope.

The Times says :—"We have great pleasure in stating that the Secretary of State for War has, after consideration, decided that it will not be necessary for Gen. Gordon to resign his commission in her Majesty's service in consequence of his mission to the Congo. He will remain on the Active List of the Army under precisely similar conditions to those applied to his employment by the Chinese and Egyptian Governments." Gen. Gordon left London on Wednesday for Brussels, in order to confer with the King of the Belgians respecting the Congo mission.

The Civil and Military Gazette says :—"Lieut. A. H. Mason, R.E., resigns the post of private secretary and aide-de-camp to his Honour the Lieut.-Governor of the Punjab, with effect from the 17th ult.; but his services are retained by the Local Government for three months from that date for special duty,—namely, the revision and completion of Paget's 'Record of Expeditions against the Tribes of the North-West Frontier.' Lieut. Mason will be succeeded on his Honour's personal staff by Lieut. J. R. Dunlop-Smith, Staff Corps, at present an Assistant-Commissioner in the Punjab."

Grenadier Guards. Capt. the Hon. G. F. H. Somerset, A.D.C. to the Governor of Bombay, has been granted leave from India to England for four months, on private affairs.

Scots Guards. Sir George T. F. Shuckburgh, of Shuckburgh Park, Warwickshire, died on Saturday at his seat near Daventry, aged 54. The deceased was born in 1829, and was appointed a lieut. and capt. in the Scots Fusilier Guards in 1850. He served in the Eastern Campaign of 1854, and retired from the Army with the rank of major. He succeeded as ninth baronet on the death of his father in 1876.

1st, or Royal Scots. Lieut. Lowry, 2nd Batn., a candidate for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 10th Madras N.I., on probation.

6th Royal Warwickshire Regiment. Lieut. Brown, 2nd Batn., a candidate for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 9th Bengal N.I., on probation.

7th Royal Fusiliers. Capt. Thackwell, 2nd Batn., is a probationer for the Army Pay Department. Lieut. Shipley, a probationer, officiating squadron-officer 14th Bengal Lancers, is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C., from Nov. 1, 1880. Lieut. Wilkinson, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for 15 months, on private affairs.

8th King's (Liverpool Regiment). Lieut. Brett, 2nd Batn., a candidate for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 4th Madras Light Cavalry, on probation.

11th Devonshire Regiment. Lieut. Stanley, 2nd Batn., is ordered home from India, for duty with the Ordnance Store Department, on probation.

14th West Yorkshire Regiment. Lieut. Mitchell, 1st Batn., a probationer, officiating wing-officer 14th Bombay N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bombay S.C., from Feb. 27, 1882.

15th East Yorkshire Regiment. Lieut. Way, 2nd Batn., a probationer, officiating wing-officer 30th Bombay N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bombay S.C., from Aug. 25, 1882.

17th Leicestershire Regiment. Lieut. Wheeler, 2nd Batn., has been appointed paid Attaché to the Intelligence Branch, Quartermaster-General's Department, Simla, vice Lieut. J. M. Grierson, R.A., who joins the Staff College.

19th Yorkshire Regiment. Capt. and Qrmr. J. Hedingham, late of the regiment, died at Southsea on the 26th ult., aged 46 years. His death took place rather suddenly, although his health had been impaired for some time past. This officer had seen much active service, having been 30 years in the Army. He was all through the Crimean War and Indian Mutiny, where he greatly distinguished himself, and had the Crimean medal and clasp for Sebastopol, Turkish medal, Indian medal and clasp for North-West Frontier, and medal for long service and good conduct. On his retirement, on Jan. 31, 1882, Capt. Hedingham was appointed to the 4th Batn. Yorkshire Regt. He was much esteemed by his brother officers and friends, and leaves a widow and one daughter to lament their irreparable loss.

21st Royal Scots Fusiliers. Capt. Croker, 1st Batn., has been appointed adjt. of the 8th Lanarkshire R.V. Lieut. Davidson, 2nd Batn., has passed the higher-standard examination in Persian.

22nd Cheshire Regiment. Lieut. Bond, 2nd Batn., is a candidate for the Indian S.C., and has been appointed to the 30th Bengal N.I., on probation.

26th Cameronians (Scottish Rifles). Major Barrow is to draw a salary of £700 a year whilst employed in the service of the Egyptian Government.

35th Royal Sussex Regiment. We have received the following from the Dean of Chichester :—"I learn that in your number for Dec. 15, you stated and remarked as follows :—'The Liverpool Courier expresses a very reasonable hope that the colours late deposited in Edinburgh may not be treated as the Cathedral of Chichester did those of the 35th (Royal Sussex) Regt. In the course of some alterations or so-called "restoration," the colours, which had never been "lost" in action, were lost in the cathedral; and eventually found amidst of a heap of rubbish. Her Majesty the Queen thereupon requested the colours might be lodged in Windsor Castle,—a most significant rebuke.' I beg to assure you that the foregoing pretended narrative is a mere fabrication from beginning to end. Never for an hour have the colours referred to been either lost, or mislaid, or out of keeping. They are hanging at this instant, as they have always hung, against the walls of our cathedral. True it is that during the restoration of our beautiful Lady Chapel (1870-2), the colours in question (with those of the Militia, which had occupied a position exactly opposite) were removed for greater safety into the Chapter-house of the cathedral. But they were restored to their original place in the Lady Chapel as soon as the Lady Chapel was able to receive them, namely, in 1872. True it also is that, on the erection (in 1875) of a stained-glass window in memory of the late Col. Atkinson (in the chapel used as a vestry by the dean and canons), the colours referred to were placed on either side of that window, where they are hanging at the present time. But you are requested to observe that all this does but prove the anxious care which the cathedral authorities have bestowed upon their trust, and their desire to do honour to the colours of the 35th (Royal Sussex) Regt. Inasmuch as you have not only promulgated this discreditable story, but, by relating it in words of your own, and by commenting on it, have assumed it to be true, I rely on your honour for inserting this unqualified denial of its truth in your next number."

39th Dorsetshire Regiment. Capt. Fenwick will draw a salary of £500 a year, whilst employed in the service of the Egyptian Government.

40th South Lancashire Regiment. Lieut. Darrah, a probationer, officiating wing-officer 18th Bengal N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C., from Nov. 1, 1882.

44th Essex Regiment. The head-quarters and service companies will embark at Bombay on the 17th ult., in H.M.S. Serapis, for conveyance to Aden, to relieve the 65th, ordered home.

47th North Lancashire Regiment. The head-quarters and service companies have left Gibraltar during the week in H.M.S. Serapis, en route to India.

49th Berkshire Regiment. The Gibraltar Chronicle of the 11th inst. says :—"The festivities of the week were continued last night by a grand ball given by Lieut.-Col. Huyshe and the officers of the 49th Regt., in the Armoury. The ball was honoured by the presence of Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, K.G., who arrived at about 9.45 p.m., accompanied by his Flag Capt., Capt. Fellowes, and Flag Lieut., Lieut. Gimlette. His Royal Highness was received by a guard of honour, and Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Huyshe received their distinguished guest in the ball-room. Very shortly after, dancing began, the ball opening with a quadrille, in which his Royal Highness danced with Mrs. Huyshe. The arrangements were under the superintendence of Major Green. At 12 o'clock the doors of the supper-room were opened. Dancing continued without intermission until 3.30 a.m. Over 350 invitations were issued."

ROYAL MARINES.

Brevet Col. Burton, who retired on the 9th inst., entered the service as 2nd lieut. in June, 1849; became 1st lieut. in Dec., 1853; capt., Dec., 1861; brevet major, June, 1862; brevet lieut.-col. Jan., 1873; and brevet col., Oct., 1881. Col. Burton saw much active service as a lieut., having been present at the destruction of batteries and a fleet of piratical junks in Kulau Bay; was adjt. of the Royal Marines landed for the protection of the factories at Canton, and present at the storming of the breach in the city wall; also at the capture of French Folly, the Bogue, and other forts in the river; was adjt. of the detachments holding Macao Fort against repeated attacks during several months; also at the battle of Fatshan; and was adjt. of the provisional battalion of Royal Marines at the occupation of Honan, and the assault and capture of Canton in Dec. 1857; commanded a company in action with the Braves at Hong Kong, and at the capture of the batteries and heights of Shek-Tsin, in Jan., 1858. He was afterwards on the Staff as Deputy-superintendent of the Military Police Force at Canton. For these services he received the Burmese and China medals, with clasps for Fatshan and Canton, the brevet of major, and was four times mentioned in despatches.

54th Dorsetshire Regiment. Capt. Drury has been granted leave from India to England for 12 months, on medical certificate. Lieut. Broughton is a candidate for the Army Pay Department.

58th Northamptonshire Regiment. The citizens of Pietermaritzburg saw the last of the regiment on Dec. 8. About 1.30 the special train drew up to the platform, and 114 of the rank and file took their places in the trucks. The women and children were accommodated with seats in the carriages, and at about 20 minutes to 2 Col. Bond, having bid farewell to a number of friends, took his seat in the train, accompanied by Capts. Gough and Wallace. The train moved out of the station amid the cheers of the soldiers and of the spectators. No sooner had the special cleared the station than the ordinary 2 o'clock train steamed up, and the remainder of the men, some 40 odd, took their places in a couple of trucks. This detachment was under the charge of Major Lovegrove. Shortly before the train moved off, the men set up a ringing cheer for Major Anderson, who was on the platform. Among those who witnessed the departure were Majors Anderson and Elmes, Capt. Chamberlain (his Excellency's private secretary), and several officers of the 91st Regt. The Natal Mercury says:—"That the gallant Steelbacks should have been allowed to leave without some substantial mark of esteem being shown to them is a matter of very great regret. After having left some 300 brave comrades behind them, who fell fighting the battles of Natal, the least that ought to have been done would have been for the corporation of the city to have presented an address to the colonel on behalf of the regiment; or if that were too much, surely the thanks of the burgesses were due to the very efficient band and bandmaster for the pleasure they afforded on every Saturday afternoon by playing in the park. All that are now left here of the gallant 58th are Major Anderson, on duty; Mr. Lucy, on sick leave; and Mr. de Vismes, who remains behind for a holiday."

60th King's Royal Rifle Corps. The 4th Batn. is taking part in the manœuvres at Meean Meer, which commences on the 12th inst.

65th York and Lancaster Regiment. The head-quarters and service companies will embark at Aden about the end of February in H.M.S. Serapis, for conveyance to England.

67th Hampshire Regiment. Major Potter has vacated his appointment as station staff officer, Wellington Depôt, on the expiration of his tenure of the appointment. Lieut. Macdonald has been granted leave from India to England for nine months, on medical certificate.

70th East Surrey Regiment. Lieut.-Col. Collins resigns command of the Murree Convalescent Depôt, to assume command of the regiment, on Col. Ralston proceeding home from India on leave of absence.

72nd Seaforth Highlanders. The regiment held its annual school treat on the 12th inst. at Parkhurst, when the mothers and children assembled in the reading-room and partook of a plentiful tea; then the time-honoured amusement of "Punch and Judy" was introduced. This was followed by "Snap-dragon." Afterwards the juvenile regimental piper led the children into an adjoining room, where a tastefully-decorated Christmas-tree awaited them. The industrial work and prizes were distributed to the school-children, sweets, toys, and fruit to the younger ones, not even babies in arms were forgotten by Col. and Mrs. Stockwell.

81st North Lancashire Regiment. Lieut. Brind, a probationer, wing-officer 23rd Bengal N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C. from Oct. 2, 1880, and Lieut. Hobbs, officiating squadron-officer 14th Bengal Lancers, from July 1, 1882.

82nd South Lancashire Regiment. The head-quarters and service companies are under orders of readiness to embark about Feb. 24, for conveyance to Gibraltar, to relieve the 104th Fusiliers.

83rd Royal Irish Rifles. Lieut. Kettlewell, a probationer, officiating wing-officer 22nd Bombay N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bombay S.C., from Dec. 18, 1880.

84th York and Lancaster Regiment. Gen. Sir D. Russell, K.C.B., died on Wednesday at his residence, Elvaston Place, Queen's Gate, aged 74. He was the son of Col. J. Russell, of Woodside, Stirlingshire. He was born at Woodside, N.B., was educated at Edinburgh and Dresden, and in Jan., 1828, entered the Army as cornet. He served some years in India with his regiment, and commanded the 5th Brigade at the second relief of Lucknow, where he was severely wounded, and was mentioned in despatches. For his services on that occasion he was nominated a C.B. He commanded the 1st Brigade under Gen. Outram at the repulse of the several attacks on the Alumbagh. At the fall of Lucknow he commanded the 2nd Brigade, which stormed the Imaumbarra and captured the Kaiserbagh (medal and clasp). He was made a K.C.B. in 1871, being at the time in command of the South-Eastern District, which he held up to Jan., 1872. He was appointed Col. of the 75th Foot in Jan. 1870, and in Oct. 1872 was transferred to the 84th. He attained the rank of major-gen. in Sept., 1862; lieut.-gen., Oct., 1871; and gen., Oct., 1877.

89th Royal Irish Fusiliers. The head-quarters and service companies will embark at Bombay on the 27th inst. for conveyance to England, and on arrival will be stationed at Devonport.

91st Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. The Natal Times says:—"The troops brought up by the Tyne were all landed by Dec. 7. The details of the troops are, officers, Lieut.-Col. Robley and Lieut. (Adjt.) Wilson; Lieuts. Paterson, Cavendish, McKie, Scott, Aytoun, Henderson, and Pymr. (Major) Carey; 1 schoolmaster, 1 armoury serjeant, 29 serjeants, 19 corporals, 7 buglers, and 330 privates. There is still a company in Cape Town, under Major Chater, Lieut. Vallancey, Qrmr. Gillies, and Bandmr. Kelly."

93rd Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. Lieut.-Col. Nightingale succeeds Col. Macpherson in command, Major and Brevet Col. Moore, V.C., C.B., becoming second lieutenant-colonel.

100th Leinster Regiment (Royal Canadians). Lieut. Weller is a candidate for the Indian S.C., and has been appointed to do duty with the 19th Bengal Lancers, on probation.

103rd Royal Dublin Fusiliers. The head-quarters and service companies have arrived at Gibraltar, and taken over quarters, relieving the 47th Regiment.

104th Royal Munster Fusiliers. The head-quarters and service companies will embark at Gibraltar about March 4, for conveyance to India.

Rifle Brigade. Major Prideaux-Brune and Lieuts. Ferguson and Mackenzie, at present with the 3rd Batn., at Aldershot, are held in readiness to proceed to India to join the 1st Batn.

Medical Department. A correspondent in the Lancet contrasts the conditions under which the African army medical officers and those under which the colonial surgeons serve:—1. The African army medical officers serve 12 months on the West Coast of Africa, at the expiration of which period they are entitled to 12 months' leave of absence, and any detention beyond the year of residential service is compensated by a commensurate extension of leave. The colonial medical officers also nominally serve for 12 months on the coast, but, as their leave practically depends on the will or caprice of the Governor, they are very frequently detained beyond that term of service without adequate exigency. After their term of residential service they are entitled to six months' leave of absence, which means about four months in Europe, for two months are occupied in the wearisome and uncomfortable voyages to and from the colony, and they can claim no extension of leave for detention. I have no hesitation in asserting that this period of leave is too short to recruit the health of officers after 12 to 18 months' residence in this climate. 2. The African army medical officer is sure of promotion in due time. The colonial medical officer is nearly equally sure not to obtain promotion. 3. The African army medical officer can claim a fair pension after 14 years of nominal service, for seven years of the 14 are spent on leave. The colonial medical officer cannot claim a pension until he is 55 years of age, an utterly hopeless prospect, except he has served seven years or more, and is so incapacitated by ruined health as to be unfit for further work. In such case, a miserable annuity is granted of so mean amount, that his physical sufferings are rendered still more intolerable by poverty. 4. The work of the colonial medical officer necessitates far more exposure than that of his military confrère. He can never lay up in sickness with an easy mind, or without inconvenience to the public service, for almost invariably he is the only medical man at or near to his station, whereas there are always two or more army surgeons at their stations. 5. The army medical officer is fairly well supplied with drugs, appliances, and instruments. The colonial medical officer is always stinted in, and often without, the most essential armamentaria of his profession, and never finds his station adequately furnished. It is then not to be wondered at that the Colonial Office finds it difficult to secure capable men, nor that those in its service should be disgusted and disheartened. Reform in the following directions is urgently called for, both in justice to the men already in the service and in order to obtain in future a good class of medical men:—a. Eight months' leave of absence after 12 months' residential service. This would mean six months in Europe. b. Salaries to increase by triennial increments to £600 per annum. c. The certainty of a fair pension after 12 years' service, if desirous of retirement, or of a proportionately larger pension eventually, if willing to serve for a longer period.

Pay Department. During the past month, the following changes of stations and promotions have taken place in the Pay Department:—Lieut.-Col. Longden, from Edinburgh to Barbados; Major O'Dowd, from 14th Hussars to Unattached List; Major Hobbs, Barbados, to Unattached List; Major Muskett, Jamaica, to Unattached List; Major Coote, 8th Hussars, to Unattached List; Major Mortimer, from 92nd Regt. to District Office, Dover; Major Stockley, to 2nd Batn. 4th Regt.; Major Turner, from 1st Batn. 17th Regt., to Unattached List; Major Dougherty, from Home District to Unattached List; Capt. Brett, 68th Regt., to 10th Hussars; Capt. Caine, Eastern District, to Unattached List; Capt. Kitson, to 103rd Regt.; Capt. J. A. R. Bell, to 61st Regt.; Capt. Montgomery, 10th Hussars, to Unattached List; Capt. Small, Dover District Office, to 92nd Regt.; Capt. Irving, to the Unattached List; Capt. Thunder, from 39th Regt. to Unattached List; Capt. O'Brien, to Unattached List; and Capt. Johnson, to 37th Regt. Capts. and Pymrs. Dening, Simpson, Brett, Croker-King, Stuart, Woodall, and S. E. Wood have been granted the rank of Major, after five years' service as Paymasters. The following regiments and regimental districts require paymasters:—Cavalry—4th Hussars, 8th Hussars, 9th Lancers, 14th Hussars, 19th Hussars. Infantry—1st Batn. 3rd, 1st Batn. 5th, 2nd Batn. 6th, 2nd Batn. 7th, 1st Batn. 8th, 1st Batn. 13th, 2nd Batn. 13th, 2nd Batn. 19th, 1st Batn. 21st, 2nd Batn. 24th, 33rd, 34th, 38th, 39th, 41st, 52nd, 55th, 56th, 57th, 67th, 68th, 79th, 86th, 98th, 99th, 106th, 108th, 1st Batn. Rifle Brig., and 2nd West India Regt. Regimental Districts—Warwick, Clonmel, Berwick-on-Tweed, Devizes, Galway; total, 39 vacancies. Under date of Cairo, Jan. 7, we learn that the officers of the Pay Department in Egypt were distributed as follows:—At the district office, Col. Olivey, C.B., and Capts. St. John Kneller and Long; Capt. A. G. P. Dowdall has payment of the 19th Hussars and 35th Regt., Capt. Orange of the 3rd Batn. 60th Rifles and 79th Regt., and Major Small of the 75th Regt.

Veterinary Department. The following officers will proceed from India to England on completion of their tour of foreign service.—First-class Vet.-Surgs. J. Skoulding, F. Plomley, A. E. Queripel, and J. Burton; Vet.-Surgs. G. F. Davis, S. Gillespie, A. C. Webb, and A. Bostock. The following will relieve the above: First-class Vet.-Surgs. C. Ewing, J. W. Evans, I. Matthews, and E. H. Hazelton; Vet.-Surgs. L. J. Blenkinsop, R. W. Raymond, T. Pottinger, and J. T. Twiss.

The Auxiliary Forces.

MILITIA.

The Limerick Chronicle says:—"The training of the Militia of the United Kingdom in the past year has been exceptionally important from the facts that the Irish regiments were again called out after an interval of two seasons—four battalions being brought over to Aldershot to drill with the regular troops there—and that the force which went under canvas for the full period exceeded 50,000 of the two arms of artillery and infantry. Twenty-one brigades of Artillery trained in England, Scotland, and Wales, and 14 in Ireland; three battalions of Engineers in England and Wales, 106 battalions of Infantry in various parts of Great Britain, and 27 in Ireland. The battalions which were brought over from Ireland were the 5th Royal Irish Rifles (South Down), 4th Royal Munster Fusiliers (Kerry), 5th Connaught Rangers (Roscommon), and 3rd Royal Irish Regiment (Wexford); and while at the camp they gained golden opinions, not only for their fine physique, but also for their soldierly conduct, drill, and discipline. Major-Gen. the Duke of Connaught, who had two of the battalions in his brigade, specially complimented them before their return homewards. Arrangements are now being made at the War Office for fixing the dates and places of this year's trainings, which will commence in the case of the recruits in some of the regiments as early as February. The report of the inspecting officers on the corps inspected last year have, in most cases, been very favourable."

THE VOLUNTEERS.

"An Old Volunteer" writes:—"It seems a strange thing that ever since the Volunteer movement was started, now upwards of 25 years ago, it never seems to have occurred to any one to attempt to form a Corps of Volunteer Marines, say, Marine Artillery, to serve on board vessels for coast defence in the event of an invasion. Such corps should only be formed at Naval ports, such as Portsmouth, &c. I feel sure that many would be willing to give their services in such a cause, if some one of sufficient standing and influence, and who understood organising a regiment (say, a retired colonel of Marines) would but take the initiative. Besides drilling on shore, they could practise gunnery on board, say, one of the ships used for training boys, such as the St. Vincent, &c.; and annually they might have a cruise in the Channel on board one of the training brigs, such as the Martin, &c., or some other vessel, say, for three or four days, to accustom them to perform their duties at sea. There are few men of the class who would probably join such a corps who could not spare a few days once a year, indeed many would take it as their annual holiday. Such a force as I have proposed would be very useful to act, as occasion might require, either in conjunction with our sea or land forces."

The Standard says:—"It has been decided at the War Office that the manœuvres of the British Army shall take place during the autumn of the present year, and all Militia regiments out for training at that time will take part therein. The head-quarters will be at Aldershot."

Portsmouth Dockyard presents, as usual at the present season, a somewhat dead-and-alive appearance. The Channel Squadron has been carefully banished to its happy hunting-grounds, on the coast of Spain, and as many men taken off the various ships, &c., in progress as will provide against the possibility of exceeding the Estimates for the financial year which is now rapidly drawing to a close. The ship basin has again been opened, on the completion of the seating for the new caisson, which, unfortunately, is not ready for the seating, so the old one was dropped in, with the result that the basin became practically a tidal one, the water finding a free passage under the caisson. This defect is now being remedied pro tem., by adapting the old caisson to the new hole. In No. 10 dock is the Phaeton, having her bottom coated, and propellers and valves examined, &c. This vessel is probably a decided improvement in many ways on the Iris and Mercury—provided, of course, that she attains the stipulated speed—but the problem of designing a really reliable despatch-vessel, capable of steaming for a fortnight or so at a speed of 16 or 17 knots, is one which apparently is as far off as ever from a satisfactory solution. The builders of the Phaeton have painted her a very pretty colour—known technically as a "warm French grey"—which, however, it would overtax the powers of the most ingenious commander to "patch" without detection. The Handy, "experimental gun barge," is still in dock, and the proposed alterations in her internal arrangements have not as yet been commenced. The mechanism for working the breech of the 43-ton gun is being made more substantial. The Osborne is in No. 11 dock, the Triumph in No. 12, the Edinburgh (afloat) in No. 13, and the Bacchante in the south lock. In the old steam basin are the Cordelia, the Active, the Emerald, the Seaflower (with her masts out), the Imperieuse—in that semi-comatose condition which usually ensues, as a kind of reaction, after the bustle of launching—and, under the large crane, the Polyphemus, being prepared for the extraction of her boilers. The large basin is, as usual, full of huge turret-ships, old and new, one corner being occupied by the Colossus, which is, by all accounts, to be yet another twelve months preparing for the pendant. The Camperdown has her armour-deck partially bolted down forward, and her frames are rising their full height at that end, but the number of hands employed upon her appears to be quite inadequate to anything like satisfactory progress; the same may be said of the Calliope.

Messrs. J. Henry Schröder and Co. offer for sale 8,000 first debentures of £100 each of the Alabama, New Orleans, Texas, and Pacific Junction Railways Company, Limited, bearing interest from Oct. 1, 1883, at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, payable April 1 and Oct. 1; together with the £700,000 already issued by the Company, the whole of the first debenture charge of the Company. These railroads are worked in close alliance with the Alabama Great Southern Company, which owns 295 miles, forming together a system of 1,157 miles of trunk roads. The northern terminus is Cincinnati. Proceeding thence in a direct line through Tennessee to Chattanooga, and then, in connection with the Alabama Great Southern, traversing the important iron and coal districts of Alabama to Meridian, the system, from that point running southward, reaches New Orleans, viâ the New Orleans and North-Eastern Line; while, by means of the Vicksburg and Meridian, and the Vicksburg, Shreveport, and Pacific, it runs due west, traversing the cotton belt of the entire district, and forming a junction with the Trans-Mississippi system of roads.

Rowland's Macassar Oil is universally in high repute for its unprecedented success during the last eighty years, in promoting the growth, restoring, improving, and beautifying the human hair. It may now also be had in a golden colour, and is especially suited for fair-haired children. Ask anywhere for Rowland's Macassar Oil, and avoid spurious imitations. Sizes, 3s 6d, 7s, 10s 6d, and 21s; sent by post for 3d above these prices to A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20 Hatton Garden, London.

Alexandra, Capt. Rawson, C.B., flagship of Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, was at Malta on Jan. 12. The Bittern arrived at Chanak on Jan. 9, and the Falcon sailed the same day for Malta. The Cruiser arrived at Malta from Corfu on Jan. 11. The s.s. Poonah arrived at Malta on Jan. 9, and sailed homewards next day.

Canada, Capt. Durrant, was at Antigua on Dec. 26. A correspondent of the Western Morning News, writing on that day, says :—"The court-martial on the officers concerned in the grounding of the Northampton was concluded late on Thursday night, the 13th inst., and the result you have no doubt heard ere this. I was unable to communicate it to you at the time, as we left Bermuda on the following morning, to the gratification of all hands, after a stay of nearly seven weeks there, for the place is certainly not a desirable spot in which to make any lengthened stay, especially as our experience was not a pleasant one. For some time before we left we had nothing but a succession of heavy gales. On the afternoon of the day on which we sailed we went to torpedo practice, and this was repeated on the 18th inst., after which we had our full-speed trial at sea. The trial proved a very satisfactory one in every respect, the average speed obtained being 12·55 knots an hour. We experienced splendid weather during the voyage; we had a fair wind the whole way, and arrived at St. John's, Antigua, on the 21st inst., where we expected to find a mail for us. But we found none, and next morning we left for English Harbour, and arrived there at noon on the same day. The place seems to be but thinly populated. Of fruit there is an abundance, and the scenery is very picturesque. We emain here until the 6th prox., when we shall proceed to t. Kitt's, where we expect to meet the Admiral. Prince eorge of Wales and Capt. Durrant start to-day on a eek's visit to Mr. Porter, the Acting Governor here; and heir visit will, no doubt, be made a thoroughly agreeable ne, for there is plenty of sport to be had round about re. A cricket match will be played to-day at St. John's, tween a 'Canada eleven' and a local team. I will re-rt the result in my next, as the mail leaves here this orning. All hands are living in the dockyard at present, the Canada is going to have a thorough painting inside, d this will give the men a capital opportunity of seeing ittle of the country. The health of the Canada is, I am ad to say, very satisfactory."

Euphrates, Capt. Cardale, arrived at Bombay on Jan. 14.

Euryalus, Capt. Hastings, C.B., flagship of Rear-Admiral Sir William N. Hewett, V.C., was, with the Ranger, at Suakim on Jan. 16. The Sphinx and Coquette were at Massowah.

Himalaya, Capt. Palliser, has been ordered to be at once got ready for special service at Devonport. The Western Daily Mercury remarks :—"In connection with the Himalaya's sudden orders for particular service great discontent exists among the crew. The famous trooper has been in commission for about 12 months. In that period she has traversed over 60,000 miles. Whenever she comes home there is not time to give leave to men who live at a distance, and the result is that anything but a feeling of harmony prevails on board. Already half the crew who were sent to the vessel when she was commissioned have been either sent to hospital or to gaol; many others would exchange, but they have not the opportunity. The complaint is that a large vessel, with only a troopship's complement, is supposed to be to all intents and purposes in the same condition as a regular man-of-war. Cannot Capt. Palliser accept a hint on this point ?"

Swiftsure, Capt. Aitchison, flagship of Rear-Admiral Lyons, was at Panama on Dec. 9. The Squadron arrived at Arica on Jan. 17.

Vigilant, Lieut. and Com. Thomas E. Maxwell, flying the flag of Vice-Admiral G. O. Willes, C.B., was at Shanghai up to Dec. 3; would leave Shanghai on Dec. 4 for Hong Kong, calling at Ningpo and Amoy. The Audacious was at Nagasaki on Nov. 26, and would leave about Dec. 3 or 4 for Hong Kong, calling at Amoy. The Sapphire was at Jin Chuen, Corea, on Nov. 9; on her return from Corea to Chefoo she was to proceed to Nagasaki. The Kestrel was at Chefoo on Nov. 15, and would proceed to Jin Chuen, Corea; then return to China, and winter at Tientsin. The Cockchafer was at Tientsin on Nov. 29; she is to be stationed at Chefoo during the winter. The Albatross left Shanghai on Nov. 21 for Hankow; she is to be stationed there during the winter. The Curaçoa was at Shanghai on Dec. 3, and remains there as senior officer of the North China Division. The Espoir was at Shanghai on Dec. 3, and is to be stationed at Chinkiang. The Foxhound was at Foo Chow (Pagoda Anchorage) on Dec. 11; she is stationed there. The Linnet was at Canton on Dec. 11; when relieved by the Fly, is to be stationed in the Gulf of Tonquin. The Champion, Cleopatra, Daring, and Zephyr were at Hong Kong on Dec. 11; after recommissioning, each will be stationed at a treaty port. The Fly was at Labuan on Oct. 27; was to proceed to Hong Kong, aad after refitting to be stationed at Canton. The Swift was at Hong Kong on Dec. 11, and remains for general service in South China. The Pegasus was at Singapore on Dec. 1; to cruise to Malacca and Penang, and then return to Singapore. The Merlin was at Singapore on Nov. 16; to proceed to Hong Kong at the end of the year. The Flying Fish was at Hong Kong on Dec. 11, preparing to pay off and recommission. The Magpie was at Singapore on Nov. 16; after refitting, will commence survey on the coast of Siam. The Wivern was at Hong Kong on Nov. 25, temporarily manned by crew of the Daring. The Midge was at Hong Kong, and commissioned on Dec. 11. The Esk was at Hong Kong on Nov. 25, temporarily manned by crew of the Zephyr. The Tweed was at Hong Kong on Nov. 25.

On Wednesday last the official trial took place of a 2nd-class torpedo-boat, 63 ft. in length, built by Messrs. Yarrow for the Brazilian ironclad Riachuelo, which is now on the point of completion by Messrs. Samuda Brothers. The Brazilian Government was represented by Señor Trajano A. de Carvalho, and the speed obtained was 18·1 knots, which is equal to 20·9 statute miles per hour, which for so small a craft is a remarkable performance. This trial is interesting as marking the graduai and steady increase of speed obtained, that named above being the highest on record for boats of this size.

The appointment of Commander of the Royal Naval Barracks at Sheerness will shortly fall vacant, the three years' term of service of Com. John E. Greenhow having almost expired. The strength of the barracks has been very much attenuated of late, owing to the heavy drafts despatched to the Mediterranean and China stations, in addition to the new crews which have been provided for the Sphinx, Forward, Goshawk, Myrmidon, and other ships recently commissioned. The barracks usually receive a considerable acquisition of strength at this time of the year from vessels paying out of commission, but there are only two vessels—the Comus and Rambler—ordered to Sheerness, and no vessels have been paid off for several months past. The Medway Steam Reserve is exceptionally strong at the present time, there being three ironclads—the Rover, Ajax, and Conqueror—ready for commission, but in the event of their services being required, there are not at present 200 sailors available at Sheerness and Chatham for them, without reducing the strength of the barracks and the Pembroke to only suflicient men to keep them clean. The unarmoured cruisers Leander and Arethusa will also be ready for commission at an early date. The establishment at Sheerness is not likely to be up to its normal strength for some months to come.

THE CHANNEL SQUADRON.

Gibraltar, January 13.

Our stay at Gibraltar, which has been a very pleasant one, is drawing to a close, as we leave on Tuesday for Palma, Majorca. The whole of the Marines of the Squadron, under the command of Col. French, of the Minotaur, were paraded on the Almaida on last Tuesday forenoon, for inspection by the Duke of Edinburgh. They formed in line, the right-half battalion being composed of artillery, and the left of light infantry. On the Duke's arrival on the ground, he was received with a Royal salute. The battalion then marched past, after which the artillery were put through manual and firing exercise, and the light infantry through the bayonet exercise. The inspection was wound up by an advance in review order and a Royal salute. The men were then fallen in according to their different ships, and marched off the ground. The effect was very striking, as, marching in fours, they formed a long line of alternate blue and red half-companies. The Duke complimented Col. French on the appearance and steadiness of the men. On Tuesday evening, Sir Henry Burford-Handcock, the Chief Justice, and Lady Burford-Handcock, gave a dance at their residence, the Palace, which was numerously attended, and was very enjoyable. On Wednesday, the Duke of Edinburgh, Capt. Fellowes, and the officers of H.M.S. Minotaur, gave an afternoon dance on board, which was very successful. It was blowing hard all day, and had been during the previous night, which gave a good deal of additional trouble to the work of housing-in. A large tent which had been erected over the poop had to be taken down again. But in spite of it, the decorations were very pretty. As soon as it began to get dark, the deck was lit up by electricity, a line of incandescent lights being suspended under the awning ridge rope. They were a great success, as they gave a beautiful and steady light. Although it was blowing hard, it was a fine, bright day. The Governor and Lady Adye, and suite, and all the élite of Gibraltar were present, and everybody appeared to enjoy the afternoon thoroughly. On Thursday, a strong easterly wind was blowing, the Agincourt dragged a little, and had to shift berth. In the afternoon, there was a football match, the Squadron against the Garrison. It was not a favourable day owing to the high wind, but the soldiers had it all their own way, getting two goals and three tries to nothing. The festivities of the week were continued on Thursday evening by a ball given by Col. Huyshe and the officers of the Princess Charlotte of Wales's Berkshire Regt. (the 49th). It was held in the armoury, which was very tastefully decorated. A very pretty porch covered with evergreens was built, and a large portion of the yard roofed in and formed into places for sitting out, card, and smoking rooms. It went very merrily, and was kept up till about half-past 3. A concert was given at the theatre on Friday night, for the benefit of the widow and family of the bandmaster of one of the regiments here, who died suddenly a short time ago. The Duke of Edinburgh kindly assisted, which insured a crowded house. He played the violin part in Gounod's "Ave Maria," and, as an encore piece, "La Serenata," by Braga, which, it is needless to say, were received with enthusiastic applause. Last night the Bluejackets of the Sultan gave a performance at the theatre in aid of a local charity. They played the drama "British Born," which was really entertaining, and fully justified the description given of it in the playbills as being "patriotic and stirring." H.R.H. Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha has been paying visits to the Governor and the Duke of Edinburgh. He came from Cadiz, crossing over from Algeciras in a Spanish gunboat on Tuesday evening. H.M.S. Forward took his Royal Highness over to Tangier on Thursday morning, and thence back to Cadiz, returning here yesterday.

Princess Beatrice and suite crossed from Osborne in the Royal yacht Alberta on Saturday morning, and paid a visit to Portsmouth Dockyard. Her Royal Highness was received at the jetty by Rear-Admiral F. A. Herbert (in temporary command at Portsmouth), Gen. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and other officers. The Princess was first conducted to the electric shop, where she saw some illustrations of electric lighting and of gold and silver plating. The Dreadnought, turret-ship, was next visited, and the working of one of the guns by a party of men from the Excellent was shown. A look at the Bacchante, the unarmoured corvette in which the sons of the Prince of Wales had their first sea voyage, was next taken. This was followed by the working of one of the large caissons. Her Royal Highness next visited the Royal yacht Osborne, and then had a long look at the Camperdown, turret-ship, now building on one of the slips. The party next went to the smiths' shop, where they saw a large forging for the Camperdown in course of manufacture. Finally, the block mills were visited, and the whole process of block-making was shown. The Princess was then driven to Government House, where she took luncheon with the Prince and Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar. Early in the afternoon her Royal Highness drove back to the dockyard, and, embarking on board the Alberta, recrossed to Osborne.

A committee, consisting of Sir Thomas Brassey (chairman), Mr. Froyne (Chief Constructor at Pembroke), Mr. Warren (Chief Constructor at Chatham), and three other members, has been formed to consider and arrange the difficulties which have arisen in connection with the subordinate officers of the dockyards under the reorganisation scheme.

Headaches and Disordered Stomach.—"After suffering for nearly two-and-a-half years from severe headache and disordered stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your Fruit Salt. Before I had finished one bottle, I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health. Others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, Robert Humphreys, Post Office, Barrasford." CAUTION.—Legal rights are protected in every civilised country. Examine each bottle, and see the Capsule is marked "Eno's Fruit Salt." Without it, you have been imposed upon by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Directions in Sixteen Languages,—How to Prevent Disease. Prepared only at Eno's Fruit Salt Works, Hatcham, London, S.E., by J. C. Eno's Patent.

Army & Navy Gazette
LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1884.

WHAT advantages does the Army hold out as profession? Young men of means who a fond of adventure will always be found to enter; b Army reformers have distinctly stated that they do n wish the service to be made a lounge for rich men sons, but a means by which young men of energy an ability may serve their country. The preliminar educational requirements are greater now tha formerly. Nor do examinations cease when the fir commission is obtained. The young officer has undergo severe professional tests, until he succeeds qualifying for field-rank. Regimental duties are tw as heavy as they were ten years ago, and may be pected to increase. With this we find no fault, so lo as what is done is of a practical nature. But we w to consider the return for this additional expendite in training the officer before he enters, and aftere has entered upon his military career. The pay is v small, taking that even of the Adjutant-General of Forces, the highest appointment to which a soldier aspire. We must not, however, look to the pri we must take the average run of officers who e the service with a view to making it a profess.

Those who do this will have to work through the lower grades until—provided they are fortunate enough to escape compulsory retirement at 40 or 48 years of age—they receive their reward, in commanding a regiment for four years, with an additional command, if they are lucky, of a regimental district for five years. This reward is not obtained in less than twenty-five or thirty years' service. But the officer's career is now full of doubt, for it may be cut short long before he obtains the haven of his aspirations, either by the age or time clause, when he is too old to make a fresh start. He will have a pension certainly, but barely enough to keep a gentleman, so that a man who seeks the service as a profession ought to have private means to fall back upon. The value attached to Army rank, owing to the development of our Auxiliary Forces, has become less highly prized. When we consider the smallness of pay, the few prizes, and the fact that Military rank up to that of General, and not a few Military distinctions, can be obtained by officers of the Auxiliaries, the marvel is how so many enter the Regular Army. As a result of recent changes, it will be evident that if the Army is to be a profession, which our Ministers desire to make it, the higher ranks in the Auxiliary Forces will be offered to the Army as a means of procuring candidates for commissions. Either this will be done, or the country will have to put its hands into its pockets, and provide higher pay. As matters stand, the Army is losing its attraction, and there will be a dearth of candidates unless something is done to raise the status of the officer or tempt him to enter the service.

Colonel G. H. Moncrieff, Scots Guards, and not Colonel the Hon. Paul Methuen, will command the marching columns in connection with the forthcoming Volunteer Review.

The wheel of time grinds slowly, but surely, and we are, therefore, not surprised to hear that it is in contemplation to shortly restore to their original positions and functions the Regimental Serjeant-Instructors in Musketry, who were "abolished" by G.O. 51 of 1883. Commanding officers have been unanimous in condemning this hasty and ill-advised ukase.

As the War Office has decided on holding autumn manœuvres this year, in which all the Militia then out for training will take part, it is earnestly to be hoped that, instead of, as usual, simply ringing the changes on the battalions of the Metropolis and of the home counties, some opportunities may be afforded to more distant corps of showing what they are made of. Nothing can be more disheartening than year by year going through the same solitary training, on the same ground, under the same officer. There are scores of battalions who, beyond an afternoon parade with a Volunteer corps or two, perhaps, have never been in brigade for twenty years, and among these there are not a few, especially in the Northern and North-British Districts, whose physique and smartness would be a pleasing surprise at Aldershot. The Deputy Adjutant-General for Auxiliary Forces would have no difficulty in selecting from Scotland alone a division, the material of which would be a credit to the Militia service, and which would enable those interested to judge what the whole force might with a little ease be made.

We understand that, as the result of recent remarks on the subject, an inquiry has been held at the War Office into the case of Brigade-Surgeon Elkington, Grenadier Guards. It will be remembered that Mr. Elkington signed an agreement, on joining his present regiment, to retire as soon as he had completed thirty years' service, and that he declines now to fulfil this engagement. The result of the inquiry is that H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief has expressed his opinion that Mr. Elkington is neither legally nor morally bound to retire, although he has completed more than thirty years' service. We do not propose to enter into the merits of the case; the facts are well known in every service club in London, and we venture to think that the majority of our readers would have drawn from them a different conclusion from that at which his Royal Highness has arrived. But there are some points connected with the recent official inquiry to which we think it necessary to draw attention. It will hardly be believed, but it is none the less true, that the court of inquiry came to a decision without hearing any evidence whatever on one side; none of the medical officers of the brigade were called upon to state their view of the case; no written statement on their behalf was asked for; the original document signed by Mr. Elkington was not produced; whilst the nature and extent of inquiry, and the names of the officers who constituted the court have not been made known. It is impossible that such a one-sided investigation, conducted by an unknown tribunal, sitting with closed doors, can give satisfaction either to the public or to the medical officers of the Guards; and we can only characterise the proceeding as a farce, and as a miscarriage of justice, which it is fortunately not yet too late to remedy.

It is proposed to provide, with the new khakee clothing inspected by the Queen during the week, sashes of different patterns for all non-commissioned officers, according to rank. The different shaped sashes and epaulettes would thus be indicative of the rank of the wearers, and it is considered that chevrons for this purpose would be discontinued.

A number of valises, manufactured of a material used for this purpose in the French Army, are being experimented upon at several of the large military stations. As a first step, these valises will be worn continuously on guard-mounting parades for several months, after which they will be tested under all the possible conditions of active service.

The experimental trials, at Aldershot, of Versmann's moss-litter, proposed as a substitute for straw, have been brought to a conclusion, and the Committee have submitted their report.

Experiments are now being carried out at Aldershot for the purpose of enabling the Committee on Equipment to arrive at a decision as to the best mode of carrying the Wallace spade on service. This entrenching tool has recently formed part of the marching-order equipment of men of certain corps on divisional guard-mounting parades, and the experiences of these men during their 24 hours' tour of duty will doubtless be of much value to the Committee.

The yearly increasing expenditure on remounts has induced the War Office to send a duly qualified agent to Australia, to buy up promising Walers wholesale, from the big stock-raisers. At first sight, this plan may seem expensive; but when it is remembered that the average cost of an ordinary Waler is between £10 and £15, and that immature two-year-olds—which must be kept for two years before they are fit to enter the ranks—cost something like five times that price in England, it will be seen that the experiment is likely to prove a success.

The Army and Navy Gazette is so much accustomed to receive the congratulations of the world, and the Globe, on the articles to which it "gives birth," that it cannot feel gratitude towards its evening contemporary for the kind words in which it alluded last Monday to "the most perfect Irish bull on record" produced by us last week. But it was rather hard on us to be accused of "impoliteness" because we described the respectable journal which is generally so interesting as becoming "infuriated" when Mynheer or Mossoo crosses the path of its grinder, for that was a simple statement of fact. To prove that we had produced the bull, the philosopher upset all our paragraphs, and indulged in "a derangement of epitaphs" with a vengeance! Surely the grinder does not disdain syllogisms and dilemmas? They sprout in front of his organ. And if the Globe did not burst into an eruption, and smother the Times with the results on the occasion we referred to, we can only say we never read anything which better deserved the description we gave of our contemporary's volcanic energy, than the article on which we commented. It seems, however, there is plenty of ashes and lava left, for we got it hot and heavy, and the Globe suggests that we had "fallen foul" of it because we were short of military information, owing, perhaps, it went on to say, to the greater energy and success "of the Flat Iron," and the other one. But, dear Globe, how would it help our shortness to fall foul of you? The question of greater energy is one we shall not discuss, but "the greater success" is a sheer hallucination. But, after all, we must forgive and forget, because if the Globe breaks our editorial head with its "bull," there is a plaster handy in its columns, for the only paragraph from a service paper it gives its readers on Monday is from the Army and Navy Gazette.

We are almost sorry to agree with Truth—the journal—mais la verité avant tout, and the colleague of Mr. Bradlaugh this week goes to the marrow of the Egyptian business. But to what end? We have all along held the views he enunciates; nevertheless, the past must bury its dead. Nay, it has buried them. There never was any political, or social, or commercial Tartuffery more vile and gross than that which is paraded in print day after day, respecting our initial motive in the intervention which has landed and kept a British Army in Egypt. How on earth any one can sit down and write that "we were quite averse from interference, that we were forced against our will to go to Egypt," when it is as well known as any political fact can be that a burning desire has raged in the veins of shipowners, bondholders, land-grabbers, jobbers, &c., for years past to get hold of the country, is beyond comprehension! Any one who will take the trouble to read the Blue-books will see that the fears expressed for the safety of the Suez Canal came as the result of a late afterthought to buttress the case for the intervention. In the time of the Arabi pronunciamiento and quasi-dictatorship, not a breath was uttered, not a thought, we venture to say, entertained, that the Canal was endangered, and it was not till the Government had virtually declared war against the National party in Egypt that the happy idea of getting up a scare about the Canal was mooted in the Press, and became the staple of the speeches of the party of action. Another assertion frequently made is quite as baseless. We are told the Egyptian Government has failed, and that it is hopeless to expect anything from Egyptian administrators; argal, to do any good, Englishmen must be put in office. We say that from the time of the establishment of the Dual Control, Egypt never had any Government but that of the Franco-Anglo duumvirs; that when the Dual Control was abolished, Egypt was substantially governed by our officials; and that Nubar Pasha this moment is no more an Egyptian Minister, in the sense of the word "minister," than he is an Egyptian at all. But it will be said, "Cherif resigned because he could not carry out his policy, and that shows there was an Egyptian Ministry." Nothing of the kind. He resigned because he would not incur the odium of executing orders to abandon a large part of the dominions of the master he had sworn to serve.

Captain F. J. W. Eustace, R.A., has been appointed A.D.C. to General Sir Donald Stewart, Bart., Commander-in-Chief in India.

Surgeon-Major W. Temple, V.C., Army Medical Department, has been appointed Secretary to the Principal Medical Officer in India, in succession to Deputy-Surgeon-General Wolseley, who proceeds to England.

There has been an outbreak of enteric fever at Aldershot among the troops occupying the Permanent Barracks. Eight cases have already been admitted to the Second Station Hospital.

The late explosion at Hanoi is nothing new in the history of Chinese warfare. The Chinese are proverbially careless in allowing loose gunpowder to lie about on the floors of their magazines, and in the neighbourhood of their guns. The day after Canton was captured by the allies in 1857, an explosion took place in one of the magazines that fell into our hands, by which a number of seamen were seriously injured. Another explosion took place some months later, when a party of the Chinese employed by us in the Military Train were clearing out a dusting store adjoining the main magazine. The powder remaining on the floors and hanging about the walls exploded, and it was with the utmost exertion that the magazine was saved. Seven coolies were badly burned on this occasion. After the capture of any fortified place from the Chinese too much care cannot be taken to clear away any loose powder that may be found near the magazines or batteries.

In the General Orders just issued allusion is made to the new issue of the Police Gazette, and the attention of commanding officers is called to the details likely to assist the police in the identification of deserters. This is all well and good, so far as it goes, but it seems rather absurd only to publish the name of a deserter once. The name should appear for two months at least, and in cases of detection particulars should be furnished as to where and by whom the apprehension was made, and the amount of reward given. Mr. Howard Vincent desires, we are sure, to exert all his influence to detect crime, but we fear his hands are very much tied by the short-sighted policy pursued by the Admiralty and War Office.

A correspondent, on whose accuracy we can rely, sends us the following:—"On Tuesday last, about two o'clock, I saw two soldiers come out of a public-house near Waterloo Station. They wore tunics, infantry trousers, and great-coats, buttoned, but just showing the white facings. On their heads were women's hats, shabby and battered, and trimmed with draggled feathers. One of the soldiers was about 5 ft. 2 in. in height, the other about 5 ft. 7 in. The little fellow, as he came into the street, called out 'This is the new head-dress of the British Army!' Both had been drinking, evidently, but knew quite well what they were about. They were accompanied by four drunken women of the lowest stamp, two of whom wore the soldiers' Glengarries. These caps bore the badge of 'The Cheshire Regiment.' For the first time, I was pleased to see territorial badges instead of the honoured and historic number—in this case, that of Sir Charles Napier's pet regiment, the 22nd. As the 'Regulars' and their friends were noisy and causing an obstruction on the foot-path, a policeman told them to 'move on.' The women put out their tongues at him and were abusive, but the soldiers only laughed."

It has been officially intimated that the employment of Major Barrow, 26th Cameronians; Captain Fenwick, 39th Dorset Regiment; and Lieutenant Rhodes, 1st Dragoons, under Mr. Clifford Lloyd, in the reorganization of the Egyptian gendarmerie, is but temporary, and that four months' leave of absence has been granted to them, to proceed to the land of Egypt for this purpose. It is just possible that these officers may be able to rejoin their regiments without returning to England, when their business with the Egyptian police has been brought to a conclusion.

Major Sargood has been appointed Minister of Defence of the Colony of Victoria, and is organising his department. £110,000 per annum for five years has been appropriated by Parliament for defence purposes.

GANOT'S ELEMENTARY TREATISE ON PHYSICS,

Experimental and Applied, for the Use of Colleges and Schools.

Translated and Edited from Ganot's Elements de Physique by E. Atkinson, Ph.D., F.C.S., Professor of Experimental Science, Staff College, Sandhurst. Eleventh Edition, Revised and Enlarged, with 5 Coloured Plates and 898 Woodcuts, large crown 8vo, price 15s, cloth.

"This well-known work has been before the public for sixteen years, and has now reached its eleventh edition. Each new edition has contained both additions and revisions in accordance with the progress of science. The present edition differs from the last by an increase of subject-matter of about 30 pages, while upwards of 30 new illustrations have been added. The illustrations are extremely good, and the various subjects are discussed with a sufficient infusion of mathematics to make the book serviceable for the use of the highest forms in schools and for scholarship and other examinations." Academy.

GANOT'S NATURAL PHILOSOPHY FOR GENERAL READERS AND YOUNG PERSONS.

Translated and edited from Ganot's Cours Elementaire de Physique by E. Atkinson, Ph.D., F.C.S., Professor of Experimental Science, Staff College, Sandhurst. Fifth Edition, with 20 pages of New Matter, 2 Coloured Plates, and 425 Woodcuts, crown 8vo, price 7s 6d, cloth.

"It may be safely asserted that no book on Physics has had a more deserved popularity during the past fifteen years among teachers and pupils than Dr. Atkinson's Elements of Physics, now in its tenth edition. The reason for this is very obvious. Basing his work on Ganot's well-known treatise, Dr. Atkinson, by well-chosen additions and amplifications of his own, strove to produce a good book, and abundantly succeeded. Improvements on old methods and new discoveries have in like manner found place from time to time in each successive edition."

"In his work on Natural Philosophy Dr. Atkinson has wisely pursued the same plan. Thus, in art. 516 we find a lucid description of the Telephone and its application in the transmission of sound. Reis eight years ago made the first successful experiment in transmitting musical sound some distance by aid of electricity. Simple as his apparatus was, that used by Professor Bell is still simpler; for he dispenses with the electrical battery, and substitutes a small steel magnet. The subject-matter of the book is greatly elucidated by well executed woodcuts, of which there are no fewer than 454. An Appendix furnishes upwards of 300 questions on the properties of matter, liquids, gases, sound, heat, light, magnetism, and electricities. Many of these are easy, common-sense questions; whilst others can only be answered after a thoughtful perusal of the various subjects. They are all very suggestive to both teachers and pupils; and we commend them to the former as eminently adapted to elementary class-work." Philosophical Magazine.

Principal Repayable April 1, 1907, at par, but redeemable by the Company previously, on six months' notice, at £115 per cent. on the nominal value.

These Debentures are to Bearer, but may be converted into Registered Debentures, on application at the Office of the Company.

Messrs. J. HENRY SCHRODER and CO. offer for Sale the above £800,000 First Debentures, constituting, together with the £700,000 already issued by the Company, the whole of the First Debenture Charge of the Company.

Subscription price (including the Coupon payable April 1, 1884), £92½ per cent., payable as follows:—

£5 0	per cent.	on Application.
87 10	,,	on January 31.
£92 10

The Alabama, New Orleans, Texas, and Pacific Junction Railways Company, Limited, 9 Drapers' Gardens, London (incorporated under the Companies Act, 1862), has an issued Share Capital of:—

£1,500,000 6 per cent. Preferred "A" Shares,
2,500,000 Deferred "B" Shares.

Cincinnati Southern	336
Vicksburg and Meridian	142
Vicksburg, Shreveport, and Pacific ...	189
New Orleans and North-Eastern	195
Total miles	862

The Railroads are worked in close alliance with the Alabama Great Southern Company, which owns 295 miles, forming together a system of 1,157 miles of Trunk Roads. The northern terminus is Cincinnati. Proceeding thence in a direct line through Tennessee to Chattanooga, and then, in connection with the Alabama Great Southern, traversing the important iron and coal districts of Alabama to Meridian, the system from that point running southward, reaches New Orleans, viâ the New Orleans and North-Eastern Line; while by means of the Vicksburg and Meridian, and the Vicksburg, Shreveport, and Pacific, it runs due west, traversing the cotton belt of the entire district, and forming a junction with the Trans-Mississippi system of roads.

With the exception of laying the rails on about 50 miles of the Vicksburg, Shreveport, and Pacific Railroad, which is being proceeded with, the whole system is in working order.

Applications for Debentures must be made on the form attached to the Prospectus.

In cases where a less number of Debentures is allotted than is applied for, the surplus of the deposit will be applied towards the payment of the balance due January 31.

In default of payment of the balance at its due date, the allotment and the payment on application will be liable to forfeiture.

The Allotment Letters and Receipts for the payments on application will be exchanged for the Debentures on payment of the balance of the Subscription price.

A copy of the Trust Deed, and of the form of Debenture, can be seen at the Offices of Mr. G. M. Clements, Solicitor, 17 Gresham House, Old Broad Street, London, E.C.

The Subscription will be opened on Friday, January 18, and closed at 4 o'clock on Monday, January 21, for London, and on Tuesday, January 22, at 12 o'clock, for the Country.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—SELF-HELP.—Prior to the discovery of these remedies, an easy, ready, and reliable remedy for outward disfigurations and inward complications was, practically speaking, unknown. No one need now be at a loss if they should unfortunately suffer from ulcers, sores, tumours, boils, bruises, sprains, &c. Enveloping Holloway's medicines are very intelligible printed directions for using them, which should be attentively studied and immediately followed by all who resort to his treatment. Sooner or later the sufferer will assuredly triumph over the worst diseases. This searching Ointment disperses all those malignant humours which aggravate diseases of the skin, prevent the cicatrization of ulcers, and excite inflammatory tendencies in the system.

ARMY and MILITIA.

Officers of the Army prepared for Promotion,
BERKSHIRE.

The Studies are under the direction of Lieutenant-Colonel COLVILE, late 11th Foot, Graduate of the Staff College (Author of "Military Tribunals"), assisted by Captain STEWART, late Royal Artillery, Lieutenant-Colonel WHALLEY, late 2nd Dragoon Guards, and one other experienced Officer.

RESULTS FOR 1883.

In March, nine competed, two passed, and two others were offered Cavalry Commissions; one obtained special mention in Tactics with 525 marks, another special mention in Law with 500 marks.

In September, 1883, eight competed, half passed, taking the following places on the list:—3rd, 17th (tie), 38th, and 50th (the first attempt).

Next Term commences January 5, 1884.

Further particulars, on application to
Captain PRESTON,

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

At the late Examination held on September 19 and 20, Major DE THOREN and Major MORGAN have fully maintained their former good repute for passing candidates. They sent up three and passed two,— Mr. H. G. Morgan,
Mr. W. S. Carey.

At this establishment the classes are small, and the pupils receive a great deal of individual attention, which enables them the easier to grasp the subject.

Major DE THOREN has had great experience as a Military Instructor and also with Militia Officers.

Major MORGAN has passed the Staff College, and is the author of "Summary of Law" and "Summary of Tactics."

Apply to Major DE THOREN, Bellefield, Jersey.

MILITARY EDUCATION, GERMANY.

—Colonel BERDOE WILKINSON, late R.E., formerly in charge of the Ordnance Survey in Ireland, and Lieutenant-Colonel WILKINSON SHAW, M.A. (Staff College), late Garrison-Instructor at Aldershot, prepare Candidates for Sandhurst and Woolwich, and for Line Commissions through the Militia.

At the five Militia Competitions which have taken place since September 1, 1881, Colonel WILKINSON and Lieutenant-Colonel SHAW have secured for their Pupils THIRTY-SEVEN COMMISSIONS, although they have only Prepared and sent up a very Limited Number of Candidates. A list of successful Pupils, showing the high places taken by them, will be furnished on application.

At the Militia Literary Examinations held during the same period, a Number of Pupils have also passed; in this Competition the FIRST PLACE was taken in April last by Lieutenant Lord Skelmersdale, and the SECOND PLACE in the recent October Examination by the only candidate sent up, Lieutenant the Honourable Victor A. Pelham.

The General Score for all Examinations now amounts to SEVENTY-ONE SUCCESSES achieved by Pupils during the last two years.

LIEUTENANTS of MILITIA desirous

of competing for Line Commissions can be received by the Rev. WALTER BAKER, M.A., at Batcombe Rectory, Evercreech, Bath. They will be thoroughly prepared in all Military Subjects by two Officers who for several years past have been engaged with distinguished success in this special work.

Great individual attention is secured, both Instructors are resident and give their whole time, very few Pupils are taken, and steady work is insisted on. Since the introduction of the Military Competitive, out of Forty-four Lieutenants of Militia sent up, Twenty-seven have been successful, several taking high places in the list.

A Large Staff of Experienced Tutors, all resident, assist in preparing for the Qualifying Examinations, and for the Sandhurst and Woolwich Competitions.

References to parents of pupils successful at all Examinations, INCLUDING SANDHURST and MILITIA COMPETITIVE in 1882 and 1883. All sent up for the last Militia Qualifying Examination passed.

THE MOUNTED SERVICE BOOT.—PATENT.

A COMPLETELY NEW and USEFUL INVENTION. By a CAVALRY OFFICER.

It is equally suitable for riding or walking, and consists of an upper and lower part, which, when adjusted by the peculiar arrangement of the spur, forms a complete riding boot, and at the same time the comfort of a boot and gaiter for walking is ensured. The lower part can be worn also as an ordinary walking boot. ECONOMY, COMFORT, and PORTABILITY.

Specially recommended to all Officers and Sportsmen going Abroad.

OROIDE GOLD JEWELLERY (REGD.)

"Recommends itself not alone to those of limited means, but to the wealthy, who, when frequenting large gatherings, whether at racecourses, theatres, public meetings, or even on that sacred thoroughfare, the king's highway, have known what it is to be robbed of their valuables."

OROIDE GOLD WATCHES,

Accurate timekeepers, 21s to 50s, safe and free per post (registered).

The "SERVICE" KEYLESS WATCH,

Open face, jewelled in eight holes, Two Guineas, post free.

"The watches of this patent are in no respect different from gold ones. The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose." OROIDE GOLD SCARF PINS, 2s 6d to 5s, post free.

THE PARCELS POST.—THE PARCELS POST AND TEA.

THE PARCELS POST and the DELIVERY of TEA.

THE PARCELS POST and the DISTRIBUTION of TEA to every place where there is a Post-Office in the United Kingdom.

THE PARCELS POST.—TEA of the highest excellence (as supplied to Dukes, Earls, Barons, and the County Families of England), sent free by Parcels Post in quantities of 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb., to any postal address in the United Kingdom, on receipt of a remittance for the price of the Tea and 3d.

THUS 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be sent to any address free, by post, on receipt of 8s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Half-Crown Tea can be sent free of post on receipt of 15s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea can be sent free of post on receipt of 15s 3d.

THE POSTAL LIMIT of 7 lb. will only really cover 6 lb. of Tea, as the weight of paper and twine has to be deducted, so that COOPER COOPER and CO. will send 6 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea free of post for 18s 3d, or 6 lb. of Two-and-Sixpenny Tea free of post for 15s 3d, or 6 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea free of post for 12s 3d.

PACKAGES containing 12 lb., 20 lb., 60 lb., or 100 lb. of TEA will be sent to any railway station in the United Kingdom absolutely free of carriage on receipt of remittance for the value of the Tea.

THE PARCELS POST.—4 lb., 5 lb., or 6 lb. of TEA will be delivered free of charge at your own houses by the postman, for 3d in addition to the cost of the tea.

THUS 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA will be delivered free at your own house for a remittance of 8s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea will be delivered free at your own door for a Post-Office Order for 10s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea will be sent free to your own homes for a cheque for 12s 3d.

THE PARCELS POST.—4 lb., 5 lb., or 6 lb. of THREE-SHILLING TEA despatched to any part of England, Wales, Scotland, or Ireland, by post for 3d in addition to the price of the Tea.

THUS 4 lb. of THREE-SHILLING TEA can be sent to the remotest address on receipt of remittance for 12s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea will be forwarded to any place where letters are delivered, postage paid, for 15s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea will be sent to any address in any postal district in these islands for 18s 3d.

TEAS of all descriptions on COOPER COOPER and CO.'S LIST, posted in parcels containing 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb. each by parcels post to any part of England, Wales, Ireland, or Scotland, in exchange for cash (in registered envelope). Post-Office Orders, cheques, postal orders, or stamps for the value of the tea, and 3d extra.

FOR example, a Package containing 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be sent to any place in the United Kingdom in exchange for 8s 3d in cash, enclosed in a registered envelope, and addressed to any of COOPER COOPER and CO.'S establishments in London.

OR, a Parcel containing 6 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be delivered by parcels post, carriage free, by remitting a Post-Office Order for 12s 3d.

OR, 5 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA will be despatched, free of post, for a postal order for 10s, and three penny postage stamps.

THUS, in the same manner, THREE-SHILLING TEA in parcels to the value of 12s 3d, 15s 3d, and 18s 3d each, containing respectively 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb. of tea, will be sent on receipt of postal orders, cheques, or cash for the several amounts.

CO-OPERATION. — COOPER COOPER and CO. also invite attention to the new System of Co-operation in the purchase of Tea by persons living in the country through the medium of the Parcels Post.

CO-OPERATION.—Thus, as COOPER COOPER and CO. are enabled to send packages containing 6 lb. of any of the Choice TEAS on their List to any place in the United Kingdom for 3d, it follows that if six families in a village are willing to club together, each can have a pound of tea sent for one halfpenny.

CO-OPERATION.—Or, as two parcels containing 6 lb. each can be sent for 6d, six families would be enabled, by joining together in one remittance, to order 2 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA each, at a cost of one penny only, in addition to the price of the tea.

CO-OPERATION.—This system will apply to every kind of TEA offered for Sale by COOPER COOPER and CO., and if followed out will practically enable them to place before customers in every county town and village in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, in the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man, in the Hebrides, and the Orkneys, Tea of the same choice kinds as sold in their various Establishments in London, at the same prices, with the addition of the nominal sum of one halfpenny a pound.

The very favourable weather has been taken advantage of, for drill purposes, during the past few days, and the Infantry Brigades were exercised by their Brigadiers in outpost duties and formations for attack. The Lieutenant-General Commanding, accompanied by the Assistant-Adjutant-General of the Division, attended these drills.

The following officers joined the Army Veterinary School on Tuesday last, for a course of instruction:—Major Gardiner, R.A.; Captains Aitken, R.A.; Mackenzie, Bengal Staff Corps; Douglas, 26th Cameronians; Bennet, 48th; Park, 2nd Battalion, 18th; Lieutenants Allen, Angelo, and Probyn, Bengal Staff Corps; Jenkinson and King, R.A.; Lang, 63rd; Symonds and Downing, 2nd Battalion, 18th; Lee, 49th; and Short, 100th; Assistant-Commissary-General Shannon and Deputy-Assistant-Commissaries-General Collard, Murray, and Baker, Commissariat and Transport Staff; Surgeon H. S. Gordon, Army Medical Department. Lectures will be delivered at the School every week-day, except Saturday, during the course, by the Instructor, Veterinary-Surgeon to the Staff E. T. Cheesman.

The following Permanent Serjeants of Yeomanry Cavalry have been ordered to report themselves at the Auxiliary Cavalry School on the 1st prox., for a course of instruction:—West and Taylor, 2nd West York; Tomlinson, Warwickshire; Williamson, Yorkshire Hussars; Hardy and Jennings, Duke of Lancaster's Own; Scott, Lanarkshire; Taylor, 1st West York; Stadward, Stacey, and Salter, North Somerset; Perkins, Hills, and Franks, Montgomeryshire; Lewis, Worcestershire.

Captain C. G. H. Newington, 1st East Surrey Regiment, and Lieutenant G. P. Douglas, 2nd Dragoon Guards, have been examined, for promotion, in subjects (a) and (b), Queen's Regulations, Sec. 4, par. 37, and have been found qualified.

Captain E. N. Henriques, R.A., has been ordered from Fort Victoria, Isle of Wight, to Aldershot, for duty.

Veterinary-Surgeon J. Finlayson has arrived here for duty, and has been posted to the Royal Artillery.

DOCKYARD CONTROL.

A Correspondent sends us the following remarks on this subject:—"Independent administrative control, where expenditure is practically expended, is always productive of economy; but where that authority is interwoven with interests extending over various departments, and branches of conflicting and assimilative interests, supervision and economy then become terms synonymous with direct and indirect falsification of facts and documents. The organisation of some of the smaller foreign Naval establishments is pregnant with extravagance, and probably the larger ones are no better. Large sums are frittered away somehow, but the apologies for buildings set up to represent items in which the money is annually expended on paper, are out of all proportion to the real value of such items. Paper items and substantial items are two very different things. The former figure in the Blue-book, and are believed by everybody to exist, but do not; while the latter too often require microscopic inspection before they are even seen, and so frail are they at times, that they soon disappear from the human gaze. It cannot be for the good of the service that one man, at a far-off station, should be entrusted with the duties of buying, receiving, paying, making contracts, accepting goods as to quality, paying everybody and for everything, signing and countersigning for, to, and from himself. Surely the temptation under such circumstances to make returns balance is too great, and that especially so when he knows that these returns have only to undergo the scrutiny of embryo auditors and self-made experts who sit in the forensic stools in the London offices. Such returns can be made to look so square and honest that even a chartered accountant would be deceived thereby, and call from the auditors praises of the compiler's business qualities and habits entirely undeserved. The practical men in the service know full well what mere shadows are behind the rows of figures so neatly arranged in many of those long columns, but the permanent official does not, or, if he does, does not care to dive into and unearth the mystery. For many years it has been the common practice at our foreign Naval establishments to spend the whole of the sums voted each year, whether the money is wanted or not. So far, the auditors have passed all the accounts rendered, provided no very glaring excess of the sums voted was noticeable. The auditing has been left to one man; but should such work be done in this way? Assuredly not. Hitherto the Accountant-General of the Navy has had to perform this duty. But how can he, in the midst of all his more important labours, spare time to devote his attention to such minor details? Surely this is work which the Treasury should perform, and those who are appointed to audit the accounts at the various Naval establishments abroad should be responsible to the Treasury, so as to secure that independence of action that no one would dare to question. Then many a strategy and combination, long practised with success, to the detriment of the Naval service, would have to be abandoned under the fear of certain detection when the day of reckoning comes round. Executive officers should be placed in charge of the executive duties of all Naval establishments. At present the Yard Accounts are so faulty that men can be taken on in the Department of the Civil Servant in charge without any check, so long as the General Vote, No. 6, is not exceeded, and this is the principal Vote affecting all the Departments. For example, suppose an order is given to complete defects in the Fleet, and that extra men are taken on to make good those defects, there may be writers and others taken on and shown as labourers in the accounts. No one can check this proceeding; and when objection is taken by the Admiralty to any excess on the yearly Vote, the blame is laid on to the Admiral or senior Naval officer, the Civil Servant in charge arguing that the orders given for completing the defects were the cause of the Vote being exceeded, while, in reality, he had taken advantage of the occasion to take on 'dummy hands.' To effectually stamp out this abuse, which is in no whit more honest than the practice of selling Government stores to buy paint, so severely punished in the Clyde scandal case, the Admiralty should at once appoint an executive officer to the command and charge of every Naval establishment abroad. There are many commanders and lieutenants, married men, who are eminently fitted for such appointments, and we feel convinced that, were such officers appointed, they would receive every assistance from their subordinates in the dockyards, who regard Naval officers with greater favour, owing to their high sense of honour, integrity, and disinterestedness, than they do that purely civilian element under which they are now serving. The Admiralty should also remember that 'independent supervision is economy.'"

Reviews.

The compiler of this volume, which has reached a fourth edition, is brother to the gallant soldier, who carved out for himself such a glorious career in India, and made the name historic. It mainly consists of extracts from letters written by Major Hodson. This could not well be otherwise, as during the twelve years of his soldier life he was known only by his letters or by the reports of others. William Stephen Raikes Hodson, third son of the Rev. George Hodson, was born in March, 1821. Having spent some time at Rugby and Cambridge, he was appointed to the Guernsey Militia by General Napier, and subsequently entered the Indian Army. In September, 1845, he arrived in Calcutta and proceeded up the country to Agra. It was soon the fate of the young officer to see the game of real war played. A letter addressed to his father on Christmas Day, 1845, dated Sultanpore, gives a vivid description of the first action he was engaged in, one in which he had several miraculous escapes. Then follows his experiences of the campaign on the Sutlej, with the battles of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, Sobraon, and occupation of Lahore. In June, 1846, Hodson was appointed to the Guides Corps. Hitherto his good fortune was most remarkable; he had acquired a high standing in the service, and at the same time gained a reputation for daring enterprise and ability. As he himself said, "he was the most fortunate and the happiest man in India." A storm had, however, been gathering for some time, steadily and without any check, till at last it burst suddenly; charges, some of them of a most serious nature, were made against him, and he found that he had a far greater number of enemies than he thought. However, he stood his ground firmly, and was supported in his endeavours to rescue his character by some of the most eminent men and distinguished officers in India. The outbreak at Meerut occurred, and in a week all India was in a blaze. Hodson was by mere chance on the spot, and free to act. This was a crisis which required such a head as his, and in a very few days Lieutenant Hodson was actually commanding before Delhi, at General Barnard's special request, the very Corps of Guides from which he had been ousted two years before. Lieutenant Hodson's narrative is compiled from the letters or bulletins which he sent day by day to his wife, written as best they might be, in any moments which he could snatch from press of work, sometimes on the field, sometimes on horseback. In one of the letters which was written by a distinguished officer, who was with the army before Delhi, the writer says:—"Affairs at times looked very queer from the frightful expenditure of life. Hodson's face was then like sunshine breaking through the dark clouds of despondency and gloom which would settle down occasionally on all but a few brave hearts, England's worthiest sons, who were determined to conquer." At this moment, Delhi was in the hands of the mutineers, and many felt that the whole British Army, and perhaps a large portion of India, might be lost. In more than one of his letters Lieutenant Hodson complains bitterly of the indecision of our rulers and of the tendency that existed to treat these rebellious Sepoys with gentleness. On May 19, he received orders to raise an entire new regiment of Irregular Horse, which did good service during the siege. The most exciting episode of the siege of Delhi was the capture of the Princes and of the King. The concluding chapter tells of the death of the gallant soldier. It was mentioned in a leading article in the Times in these words:—

> "The country will receive with lively regret the news that the gallant Major Hodson, who has given his name to an invincible and almost ubiquitous body of cavalry, was killed in the attack on Lucknow. Major Hodson has been from the very beginning of this war fighting everywhere and against any odds with all the spirit of a Paladin of old. His most remarkable exploit, the capture of the King of Delhi and his two sons, astonished the world by its courage and coolness. Hodson was indeed a man who, from his romantic daring and his knowledge of the Asiatic character, was able to beat the natives at their own weapons. We could better have spared an older and more highly-placed officer."

The Times' correspondent (Dr. Russell), in his letter of March 13, 1857, writes:—

> "When I returned to Head-Quarters Camp this evening, I found that poor Hodson had died the previous day and been buried the same evening. He was a zealous and accomplished officer of great bravery, ability, and determination, an excellent judge of the native character, of a humane and clement disposition, but firm in the infliction of deserved punishment. The last time I saw him he expressed a decided opinion that Government must resort to an amnesty, or be prepared for a long continuance of disturbances."

How We Defended Arabi and His Friends: a Story of Egypt and the Egyptians. By A. M. Broadley, Barrister-at-Law, Author of "Tunis, Past and Present." Illustrated by Frederick Villiers, Special Correspondent of the Graphic in Egypt. (Chapman and Hall.)—Such—with the exception of an Arabic street cry of Cairo in July, 1882, which we spare our readers, the English of which is "God grant you victory, O Arabi!" according to the author, whose authority we shall not dispute—is the full title of this curious book, of which a brief notice has already appeared in the Army and Navy Gazette. The same phrase in Arabic seems to be stamped on the cover of the book, but why or wherefore we cannot say, unless Mr. Broadley has some subtle idea in connection with the shibboleth which he does not vouchsafe to explain to grosser intelligences, for God did not grant the victory to Arabi, nor did Mr. Broadley "defend" Arabi and his fellows in the sense in which the word is generally used.

The Lieutenants' Naval Pension of £50 a year, vacant by the death of Retired Commander Edward Griffiths, on Dec. 30, 1883, has been awarded to Retired Commander Francis Osburn from that date.

COLONEL COLBORNE.

SIR,—I send you a copy of a letter Lord Dufferin has kindly sent me, after reading your late article, which though no doubt vastly funny, evidently showed (though of course this was not intended by you, as you received your information from what you considered a reliable source), a tinge of spite and malice. This was remarked by many officers who read it, who considered the article in question unworthy of the high character of your journal, accusing, as it did, Gen. Hicks of supineness, quite contrary to his nature. As for the Egyptian Government not getting "much work out of me," again you are wrong, because it so happened that by the accident of war, they got more out of me than out of the rest who were ordered to remain on board the steamer with Gen. Hicks, while I marched, after having held Kawa for three weeks. Col. de Coetlogon joined me afterwards, and after that marched with me. As for age, it so happens that the two officers who first succumbed before the campaign commenced were the youngest in one case and the strongest in the other,—Capt. Forest Walker and Major Martin, aged 22 and 38. My age, by-the-by, happens to be under that of Gen. Hicks, an officer who, besides being most gallant, was proverbially most hard-working and active, though in the present instance he considered it more desirable to reconnoitre in the steamer up and down the Nile to gain intelligence and bring it to the Army than to march with it,—though, when attack was certain, he at once joined with the other officers, landing his Bashibazouks and Nordenfelts. For your invidious remarks about myself, I care not; but I wish to vindicate the action of my late chief, and to show the folly of writing blind attacks, while attempting to be witty at the expense of officers who have done their best to serve faithfully.—I am, &c.,

J. COLBORNE,

Cairo, Dec. 17. General Hicks Pasha's Staff.

"Constantinople, Nov. 29, 1883.

"MY DEAR COLBORNE,—I see from your letter to the Army and Navy Gazette that the severity of your illness, which required you to return home, has been questioned. It may therefore interest you to know that in a letter which Gen. Hicks wrote to me, he mentioned the fact that he had been compelled to order you back to Cairo, and he added, he was very much afraid that you would never reach that place alive. This expression of the General's opinion effectually disposes of the insinuation in question, considering the fatigue, danger, and uninviting character of the Sennaar campaign. I consider it but fair that I should place on record this undesigned testimony of your late General to the gallantry, zeal, and devotion you have exhibited in the Khedive's service, at the imminent risk of your life.—Yours sincerely,

DUFFERIN.

Staff, Cairo."

DEARTH OF RECRUITS.

SIR,—We read every day in the papers, professional and non-professional, the various views of the public on the alarming scarcity of recruits, and the almost entire absence of the stalwart rustic element of 20 or 30 years ago. Many account for this unhappy state of affairs by the demand made upon the finer class of men by railway and police, and by the thinning of the most vigorous of the population by emigration, and that the War Office will not compete with employers on anything near equal terms. All these, according to views of old soldiers, are good reasons enough. But, Sir, there is another reason which must not be forgotten. It is that the recruit enters the Army in fear and trembling. He hears, reads, sees new rules and constant changes, and he hardly knows if a bargain, such as would allow him to steer his course, is to be depended on. Again, say all old soldiers, quite disinterested men, because they are out of the running, and mostly provided for, the abolition of pension has had a very bad effect. It is a provision for old age, that led to the enlistment of the best men we had. If half the Army were now long-service men, the change would soon become apparent.—I am, &c.,

ADMIRALTY APPOINTMENTS.

A correspondent, in calling our attention to another unjust appointment in the Paymasters' Branch, Royal Navy, writes as follows :—

"A few weeks since you commented on the injustice of the appointment of Mr. Rickard, an assistant-paymaster, as acting secretary to H.R.H. Vice-Admiral the Duke of Edinburgh, on the ground of its being illegal, and also unjust, as keeping a paymaster out of his proper appointment and on half-pay. In this case, the Admiralty first broke, and then altered the law to condone their offence. Had Mr. Rickard been specially deserving of some good appointment, the Osborne would have afforded the Admiralty an excellent opportunity of remedying a gross injustice to Assistant-Paymasters by superseding Mr. Donaldson, who has held that sinecure since May 16, 1876. A rumour is prevalent that another similar, but far more unjust job is about to be carried out, viz. :—a paymaster (Mr. Penfold), lately secretary to the Commander-in-Chief at Queenstown, and who has been serving as a secretary at home ports for the last six to nine years, is to be appointed as paymaster to the Dædalus, Naval Reserve Drill-ship at Bristol, in March next,—thus keeping a paymaster who has been serving abroad out of his expected home appointment for the sake of an officer who has not served as a paymaster for some 15 years (if ever), and whose late appointments have been as secretary and at home. The Admiralty compels paymasters, after a home appointment, to take a sea-going ship. Why is this rule to be broken in favour of a secretary coming from two (if not more) home appointments (secretaries) to the prejudice of a paymaster who has been serving abroad, and to whom the appointment should be given, if there were justice or equity to be hoped for at the hands of the Admiralty?"

ARMY SCHOOLMASTERS AND WARRANT RANK.

SIR,—The Royal Warrant dated June 25, 1881, undoubtedly conferred substantial benefits on the non-commissioned officers of the Army generally, and the extension of Warrant rank to regimental non-commissioned officers has certainly done much to increase the value of their positions, and consequently to render the Army more attractive to the ambitious young soldier. But it could not have been intended that half the entire body of Army Schoolmasters should suffer a serious loss of position by the operation of that Warrant? Such, however, was the effect of its publication, for, under its provisions, Warrant rank being only attainable by schoolmasters after 12 years' service as such, while bandmasters receive Warrant rank on appointment, more than 100 schoolmasters found themselves superseded by the bandmasters of the regiments or battalions with which they were serving. The previous position of the schoolmaster was determined by a Royal Warrant issued 1871, consequent on the exhaustive inquiry by the Royal Commission on Military Education in 1870, which declared him to rank "next below the serjeant-major," i.e., senior to the bandmaster, whatever the length of service of the latter. And nothing has since occurred to change the relative value of the positions, unless it be that the work of the schoolmaster has more than doubled in the interval, while the present highly effective organisation of Army schools requires his best efforts to keep pace with the requirements of the authorities. Indeed, no alteration of position was originally intended, Mr. Childers's original memorandum having limited the proposed grant of Warrant rank to serjeant-majors and schoolmasters (the latter after 12 years' service as such). Subsequently, however, Warrant rank was granted to bandmasters, staff serjeants of Army Service Corps, and others, all junior to Army schoolmasters, but the 12 years' service qualification for the latter remained unaltered. It must be remembered that many schoolmasters originally entered the training college at Chelsea as non-commissioned officers, with from two to five years' service; while the candidate for admission to Kneller Hall Training School for Bandmasters is only required to be "a non-commissioned officer," and to have "not less than seven years' service." The disadvantage under which the schoolmaster labours as to reckoning of previous military service will be evident when it is considered that, under present regulations, of two non-commissioned officers with seven years' service who leave their corps to enter the training schools for schoolmaster and bandmaster respectively, the latter would, on receiving his appointment, join a regiment as a Warrant officer, and would count towards pension the whole of his previous service, including the time spent at Kneller Hall; while the former would have no service to reckon, and would not be eligible for Warrant rank within a further period of 12 years. (It is only fair to observe that schoolmasters appointed prior to July last are permitted to reckon their previous military service towards pension, though not towards qualification for Warrant rank, and many of this class will be eligible for the medal for "long-service and good-conduct" before they become eligible for warrant rank! One case of this kind has already occurred.) The loss of position entailed by the recent Warrant is most seriously felt in India, where 90 per cent. of the "Unwarranted" Schoolmasters are; local warrant officers abound, and soldiers of steadiness and ability can attain to warrant rank in from three to four years by joining the Commissariat or the Ordnance Department. Further, under present circumstances, a schoolmaster of 11 years' service as such (in addition to previous military service) who returns from India, after passing eight or nine years in that country, finds himself entitled, on board a troopship, to precisely the same accommodation and rations as a private soldier; while the newly appointed bandmaster, who boasts a total period of eight or nine years' service—from bandboy to bandmaster—and who probably joined the Army as a bandboy since the schoolmaster received his appointment, is, as a Warrant Officer, entitled to intermediate accommodation and messing! Considering that the bandmaster has some 40 men in all under his charge, while the schoolmaster has (in an average regiment) fully one-third of the non-commissioned officers and men of his battalion to advance educationally, it would seem that the latter is fully as deserving of Warrant rank on appointment as the former. The civilian element, which has very recently begun to preponderate, would probably, however, render it desirable to withhold the grant of Warrant rank until young schoolmasters had qualified for their first increase of pay; but such a probationary period—three years—would satisfy all requirements, and would be quite equal to the seven years' service in all ranks required to qualify bandmaster students for entrance to Kneller Hall. Army Schoolmasters can justly claim to be awarded a substantial position, as, having been ruled ineligible for promotion otherwise than in their own department, they have little prospect of attaining to commissioned rank (as Sub-Inspectors) under 20 years' service as schoolmasters, if then; and are doomed to be again and again superseded by those whom they probably saw join as recruits, and who were enabled to qualify for promotion with their assistance. The "Unwarranted" Schoolmasters of the Army stand alone as sufferers by the publication of the recent Warrant, and I trust their case will be found to merit the consideration of the authorities, and that a sensible reduction of the present term of qualification for Warrant rank will be shortly announced.—I am, &c.,

THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For those symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the Glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d, tins, 1s 1½d, labelled "JAMES EPPS and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, M.D., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

TAXING THE SERVICES.

Once more, as a new year commences, are we reminded of the claims upon our purses by the receipt of the usual printed notice, on which we are to state our income derived from all sources, and another on which to note the various items of servants, armorial bearings, carriages, dogs, &c., in order that we may be duly taxed. Such a statement is trying to the temper, and requires the most conscientious feeling of probity to render it fully in all its counts. Without dishonesty, however, there is no escape from having to pay the pound of flesh, and all who have an income above £150 a year, or keep any of the items upon which duty is chargeable, must pay and look pleasant. There is a slight difference made in the matter of Income-tax, inasmuch as those in receipt of less than £150 a year are exempt, and those of less than £400 a year have £120 deducted, and are only taxed on the remainder; but all others suffer alike in the rate of poundage, no matter whether their income amounts to just the £400 or to £400,000, or whether it is derived from daily toil or from invested capital, and this is a point that is severely felt by many a professional man with a large family and without capital, who finds it more difficult to pay his sovereign for income-tax than his neighbour, who has only the same income, but derived from secured property, would in paying ten or twenty. In the former case, the professional man in any branch of her Majesty's service, who has only his stipend to look to, must either make provision for his family by paying heavily for life insurance, or leave them to the cold chance of the country doing something for them at his death; while in the latter case, there is no necessity for the outlay of a single farthing for insurances, since the same income derived from the invested capital during the father's lifetime will remain for his family after his death. This is a strong point for consideration, in the matter of income-tax especially, and it would be more just if a sliding-scale were introduced, charging less per pound on incomes derived from salaries only, and a higher rate upon the interest of capital, or rent of land, houses, or of any property of value that will not die out with the holder thereof. This would, in a measure, relieve those who earn their living by toil of brain or of body, and add almost immaterially to the responsibility of those who can sit down with folded hands, and yet know that they and theirs after them are provided for. Again, with regard to officers in her Majesty's service—no matter where they may be serving, whether in a pestilential climate or on the battle-field—their pay for performing their duties to their country, at the risk of life or limb, is mulcted of income-tax. This should not be, for if their pay is taxed when on a home station, it certainly should not be when serving abroad. To raise an annual revenue sufficient to meet the requisite outlay has made the head of many a statesman ache, and expedients have been adopted from time to time which soon fell through from their unpopularity or inconsistency; for instance, nearly 50 years ago the windows in a man's house were taxed according to their number, the result being an outcry for having to pay for God's daylight, and many a town was disfigured by the boarding-up of windows not absolutely required, a course of proceeding which caused the imposition to be speedily withdrawn. A large revenue might, however, be raised, without taxing the pay of Naval and Military officers. How that revenue could be raised it is not for us to say. All we desire to obtain is relief for the pockets of the defenders of our country, who carry their lives in their hands during the whole of their career. Nor are they over-paid, that their miserable stipends should be reduced merely to place them on an equality with civilians.

Three men of the 39th Regiment, dressed in the new khakee-coloured clothing, as recommended by the Aldershot committee as an active-service dress for the Army, proceeded from Aldershot camp to Osborne on Tuesday, for inspection by her Majesty the Queen. Col. Dixon, commanding the regiment, accompanied the party.

The Times says:—"The men of the First-Class Army Reserve have received orders to present themselves at their appointed stations for medical inspection, and some have already done so. When the Reserve was last called out for duty during the preparation of the expedition to Egypt, a considerable number of the men were found to be medically unfit for duty, and they were discharged. It is expected, in like manner, that many of them will now be pronounced unserviceable, and removed from the list of efficients, when their liability as soldiers will cease, and their Reserve pay be discontinued."

Prince Min Yong, late Ambassador from the Corea to the United States, has been staying during the past week in London, accompanied by Soh Kwang Pom, Chamberlain to the King of the Corea, and one Attaché. The party is in charge of Captain Phythian, with Lieut. Swinburne and Ensign Foulke, of the United States Navy, and is en route to Naples, to embark on board the United States frigate Trenton. The Coreans are the guests of the United States Government, and leave London to-day for Paris, where a week will be spent in seeing the sights of the French capital.

Col. C. M. Clarke, C.B., Assist.-Adjt. and Qrmr.-Gen. at Aldershot, has been appointed a member of the Committee which is about to assemble at the War Office, under the presidency of the Earl of Morley, for the purpose of re-organising the present regulations for the lines of communication of an army in the field.

"The incomparable oil," of which Byron sang long ago, after a wonder-working career on the heads of the people for the best part of a century, has changed with the times, and Mr. Rowland, of Hatton Garden, whose name has been so long associated with the manufacture of the rosy fluid that imparted its gloss to the capillary attractions of so many "bucks," and added to the wealth of the tangled tresses of generations of Neæras, since George III. was King, has produced for the use of the modern "masher" "the Golden Macassar Oil," which can be safely recommended as an admirable article for the toilet, and which we presume has all the virtues of the great original, with some special merits of its own.

THE NIGER EXPEDITION.

We have received the following interesting account of the recent Niger Expedition from an officer who took part in it. It will be found more detailed and exhaustive than anything yet published:—

"By Oct. 17 the whole of the Squadron on the station, with the exception of the flagship (at the Cape), had assembled at the Nun entrance of the Niger river, and there is no doubt but that great credit is due to Capt. Brooke (Opal) for the way the ships were got together, coaled, and each and all ready with extra stores, medical comforts, and the men weeded out, considering the ships were all scattered about on different parts of the station when he received orders to organise the expedition. The Algerine, unfortunately, got some cases of fever on board whilst we were waiting off the river, 15th—20th, or else, I believe, some of her boats were to have taken part in it. As it was, her orders being out for the S.E. coast, and her relief (Frolic) known to be on her way, the Algerine was sent to her new station, calling at Ascension. On Oct. 20, the pilots having been collected, and all being ready, the expedition went in across the bar, anchoring off Akassa for the night. It was composed of the following:—1. Alecto (senior officer's pendant), with 80 officers and men, and steam cutter of Opal. 2. Flirt, with Alecto's steam cutter and a sub-lieutenant (Duff) and cutter (with crew) from Opal. 3. Starling, with Midshipman Hay and cutter (with crew) from Opal. Starting at daylight each morning, we reached Idda, our destination, on evening of 24th. The natives here are an independent lot, and had shot in cold-blood the helmsman in one of the National African Company's steam launches, killing him dead; also they had detained in prison Mr. Crowther, son of the Bishop, for no offence whatever but passing down without paying tribute. A palaver was held next morning (25th) on shore at the National African Company's factory, a bodyguard for senior officer being on board the Company's flat-bottomed stern-wheeler Boussa, moored alongside the bank abreast. The natives on seeing the white officers land at once turned out all armed, and while their chiefs and our officers were in the building they entirely surrounded it. At the first words uttered by Capt. Brooke, there was a howl from the chiefs, and out they rushed with the obvious intention of stirring up their warriors to fight. Finding no hopes of a satisfactory settlement being arrived at, Capt. Brooke wisely withdrew, the wretched, cowardly horde mobbing him and the officers with him, pointing their guns and drawing their bows with the arrows (all poisoned) fixed. We who were watching expected every moment to see them all massacred, for the natives seemed frantic with excitement. But they would have been terribly avenged, as our escort, some 80 or 90 small-arm men and Marines were already prepared and at the 'ready,' only waiting for the first sign of hostilities commencing. The chiefs were then given a certain time—two or three hours—to make up their minds, all the time the natives keeping up a war-dance in sight of the ships; but the time went by without a sign, so the signal was made, and the Alecto fired a blank gun, at the sound of which all these brave and mighty warriors, who had been defying us with every possible means in their power all the morning, gave a yell, and skedaddled away to find cover, some of them taking a parting shot at us. We then shelled the place. The town was set on fire in different places, and a division of the landing party sent ashore to break up canoes, and finish off as much of the town as could be got at for flames; but the natives made no attempt at resistance, and only fired one or two shots when our firing commenced. They had previously fired on the peaceable Boussa as she was leaving the shore, and they fired on the Starling as she shifted berth after the town had been set alight. The Marines on landing put up a few, but they all bolted. Next day the factory was removed, the natives lurking about, and trying to approach near enough to fire on us; but a shell or two kept them at a distance, and we had no further trouble. A letter was left at a neighbouring place warning them to behave better in future, and on the 27th we all came down the river to a town about half as far up as we had been, called Abo. Here the offence was flogging a British subject, a Sierra Leone man, clerk in the N. A. Company's factory, and pulling out his beard, and other insults. The king could not be got off, and after his last experience, Capt. Brooke was not going to hold any more palavers ashore, but the chiefs gladly came off and professed to be highly delighted to be allowed on board. So in the king's absence, and as he had given the chiefs full powers, a palaver was held, at which they admitted their guilt, expressed contrition, and were ordered to pay a fine of 100 measures of oil, about 20 barrels. At the same time, there was an enquiry into an affair between the agent of the N. A. Company and a Sierra Leone trader, who had previously been kicked out of the Company's employ for misconduct, fraud, or something. He was a thorough-paced ruffian, and having been some years in the country, knew the language, and had mixed himself up with one of the chiefs of Abo, who had declared against the present king, and was doing all he could to turn the king out and assume the powers himself. As this chief's evidence was required, he was politely requested to come off, and told no harm should happen to him, but he sent back a defiant and insolent message. Again he was requested, and again replied in the same tone, so there was nothing left but to bring him to book. On the morning of the 29th, the Flirt and Starling shelled his part of the town, and after about three-quarters of an hour, the landing party was sent away to finish off. We had the previous day sent the two steam cutters to have a look at the place, as from the anchorage we could not get a very good idea of it. Owing to the unusual height of the river, there was a lagoon some 300 or 400 yards broad, and about a mile long, between the river and the town with two entrances near us. The factories stood on the strip of shore separating the lagoon from the river. On the boats getting into the lagoon they formed line-abreast, and opened fire on the houses and bush, for nothing else was to be seen, the natives showing at first no sign; but no sooner did we advance than they opened fire, fortunately without effect at first, but they had some six and nine-pounders (afterwards taken). The whole of the shore was a network of narrow and deep creeks, with a very strong current running through (into them from our side), and as each boat advanced up a creek it was at once completely isolated from the others, so each boat had to act on its own hook pretty well. The whole party was under Com. Hammick, of the Flirt, but the men were divided into two separate parties, in case it was required, the first under Com. Hammick, and the second under Lieut. and Com. Harston, with the Marines forming a third, under Lieut. and Com. Sanders, of the Starling. Com. Harston's party was on the left of the line, and, after the first advance, we lost sight of it all except two boats near us. We afterwards met the Opal steam cutter, under Lieut. Moore, and the Alecto whaler, with Sub-Lieut. Peyton. Both were hard at it, working well in spite of difficulties, such as the extreme difficulty of handling the boats and the dense bush, from which the natives now and then would fire on our people. We found the houses each standing on what was then a small island, the water within a foot or so of the walls, so it was nearly all boat work. We were fired on several times, but no one was touched. We found three victims of our fire and saw five or six others dead, and how many got away wounded or were washed away by the strong current I could not say, but no doubt a good many, from the blood about. Lieut. and Com. Harston captured a war canoe, armed with two small guns on swivels, loaded nearly to the muzzles with a miscellaneous lot of articles. It was boarded in fine style by his boat's crew, on which the niggers jumped overboard and fled, our fellows killing one with their volley. A number of guns and muskets were left by them in the canoe, also a complete fit-out of ammunition and gin! On the right, we captured several small guns and destroyed any number of canoes and plantain trees, and then set fire to the houses and retired, the natives by this time having been driven into the bush, but not, unfortunately, without a heavy price being paid. Young Hay, midshipman, in the Opal's cutter, was most severely wounded in the shoulder, near the spine, and when taken on board the Flirt had lost all sensation below his waist, and the doctors thought very badly of him. A Marine Artilleryman and an A.B. were shot dead in the Opal's steam-cutter; Lieut. Moore, and a corporal R.M.A. severely wounded (stomach, since dead); also a Marine of Alecto, wounded in arm. These four last casualties all took place in the same boat, Hay's being not far off, and the Alecto's boats close to in the other creeks. I can only suppose the natives had rallied and made more of a stand just where we were, for the rest of the party did not see anything of them after the first. The Flirt was at once sent down out of the river with the two severely wounded, and the Alecto followed next day, when everything was said to be quiet. Capt. Brooke was much cut up, and had quite enough of it. As bad luck would have it, the day of the affair (Monday, 29th) was about the hottest we have had, the thermometer on board being at mid-day 87° in the shade, and our landing party was out in the sun from 8 to 11.15 a.m., but I think the precaution of making them all change their clothes and serving out an extra dose of quinine saved them. We at once proceeded for Lagos with the wounded, and then went on to Accra, being joined by the Alecto on Nov. 5. We sent poor young Hay home on board the mail at Lagos. We all hope the change and a naturally strong constitution may pull him through, but are at the same time afraid that the odds are heavily against him. He was a general favourite, as nice a lad as ever I came across, and was only taken by Capt. Brooke at his father's (Hay's) special request that the boy might be allowed to see any service that was going. He was through Egypt, including Alexandria, in the flagship. Since leaving the river, all the men employed have been taken with fever, with very few exceptions, both Opal, Starling, and Alecto being quite prostrated; and I expect the Flirt, from having been up there last year, will suffer still more heavily. It is hard to say what it is due to, except climate, as the doctors say it is not 'malarial' fever, and the men were taken every possible care of, the Opal's bringing all their hammocks with them, and never being allowed for a moment to lie on the deck; besides which we brought two awnings, as the Alecto's are most disgracefully scanty. At present, the Alecto has about 30 cases out of her complement of 40 white officers and men. The Starling to-day had same number, and Opal just twice as many. I think, after an expedition like that, the vessels should be sent to some quiet place to recruit, but the ships are being worked like slaves."

PROMOTION OF ASSISTANT-PAYMASTERS.

Sir,—In bringing grievances to the notice of the public, it seems to me that the best way of illustrating them is to take a particular case typical of the grievances complained of. With this view, I will state my own case, which will be found applicable to all the assistant-paymasters of my seniority in the service. I am an assistant-paymaster of about 11 years' standing, and joined the service in 1868. At that time, assistant-paymasters were promoted to the rank of paymaster after 12 years' service. Then came the Orders in Council of 1870 and 1873, which, by reducing the number on the Paymasters' List, most effectually spoilt the prospect of assistant-paymasters. At the present time, assistant-paymasters are over 15 years in that rank before getting their next step, and every year the time in the junior rank is increasing, so that before my turn comes for promotion, I shall have been about 17 years an assistant-paymaster. That means, first, that I shall be 38 years of age before becoming a paymaster; and, second, that I shall be 49 years old before I can possibly get in the 11 years' service as paymaster necessary to be allowed to count all my junior time. Allowing for deductions of time for half-pay, &c., in the senior rank, I shall be nearly 55 years of age before I can count the whole of my service as a commissioned officer. At this period the rise in pay is curious. Before the junior time is allowed to be reckoned, the rate of pay per day is from 19s. to 21s. (little enough, considering a man's age and length of service), but as soon as the junio time can be reckoned, the rate of pay rises to 33s. a day. Unfortunately, the rise in pay is of little use to a man with (one might say) one leg in the grave, as far as his connection with the service goes. There appear to be two remedies by which justice might be done. One is to increase the list of paymasters, and promote all assistant-paymasters after 12 years' service in the junior rank. There is no reason why junior paymasters should not be appointed to ships bearing senior paymasters, or as secretary's clerks in Admirals' offices. Another remedy is to allow more junior time to be counted on promotion to paymaster. For instance, all time served as assistant-paymaster over eight years should be allowed to count as senior (i.e., paymaster's) time for full, half-pay, and retirement immediately on promotion, and the first eight years' junior time to count as at present. In either case, the age for compulsory retirement of paymasters should be reduced to 55 years, the rank of assistant-paymasters-in-charge abolished, and paymasters, instead of assistant-paymasters, appointed to ships commanded by lieutenants. The present rates of pay for paymasters are fair enough, but with the block of promotion consequent on the limitation of the Paymasters' List to 200, and the small quantity of junior time allowed to be counted in the first 11 years service as paymaster, any even distribution of these rates of pay over an accountant officer's period of service is utterly impossible. They seem to be merely held out to him, like a carrot before a donkey's nose, to lure him on to further exertions in the service.—I am, &c.,

STAFF OFFICERS OF PENSIONERS.

Sir,—You were good enough to insert in your issue of Nov. 10 a few remarks relative to the answer given by Lord Hartington to Capt. Price, R.N., in the House of Commons in August last, on the subject of the promotion of Staff Officers of Pensioners. With the view of making this matter clearer and showing how disgracefully some of these officers are treated by the War Office, I venture to request that you will kindly publish the accompanying schedule, which will, I think, show at a glance how these officers stand as regards promotion, or rather (for most of them) the want thereof. It will be observed that they are retired in four different ranks, and on three different rates of pension, and this although all entered the Department on the same conditions and are in the performance of the same duties. Lastly, it may be observed that these "combatant officers serving on full pay" are now treated by the War Office as part of the Army Pay Department, though denied the advantages as regards promotion so liberally dealt out to that Department.—I am, &c.,

(Where not otherwise specified, the foregoing commissions and announcements bear date Jan. 19, and the current year must be understood.)

Naval and Military officers about starting a carriage or trap should exercise some amount of caution before purchasing. The old adage, "Go to a good house, pay a good price, and get a good article," holds good in a greater degree in the case of wheeled vehicles than in that of any other commodity. It should not be forgotten that on the structural strength of this description of manufacture one's life depends. Everything should, therefore, be of the best material. But there are carriage-builders and carriage-builders. The well-known firms put good material and good workmanship into all they build. The harpies, or those who trade upon the names of genuine firms, by starting in business under some assumed name, so nearly resembling that of an eminent coachbuilder as even to mislead the postal authorities, are not builders at all. They trim and varnish skeletons and second-hand jingles, and work the varnish up to make them look like new. These should be avoided; and as a case has recently come to our notice, in which a most barefaced attempt at imposition nearly succeeded in saddling an officer with a worthless trap, we have deemed it our duty to insert this warning, hoping that it may save many an officer much trouble and annoyance.

London Amusements.

At the STRAND THEATRE, Miss Minnie Palmer has received a cordial welcome on her return to town from her provincial engagements. The tricky antics of this sprightly little American actress are again displayed in the whimsical drama of "My Sweetheart," and her exuberant humour and unflagging animal spirits are manifestly much relished by her audience. The size of the theatre is far better adapted to the style of her performance than the Grand Theatre at Islington, where Miss Minnie Palmer was first introduced to London last autumn. Miss Eleanor Bufton now represents the designing Mrs. Fleeter, but the rest of the company remain as before. A slight sketch, entitled "In Harmony," written by Mr. H. A. Jones, and first produced in the provinces about five years since, supplies a pleasant prelude.

The OPERA COMIQUE now presents the vivacious Miss Lotta in the double characters of Little Nell and the "Marchioness," in a new version of the "Old Curiosity Shop," arranged by Mr. Charles Dickens from his father's fascinating novel. It is in the latter personation that her peculiar talent is best displayed. The other parts are characteristically presented, and the embodiment of Quilp by Mr. Robert Pateman is remarkable for its force and intensity. Some new and effective scenery has been supplied by Mr. Bruce Smith.

"A Mint of Money," at TOOLE'S THEATRE, is a farcical comedy, by Mr. Arthur Law, ingeniously contrived to present Mr. Toole in a series of highly diverting situations, and to make his audience laugh as long and as loud as possible. As Kerosine Tredgold, a nervous young millionaire, attired in a lemon-coloured wig and a light overcoat, the popular comedian goes through a succession of odd adventures, which provoke the heartiest merriment. Excellent support is afforded by Miss Erskine, Miss Kempster, Miss Linden, and Messrs. Ward, Shelton, and Billington.

Mr. A. W. Pinero's eccentric production, called "Low Water," having failed at the GLOBE THEATRE to retrieve by repetition the disastrous failure of the first night, a new three-act comedy has already been put in rehearsal, and will be produced on Monday. This is "Our Regiment," written by Mr. H. Hamilton. A new American drama is also in preparation.

At the INTERNATIONAL THEATRE has been produced a Hebrew musical play, called "The Sorceress," represented by a small troupe of Jewish performers who fled from Odessa, in consequence of Russian persecution. The few melodies introduced, chiefly of a mournful kind, are sung in the Russian language, while the dialogue is delivered in a barbarous dialect of Southern Germany. To an English auditor the performance, though undoubtedly novel, appears more peculiar than pleasing.

A private view of Mr. Edgar Bruce's new theatre, called the PRINCE'S, and situated in Coventry Street, Piccadilly, was afforded a privileged assemblage on Wednesday evening. The building, erected from the designs of the well-known architect, Mr. C. J. Phipps, is very commodiously arranged and tastefully decorated. The size is that of the Savoy Theatre, and like that establishment, the electric light is used for illumination. The theatre opened on Friday night with "The Palace of Truth," the company including Misses Lingard, F. Marryat, H. Matthews, Tilbury, Arnold, S. Eyre, and Messrs. Kyrle Bellew, Maclean, Beerbohm Tree, G. W. Anson, G. Temple, and Edgar Bruce.

NON-EXECUTIVE PAY IN THE NAVY.

SIR,—Under the above heading, in your issue of Dec. 29, you publish a comparative table of pay of Engineers and Paymasters, evidently the effort of an officer belonging to the former class. I do not remember ever before having read such a cool attempt to climb a ladder over other people's heads, so to speak. 1. To make an exact comparison of the full pay of each branch, the Chief Inspectors of Machinery and the Inspectors of Machinery must be included, for they are the senior full-pay grades of Engineers. Therefore, the pay of some of the senior Paymasters should be omitted, unless placed alongside that of the Inspectors of Machinery. Perhaps this will account for the £2,370? 2. The statement that the "average age of promotion to paymaster is 31" is delicious and encouraging; but why, in this crafty document, are the average ages of Paymasters of the years 1878 to 1882 omitted? 3. Why do so many Chief Engineers refuse promotion, and retire before 55? 4. Where is any mention of "Allowance for charge of engines"? Careful omission of a very substantial "full pay!" Much more might be said; but, in conclusion, I desire to commend the study of an old French proverb to the compiler, viz., "À barbe de fol on apprend à raire." In selecting the Paymasters, he has not been happy in his choice of a subject.—I am, &c., A BREHON.

The Bacchante, which is being refitted and armed with 6-in. breechloaders, and the Triumph, which is being generally refitted, are ordered to be prepared for the pendant by the end of the current financial year. The former is expected to relieve the Boadicea as the flagship on the Cape station, and the latter the Northampton, flagship on the North American and West Indies station. The Active, which is being thoroughly overhauled, is to be completed, if possible, by the end of next month, and it is anticipated that, in conjunction with the Volage, the Calliope, and similar vessels, she will be required for service with a flying squadron to be formed this spring.

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—Imperfectly adapted Spectacles are the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Mr. H. LAURANCE, F.S.S., Oculist Optician, 1A Old Bond Street (late 39), has made the adaptation of spectacles his especial and sole study for upwards of thirty years. THERE is but little practical use, except for party purposes, in harking back to the conduct of the Government in its dealings with the Government of the Khedive, the Soudan question, and with General Gordon. "Africa is the grave of great reputations," so it has been said. But if General Gordon fails, the Government will die, not he; and already there are signs and tokens that he has been sent out on a mission which cannot be attended with great success, and which may fail altogether. There is, however, one thing to be pointed out, and that is the vantage-ground which has been secured to him by the efforts of Baker Pasha, and by the base, narrow as it is, afforded him by the levies of that hardly-treated officer, by the Regulars of Evelyn Wood's Army, and even by the influence of the conqueror of Darfour, Zebeer Pasha, whom all our newspapers treat as if he were a mere vulgar slave-dealer. What Gordon Pasha has been sent to do is not clearly set forth, but it may be taken as a mission to get the British Government out of the hole into which it has been put by its insouciance, and the march of events which depended on the march of the Mahdi. How he is to do this is not very plain. It is stated that he distinctly refused to go out as the officer of the Khedive's Government, but if so, how is he to command the Khedive's Army, and rule the Khedive's subjects, and act as the Khedive's Governor and soldier, in a country which we have declared outside the scope of our views and interests? Sir E. Wood is the paid servant of the Egyptian Government, so is Baker Pasha; and it is not easy to understand the relations of Gordon Pasha as an independent British emissary, with the Egyptian officials at the head of the Native Army and Gendarmerie or Police. We are told Gordon Pasha—or more properly, pro hac vice, General Gordon—is to concert measures with Sir E. Baring, &c., for the protection of Egypt and the settlement of the Soudan difficulty; but Sir E. Baring is not the Khedive, as yet, and it would be a death-blow to the Government at Cairo, which it cost so much to set up, if the very semblance of power were shattered to pieces at Abdeen, and the prestige of Tewfik, such as it is, openly destroyed by our representatives. When Lord Dufferin was asked whether Sir E. Wood would be bound to obey the Egyptian Government, in opposition to the wishes of the British authorities, he replied, "Certainly he would, in theory, but in practice he would not do it, for all that," and hence it may be inferred that Sir E. Baring would have the support of the British General in command of the troops in any crisis, and can transmit to him from home orders for the employment of the Egyptian soldiers, paid by Egypt; but there might be serious consequences, if any great strain were placed on the attachment of the natives to their British officers, in a case where their feelings would presumably be on the side of the native authorities. What may be the results of General Gordon's consultations at Cairo, we cannot guess just now, but by his abandonment of the route viâ Souakim he has been deprived of the opportunity of conferring with Baker, who is in immediate contact with the tribes between the Red Sea and the Nile. The memorandum by General Gordon published by us on December 1 was the expression of his views of the situation when the destruction of Hicks Pasha's army was reported, and no doubt events have modified them; but we may be certain General Gordon will not abandon the garrison of Khartoum, or any garrison he can save, and if it be true that a part of Hicks's army is still safe, it will be his bounden duty to free it. Where are the forces to come from? We do not believe that General Gordon's influence is so great as is supposed with the tribes. He is particularly obnoxious to the slavers, and Zebeer Pasha complained bitterly last year that General Gordon had shot his son or sons without trial, on an unfounded charge of hatching a slave-dealing conspiracy, so that Zebeer is not likely to enter heart and soul into Gordon's views and support him, and move in obtaining the aid of the Berbers and black fellows of Dongola, &c. Baker cannot move from Souakim to Berber, far less to Khartoum, and his clever project of a march from Massowah to Khartoum, covered by the Abyssinians, has not been encouraged here. Gordon could not take the route from Souakim either, and now it is said he will go from Cairo to Korosko, and take the caravan route to Khartoum; but he will do nothing of the kind without a good force, well equipped, with camels, &c., and again we ask, "Where is it to come from?" The Nile is running down now, and in a fortnight it will be very low, and unfit for steamers. He can get up to Siout by rail, then to Assouan by boat, then from the First Cataract to Wady Halfa, on the Second Cataract, by boat, say in fourteen days; and then he must work his way up to Berber, against currents and cataracts, till he has arrived at his base—for an ascent south by the river, the desert being impossible, except for a small force, on account of the want of water, will need preparation—and there he must remain, till he has got sufficient men to force their way to Khartoum. If, however, he has unlimited command of money, he may build a golden bridge for himself, and the influence of Abdel Kader, the Minister, might be of immense use to him among the Arabs, But, on the other hand, he may fail, or be too late. In that case, the blame cannot fall on Gordon. It is a pitiful commentary on the blindness of those who had the outlook over the situation, that Baker Pasha was almost howled out of the Egyptian service because he originally enlisted for the army and gendarmerie the very Turks and Circassians we are now so complacently eulogising as "stiffening" material for the Khedive's Army. "What," exclaimed the Tories, "are we to have these foreign mercenaries, janissaries, cut-throats, &c., employed to plunder and murder the poor Egyptians!" They were disbanded. If there had been a brigade of these troops sent up to Hicks, the Soudan slaughter would never have been heard of, and Gordon Pasha would have been free to work out his destiny on the Congo. Who is there who does not wish him success, though it be with fear and trembling, in his present great enterprise?

TIME was when the anticipated spread of education in the Army was held by many to herald a commensurate decrease of discipline, and the educated (and, therefore, probably argumentative) soldier of the future was very unfavourably compared with his representative of the then present, whose "was not to reason why." Time is when every effort is made to induce the soldier to avail himself of the means of education afforded by Army schools, and when schoolmasters are urged to fresh and unceasing exertions for his benefit. The Revised Army School Regulations recently issued are calculated to effect many improvements in education in military schools, and will doubtless lead to excellent results. Army schools are declared to be established "for the purpose of affording to non-commissioned officers and soldiers, and to their children, the opportunity of acquiring a sound and useful education." The education afforded to children in Army schools has always compared favourably with that received in Board schools, and even those of a higher class, as has been evidenced by the results of the local examinations held at Aldershot in connection with the Society of Arts, where Board school and Army school children competed for certificates and prizes. But the publication, recently introduced, of the marks awarded to children at the annual examination probably did much to militate against the "sound and useful" education intended to be given; for, the main requirement being "marks," there was a temptation to force children in the "best paying" subjects, the more useful and requisite subjects being correspondingly neglected. A somewhat false estimate of a child's ability and progress was thus founded on the marks gained. The total abolition of the system of "marks" is therefore to be welcomed; and the introduction of "Standards" provided for in the new Regulations will go far to ensure gradual and thorough progress in the children's schools. Schoolmasters will welcome the introduction of a new series of school books. The series at present in use, compiled by the late Chaplain-General, excellent as they doubtless were in comparison with school books in the market at the time of their issue—before the advent of Board Schools and compulsory education had given an impetus to the preparation of suitable text-books—have been long felt to be unsuitable to present requirements, and now make way for the introduction of Nelson's "Royal" series, probably the best published. While the requirements for the First-class Certificate of Education remain as before, a considerable addition has been made to the second-class arithmetic paper, which now includes reduction, practice, proportion, decimal or vulgar fractions, and regimental accounts. No alteration has been made in the third-class paper, but a knowledge of numeration and notation is now required for the fourth-class certificate. The alterations made in the method of marking the examination papers by the inspectors are generally favourable to the candidate. A memorandum for the guidance of candidates for admission to the Training College at Chelsea is appended to the Regulations, and includes a statement of the position and prospects of Army Schoolmasters, as defined by the Royal Warrant of June 25, 1881. That Warrant has apparently done much to damage the position of half the Schoolmasters of the Army, and seems calculated not only to affect injuriously the interests of the body—the distinction created between Warranted and "Unwarranted" Schoolmasters being virtually the revival of the "class" system, abolished as a result of the inquiry by the Royal Commission on Military Education of 1870,—but also to forebode the total disappearance of military candidates from among those desirous of attaining the position of Army Schoolmaster. The recent improvement in the position, pay, and pension of the senior combatant non-commissioned officers, and the comparative neglect of Schoolmasters, will tend to induce the non-commissioned officer possessed of the "unexceptional character" and educational abilities requisite to enable him to compete successfully for entrance to the Training College at Chelsea, rather to look for promotion in his regiment than, by entering Chelsea, to lose the whole of his previous military service, as well as the time spent in training, and begin on a fresh attestation as Schoolmaster, with the prospect of attaining Warrant rank only after twelve years' further service, during which period he will very probably be superseded by men who have joined as recruits since he received his appointment, and who have in some part received their education at his hands. Schoolmasters can justly claim to be placed on an equality with Bandmasters as to grant of Warrant rank on appointment, and reckoning of previous military service and time spent under instruction to qualify them for their position. But, under present circumstances, of two non-commissioned officers who leave their corps to enter the training-schools for schoolmaster and bandmaster respectively, the latter would rejoin a regiment with Warrant rank, and would count the whole of his previous military service, as well as the time spent at Kneller Hall, towards pension; while the former would have no service to reckon, and would not be eligible for Warrant rank until re-engaged. Considering that prior to the publication of the Royal Warrant of June 25, the schoolmaster on appointment ranked above the bandmaster, irrespective of the service of the latter, the distinction now created is a surprising one, and has effected the supersession of over 100 schoolmasters, many of whom entered Chelsea as non-commissioned officers, with from two to seven years' military service, and have held their present appointments for various periods up to eleven and a half years. The position of Schoolmasters was fixed after the lengthened and exhaustive inquiry by the Royal Commission on Military Education of 1870, and nothing has occurred within the last twelve years to change the relative value of the positions of Schoolmaster and Bandmaster, unless it be that the work of the Schoolmaster has more than doubled in the interval, and the present highly effective organisation of Army Schools requires his best efforts to keep pace with the requirements of the authorities. The term of twelve years' service as Schoolmaster, in addition to previous military service, is unreasonable under present circumstances, seeing that this term was decided on when the grant of Warrant rank was proposed to be limited to Serjeants-Major and Schoolmasters, as appeared from the Memorandum published prior to the issue of the Royal Warrant; and the grant of Warrant rank to non-commissioned officers junior to the Schoolmaster renders amendment in that respect necessary. The duties of Schoolmasters are arduous, and their results valuable to the service, and we confidently expect to find that the Secretary of State for War has decided either to remove the restriction as to service, and to grant to Schoolmasters, as to Bandmasters, Warrant rank on appointment, or at most to require a probationary term of three years only, from date of appointment as Schoolmaster.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh arrived at Palma, Majorca, on January 19, with the Channel Squadron.

By direction of the Admiralty, Commodore J. E. Erskine, A.D.C., has caused a Naval station to be formed on Treasury Island, one of the Solomon Group, in the Western Pacific. This arrangement is said to be due to a desire of the Government to keep a ship constantly cruising off the coast of New Guinea, so as to frustrate the attempts of colonising expeditions to effect a landing. The Government is, perhaps, not aware that the Sultan of Tidore claims and wields sovereignty over the whole of the northern and north-eastern coast of New Guinea, and that he has it in his power to grant concessions of land in that island.

At a complimentary dinner, given by the Liberal Club at Plymouth to their Member, Mr. Macliver, M.P., and to Admiral Maxse, their accepted second candidate, the latter, in replying to the toast of "The Navy," said:—"The Navy deserved to be toasted as warmly now as ever. The Conservatives tried to make party capital out of the subject, as they did out of other subjects. In their speeches they sought to maintain that the efficiency of the Navy had fallen off, but he believed there was no ground for such a conclusion. The administration was the same, whatever Government was in power. The whole arrangement of the Navy was, in fact, in Naval hands, and it was absurd to try to make political capital out of the subject." On this latter point we must draw conclusions with Admiral Maxse. If the administration of Naval affairs was entirely free from political pressure, and solely in the hands of Naval officers, efficiency would be the point considered before that of cost; but when a party in power knows that expenditure is invariably cavilled at by the other side, their efficiency is often sacrificed to economy. A glance at the first page of the Navy List, which gives the constitution of the Board of Admiralty, shows that the First Lord is a civilian representing his party in office; and that there are four Naval and two Civil Lords, with a civilian for First Secretary (who also represents his party in power), and a Naval officer as Permanent Secretary. If, in the face of this mixed formation, it is, as Admiral Maxse says, that the "whole arrangement of the Navy is in Naval hands," it is a poor compliment to the First Lord and the civilian members, who would thus become nonentities in office, and be shut out from having any voice in the conduct of Naval affairs, in which they are supposed to have a part control. Admiral Maxse also forgets that the whole clerical staff at the Admiralty is civilian, and that more managing is done by the civilian permanent heads of departments than by the Naval Lords. It is Admiral Maxse who is trying to make political capital out the Navy, crying, "peace! peace! when there is no peace," as an excuse for our Naval shortcomings.

We understand that, owing to representations made by General Gordon prior to leaving England for Egypt, the Admiralty are seriously considering the proposal to send a battalion or brigade of Marines to Egypt, to assist, in conjunction with gunboats on the Nile, in the defence of Egypt Proper against any incursion of the Mahdi.

Sir Thomas Brassey and the Director of Works visited on Wednesday last the proposed new works at Portsmouth. It is to be regretted that when bricks and mortar are under consideration, the Junior Lord of the Admiralty has not the companionship of the Member for Stoke-upon-Trent, who so ably supports all votes for expenditure on Admiralty buildings, and strongly opposes any improvement in the pay or position of the officers of either service.

There is no lack of strong and healthy boys seeking admission to the Royal Navy. Nearly one hundred have been entered during the current month at Portsmouth. As they are all respectable lads, it is to be hoped that they will prove an acquisition to the service.

There is but a scanty crop of news from Tonquin this week. We see that the operations against Bacninh will not be undertaken until General Millot reaches the scene of action with reinforcements, and that, unfortunately, the transport Vinh-Long, upon which the General and a portion of the reinforcements embarked, broke down, and had to put into Colombo. It is probable that this accident may cause some delay. The General and his staff are said to have gone on by steamer, leaving behind them 1,400 men, who will not be able to reach Tonquin until the end of next month. This may be serious, as after the arrival of General Millot it will not be possible, owing to the climate, to carry on operations for more than a month. While waiting for his successor to step ashore, Admiral Courbet has been busy purging the delta of the riff-raff which have been devastating the country, and keeping the French outposts continually on the alert. In the meantime, gunboats and transports are continually leaving Toulon for Tonquin, and the light-draught gunboats, the order for the construction of which was first of all given to an English firm at Poplar, will soon be ready to take the water. We may add that operations in Madagascar appear to be going on in a languid way, and that the French are suffering a good deal from fever, although no actual deaths are reported.

We understand that in most instances the late Serjeant-Instructors of Musketry, whose rank was abolished last year, will be restored to their former position on the resuscitation of the rank; i.e., in cases where they are willing to resume their old duties. This is only an act of justice.

No official account of the nature of the great work of the German General Staff has been published in France on the late war. The accounts even for that disastrous year have yet been made up. It was only recently that the Report by M. de la Porte on the Bill for finally regulating the Budget for 1871 was distributed amongst the Deputies. In this Report there appear for the first time official data of the number of soldiers raised by France against the Germans. According to those statistics, the number of troops of the national defence in the first months of 1871 was 1,338,177. Of these, 381,547 men were enclosed in Paris; the remainder were in the field. The Paris Army consisted of the following elements:—General Staff, 542; Administration, 6,878; Gendarmerie, 7,012; Infantry of the Line, 102,987; Cavalry, 4,479; Artillery of the Line, 18,150; Engineers, 2,365; Train, 3,779; Garde Mobile (infantry), 114,472; Garde Mobile (artillery), 3,462; Douaniers, 2,758; Forestiers, 1,184; Marine Infantry, 8,207; Marine Artillery, 2,034; sailors, 8,136; volunteers and "assistant" artillerists, 4,002; marching battalions of the National Guard, 96,000 men. The Army of the Provinces consisted of:—Army of the Nord, 28,920; Army of Hâvre, 31,000; Army of the Cotentic, 32,110; second Army of the Loire, 238,649; 25th and 26th Army Corps, 63,205; Nevers Corps, 18,318; Army of the Vosges, 44,449; Garrison of Bourges, 15,502; that of Lyons, 22,986; Belfort, 12,000; remnants of the Army of the East, 6,087; Angoulême, 33,869; garrisons in France and Algeria, 354,533; troops in camps and depôts, 55,000. Of these provincial forces, 457,000 men belonged to the Active Army, 230,000 to the Garde Mobile, 220,000 to the mobilised National Guards, and from 40,000 to 50,000 men to the Francs-tireurs. There were placed, besides, nearly 100,000 mobilised National Guards under the provisional administration and organisation of the Ministry of the Interior, and there had been no time to enrol the whole class of 1871, 238,000 men, who were called in on January 5. Those two elements would, if the war had been prolonged, have supplied a further force of 338,000 men, so that the number of troops available for the defence of the country would have amounted to 1,676,000 men, although the French had lost, from August 1, 1870, to April 1, 1871, in killed, wounded, prisoners, and those dismissed on account of ill-health, no fewer than 658,509 men. The exact figures of the losses of the French in that period were:—Deserters, 3,684; prisoners of war, 310,559; freed from active service, 78,856; dismissed on account of being unfit for service, 4,756; killed in front of the enemy, 21,439; died of wounds or disease, 14,398; various losses without specified causes, 223,410. The above official data of the French War Ministry confirm what had been stated in the published work of the German General Staff, that the French Armies were superior to the Germans in numbers, although not in training and cohesion.

A French paper, in a somewhat unpatriotic spirit, reveals to the world how the General Staff of the Army will be composed in the event of a Continental war. We are told that General Saussier, who is now in Algeria, will be the Commander-in-Chief, and that General de Miribel will be the Head of the Staff, having under him Generals Lanry, Haillot, Grévy, and Parmentier. There are to be four armies. The 1st, under General Bellot; the 2nd, under General Schmitz; the 3rd, under General Fevrier; the 4th, under General Laval. This latter army will comprise the 19th Corps, or the Army of Algiers, and will be made up of African Infantry, Marines, and the 3rd Division of Cavalry. Then there are to be two Armies of Reserve, placed respectively under the orders of Generals Counat and Woolf. The two armies are to have for points of concentration Paris and Lyons. General Lallemand will exchange the command of the 1st Army Corps to go to Algeria, where he will replace General Saussier. It seems hardly probable that General Saussier, if intended for the Command-in-Chief in the hour of peril, should be left in Africa, instead of commanding at Châlons or Besançon. The writer gives the list of the Generals of Division to serve in the above armies in the event of a mobilisation, forgetting that on April 1 fourteen of these officers will be placed on the Retired List. A Government paper denies that there is any intention of employing General Miribel as Chief of the Staff in the event of war, adding that the only decision which has been arrived at in principle is that General Lallemand will replace General Saussier, who will be called to a very high command.

The Bulletin de la Réunion des Officiers, in speaking of the value of light artillery, informs us how it was that the terrible mitrailleuses failed to work the wonders which were expected from them in the Franco-German War. Before hostilities broke out, there were many rumours in circulation respecting these death-dealing weapons, which were secretly manufactured at Meudon, under the eye of Napoleon III., and experimented with at Vincennes before a very small and very select circle. These mitrailleuses, as they were manufactured, were carefully stowed up at Mont Valerien, and it was determined that no other Power should learn the secret of these formidable engines. Alas! the very mystery in which they remained shrouded until they were dispatched to the front proved fatal to their efficiency. The troops to whom they were committed were not familiar with them, and consequently did not handle them with effect. Nor was it until the war was over that the proper uses to which they were adapted were clearly discerned—that they could not be worked in batteries, because their range was not sufficient, was feeble as compared to ordinary field-pieces. It was afterwards recognised that they were merely valuable for special cases, for the defence of a barricade, a bridge, or a mountain gorge, or to be brought up and employed at intervals and by surprise; in fact, that their proper place was in reserve.

During the last few years encouragement has been given in most of the West Indian Islands to form local auxiliary forces. These sometimes take the form of Volunteers and sometimes more that of Militia. Grenada was the first to take the field three years ago by reviving an old Militia act. Some 150 or more young men enrolled themselves, and attended drill with enthusiasm, especially after the arrival of their new green uniforms; but when a fair efficiency had been attained, compulsory attendance at drill was found irksome, the Act under which the force had been raised requiring an enlistment for three years, and inflicting a fine for non-attendance at any parade. The force consequently languished, and still languishes. Tobago followed suit about the same time with a force of over 100 men, which is also in more or less a languishing condition, though encouragement is given to the enrolled by exemption from certain local taxes. The Trinidad force is the Benjamin, being less than two years old. Its fate has yet to be seen, but starting under the most favourable auspices, should it fail, its failure must be taken as a sign that the Volunteer movement will not flourish in the tropics. Considerable opposition was shown to the movement on the ground that its success would herald the withdrawal of the troops, but in spite of this a force of 200 men was raised in Port of Spain, with a detached company of 50 men in San Fernando, the second metropolis. The corps had the advantage of the assistance and advice of several old Volunteers,—in fact, most of those who held the first commissions had served in some one or other of the English Volunteer Corps. Under these circumstances, the lines followed were strictly in accordance with the experience gained in the English force. The uniform chosen was that recommended by the Horse Guards. The men were free to attend drill or not, subject only to bye-laws framed by the committee of the corps, one of which was that, as the uniforms were provided by the corps, failure to attain efficiency, and so attain the capitation grant, was attended with a fine of like amount with the grant, the option being retirement. At the end of the first year the force was inspected and passed by the Major-General commanding her Majesty's forces in the West Indies, and though of course many who enthusiastically joined fell away when the novelty had worn off, there is every prospect of a permanent force of nearly 200 men, with the additional advantage of a certain amount of drilling to birds of passage. All these corps have State aid, generally taking the form of paid instructors and a capitation grant for efficients. The movement has been much assisted by the formation of rifle associations, entirely unconnected with the Volunteer corps, but offering the excitement of many contests at the butts. Rifle associations are now flourishing in Demerara and Trinidad, and one is in the course of formation in Barbadoes. Most of the old islands formerly had Militia forces, that in Barbadoes has not been called out since 1869, but some of the officers still hold their commissions and sport their military titles. Antigua for many years had a most flourishing Volunteer Artillery corps, as also a Yeomanry force, to the latter of which each estate was bound to contribute a fully equipped horseman.

A French military writer, commenting on the effective of the standing army, which for this year consists of 518,642 men and 113,334 horses, makes such reflections as these,—"But in the event of a mobilisation, the 20 classes of the Army—id est, all the able-bodied population from 20 to 40 years of age—would be called up; also all the horses necessary to complete the cavalry, artillery, and military train would be requisitioned. What figure does all this represent? Five classes of the Active Army, 704,714 men; four classes of the reserve, 510,294; five classes of the territorial, 582,523; six classes of the territorial reserve, 625,164; total, 2,423,164 men. To this total must be added the men belonging to the auxiliary services, but who, in time of war, might be employed in the fortresses, ambulances, and the administration. This category comprises 1,330,000 men, and raises the French Army on a war establishment to the respectable figure of 3,753,164 men. If these men have not an equal value, and cannot all be considered as soldiers, yet France could place in the field 1,500,000 men who have served for more than four years, 600,000 men who have served from six to twelve months, and 400,000 men who have been called out for annual training of from 13 to 28 days. It is well for military reformers and economists to bear these figures in mind. Soldiering is not popular in France—no one remains under the colours longer than he can help—but it is a necessity, and consequently the burden is cheerfully submitted to.

The Estimates of the Austro-Hungarian Army and Navy for 1884, as voted by the Delegations, amount to £11,913,757, subdivided as follows:—The ordinary estimates for the Army, £9,553,783; the supplementary estimates for the Army, £686,000; the ordinary estimates for the Navy, £820,362; the supplementary estimates for the Navy, £122,912; and the estimates for the Army of Occupation in Bosnia and the Herzegovina, £730,700. Each of the two sections of the Monarchy also maintains at its own cost its territorial troops by means of credits voted by the Vienna Reichsrath for the Provinces of Cisleithania, and by the Pesth Reichsrath for the Provinces of Transleithania. These special credits amount this year to £936,334 for the Austrian Landwehr, and to £733,885 for the Hungarian Honved. Thus the total Military and Naval expenditure of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy for 1884 is £13,583,976, showing a slight increase over the past year. The principal causes of this increased expenditure are the extension of the new system of cavalry remounts, the importance of the grand annual manœuvres, the arming of the infantry with the new repeating-rifle, the strengthening of the fortresses and entrenched camps of Pola, Pezemyl, Crucovie, the Tyrol, and Cattaro; the reconstruction of the ironclad frigate Ferdinand Max, and the building of the ironclad Kronprinz Rudolph, of a 2,000-ton cruiser, and of two torpedo-vessels. The Austro-Hungarian Fleet now consists of 24 vessels, 1 of which are men-of-war, with a total displacement of 80,000 tons, and armed with 207 heavy guns and 3 deck guns. The Army of Occupation in Bosnia, which is now composed of 1,443 officers and 32,980 men, is to be reduced by 5,000 on May 1; but the number of brigands infesting the country is so much on the increase, that it has been found necessary to reinforce the Gendarmerie, and to organise permanently flying columns of about 800 men each, to scour the country.

Mr. Stevenson is already well known to a large class of readers as a most successful narrator of striking adventures by land and sea. It is a vulgar mistake to suppose that he is a "boy writer" only, and therefore not worthy of being patronised by sterner intellects. The striking features in Treasure Island are the forcible language and literary skill with which some of the most striking scenes are described. The subject of the book will at once arouse curiosity, for the name of Flint, who figured in many adventures on the Spanish Main, is still remembered. As the story proceeds, it becomes more exciting, the reader, no doubt, having in his mind's eye the monstrous "pile" which Flint, the great pirate, buried, with extraordinary circumstances of secrecy and ferocity, on an unknown island. Then the reader will find described with genuine dramatic effect the struggles undergone by those who went in search of the cache, and returned to Bristol City with £700,000, in all the coinages of the world. The book abounds with adventure, told in a quiet, but persuasive manner, which cannot fail to produce effect. Take, for example, chapter xxi., which is introduced under the head of "The Attack." It requires no ordinary skill to sketch that little affair, brisk as brisk could be, and brimful of adventure. The most minute circumstances which occurred in the hurry-scurry of a land-fight with sea-pirates are so carefully narrated, as almost to render the reader competent to identify himself with some of the most striking actors in the scene; the most minute incidents find their place in the author's description. For example, the cool, calculating manner in which the captain completes his defence, in the attack on the stockade which is momentarily expected:—

> "Doctor, you will take the door; see, and don't expose yourself; keep within, and fire from the porch. Hunter, take the east side there. Joyce, you stand by the west, my man. Mr. Trelawney, you are the best shot, you and Gray will take this long north side, with the five loopholes, it's there the danger is. If they can get up to it, and fire in upon us through our own ports, things would begin to look dirty. Neither you nor I, Hawkins, are much account at the shooting; we'll stand by to load and bear a hand."

As the captain had said, the chill was past; as soon as the sun had climbed above our girdle of trees, it fell with all its force upon the clearing, and drank up the vapours at a draught. Soon the sand was baking, and the resin melting in the logs of the blockhouse. Jackets and coats were flung aside, shirts thrown open at the neck and rolled up to the shoulders, and we stood there, each at his post, in a fever of heat and anxiety. An hour passed away. "Hang them," said the captain, "this is as dull as the doldrums! Gray, whistle for a wind." At this moment came the first news of the attack on the stockade. "If you please, sir," asked Joyce, of the captain, "if I see any one, am I to fire?" "I told you so!" cried the captain. "Thank you, sir," returned Joyce, with the same quiet civility. Some seconds passed, till suddenly Joyce whipped up his musket and fired. "Did you hit your man?" inquired the captain. "No, sir," he replied, "I believe not, sir." "Next best thing to tell the truth," muttered the captain. Then follows a graphic description of the attack on the stockade, which it would be difficult to overrate. In closing these brief observations on Treasure Island, we have no hesitation in saying that Mr. Stevenson has written a book which is in every respect deserving of unstinted approbation. In narrative it is clear and precise, in description graphic and striking, and in effect highly dramatic. Even a "boy" could not wish for more.

With Clive in India, and By Sheer Pluck. By G. A. Henty. (Blackie and Son.)—The author of these volumes has been recognised for many years as a most accomplished narrator of deeds of "derring-do." He has now published two books which, properly speaking, should have appeared at Christmas-time, when the lads and lasses come home for their holidays, for it would surely be difficult to find any similar volumes so thoroughly suited for presentation to juveniles. With Clive in India draws a vivid picture of the wonderful events of the ten years which at their commencement saw Madras in the hands of the French, Calcutta at the mercy of the Nabob of Bengal, and English influence, apparently, at the point of extinction in India, but which ended in the final triumph of the English, both in Bengal and in Madras. Mr. Henty's companion volume, By Sheer Pluck, probably, indeed naturally, will prove more engaging to youngsters than even the deeds of the great Clive. This tale speaks of "the Ashantee War," and relates several spirited episodes in that not unimportant campaign, among others the decisive victory at Amoaful and the capture of Coomassie. There is a great variety in this story, a quality which will be fully appreciated by its readers. Both volumes are brought out in a very attractive garb, and are in that respect, as in many others, quite deserving of commendation.

EGYPTIAN NOTES.

Cairo, January 10.

The news from Khartoum becomes daily more despondent, and the task of withdrawing from the Soudan more difficult.

That the Mahdi is gradually advancing can hardly be doubted, and that he will meet with little or no resistance at Khartoum is almost equally certain.

Meanwhile, though orders have been given for the retirement of the garrison and inhabitants, they do not seem yet to be on the move. The transport of 11,000 persons is no easy matter, and we may yet find that the order has been given too late.

Suppose, then, that the town is surrounded by the forces of the Madhi before the retreat can be effected, what will be the next move? Can Egypt, or even England, stand quietly by, and allow them to fall into the hands of the Mahdi, as, without assistance, they undoubtedly will do?

I believe that the decision to evacuate Khartoum was a sound one, in the face of our refusal to send a force against the Mahdi; but we are by no means out of the difficulty, until the retreat is effected.

What, again, about the outlying provinces, Lupton Bey and Slater Bey. The former, we hear, is besieged at Port Rek (?), and the situation of both may be considered as hopeless, once Khartoum is abandoned.

It is, however, useless to discuss the advisability or non-advisability of holding a place which we have no means to hold. From many points of view, one cannot help regretting the sacrifice, but in the face of the fact that England will not and Egypt cannot prevent it, discussion is useless.

A singular story comes to me from Khartoum, brought there from Obeid. It will be remembered that Baron Seckendorff was understood to be saved, though wounded. It now appears, if the story is to be credited, that not Baron Seckendorff, but his servant, one Gustave Adolf Klutz, serjeant of Prussian Uhlans, is the survivor; and that this scoundrel not only deserted before the battle, but joined the Mahdi, obtained a command, and actually fought against his master and friends at Kashgil. The story sounds somewhat improbable, but it is attested by Father Luigi, chief of the Austrian Mission at Obeid.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather during the week, outpost duty has been steadily practised by the Infantry brigades on the Fox Hills and in the neighbourhood of Bricksbury Hill and Cæsar's Camp.

The musketry instruction of recruits is being carried out with as much expedition as possible—though here the want of the Regimental Instructors is keenly felt—it having been ordered from the Horse Guards that all men who have completed their recruits' course of musketry are to be further exercised as trained soldiers for the year 1883-4, provided they can complete such additional training by February 29.

The annual trained soldiers' course of musketry will commence on March 1 next, a month earlier than has been the practice heretofore. Spring drills will commence at the same time.

A general meeting of the members of the Officers' Club, Lieutenant-General Sir Archibald Alison, Bart., K.C.B., in the chair, was held at the Club House on Thursday. Important matters in connection with the club were discussed, and a series of resolutions adopted, which when carried into effect will make this institution in reality a comfortable club for the officers of the Division. An assembly dance is announced to take place at the Officers' Club on February 14 next.

Lieutenant-Colonel E. H. Sartorius, V.C., Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General, has proceeded abroad, on leave of absence till March 10 next.

Surgeon W. Dick, A.M.D., having arrived at the Camp for duty, has been posted to the Cambridge Hospital.

Surgeon-Major Falwasser, A.M.D., having arrived here for duty, has taken over medical charge of the 3rd Infantry Brigade from Surgeon-Major Cuffe, C.B.

A most successful concert, under the patronage of Lieut.-Gen. Sir A. and Lady Alison, took place at the Club House, Aldershot, on Monday afternoon last, in connection with the Musical Society, of which Major-Gen. the Hon. W. H. A. Feilding is the president, and Capt. C. H. Hullett, late Royal Marine Artillery, the conductor. Lieut.-Col. Cleather, the secretary, arranged an excellent programme, which was given before the Staff of the division, the élite of the neighbourhood, some members of the household of the Empress Eugénie, the Bishop of Winchester and Mrs. Harold Gore-Browne, Lady FitzWygram, &c. There were several encores. The unaccompanied duet-singing of the Misses Layton was perfect.

THE GERMAN NAVY.

A series of articles on the condition of the German Navy, which lately appeared in the Frankfurter Zeitung, and which were subsequently reproduced by many German and foreign papers, among the latter being the Times, have produced a sensation which can only be compared with that caused by the celebrated "Leipzig Article" of 1859, in which the British Navy was severely criticised by a German naval writer. Well-written articles of this nature very rarely fail to impress the general public with the truth of the charges brought forward, especially if judiciously interspersed with nautical phrases and references to particular types of vessels. The Frankfurt articles are, however, chiefly deserving of notice, as it is generally supposed that they have for their author an officer who once held a prominent position in the service he now condemns as inefficient; but they lose much of their value as exposures of existing evils, from an undue animosity towards Herr von Stosch. Before entering into the various charges, we will briefly refer to a remark of the Times' correspondent in Berlin as to what he calls "the extraordinary incidents that attended the late trial of the big guns of the Ting Yuen, or Everlasting Peace, built for the Chinese Government at Stettin, a war-vessel, if I mistake not, which was constructed after the pattern of the sally or coast-defence corvettes above referred to." It would have been wiser if the Times' correspondent had not recalled the breaking of a few panes of glass when the guns of the Ting Yuen were fired simultaneously. It is by remarks such as the above that the Germans are impressed with the idea that their Navy is watched with a jealous eye by England. Ever since the foundation of the new German Navy, we have followed its growth in an impartial manner in these columns, it not being our wont to disparage the fighting power of a nation which may be placed in the position of an enemy. For the same reason, we months ago recorded facts which now, through the medium of the Frankfurter Zeitung, create so much consternation in Germany. As far back as January, 1883, we informed our readers that the ironclads of the Sachsen class "rolled and pitched to such an extent as to render their guns almost useless." This is confirmed by the Frankfurt writer; but he is at fault when he observes that the above vessels "exceed in size, thickness of armour, and armament all existing (German) ironclads, excepting only the König Wilhelm," as both the Kaiser and Deutschland are larger and more powerfully armed vessels. Such slight inaccuracies are not in themselves of much importance, yet they go to show some carelessness on the part of the writer. But there are certain points in the Frankfurt articles which savour more of wilful misstatement than of carelessness. The writer observes:—"In the Technical Department of the Admiralty, there now (i.e., when Herr von Stosch came into power) reigned great activity. . . . . . In quick succession there arose new types, first of all a light draught, twin-screw gunboat, intended for service on the Chinese coast. The thing was built at Elbing, and managed to get as far as Kiel, but there she still remains, for, from the experience afforded by her short passage down the Baltic, no one desired to undertake the task of transporting her through the North Sea to Wilhelmshaven, far less to the China Seas." Now, the gunboat in question is the Otter, launched in 1877, and though only a very small vessel, there is no reason why she should not, with proper precautions, have made the passage out to China in safety. That no one would undertake the task of transporting the "thing" to China is a fact; but this does not reflect upon the Technical Department of the German Admiralty, as the French, for instance, have now gunboats out in Tonquin which are considerably smaller than the Otter. The dimensions of this boat are:—Length, 95 ft. 6 in.; beam, 20 ft. 3 in.; draught, 5 ft. 6 in.; and displacement, 132 tons; whereas those of the French gunboats of the Carabine class are only:—Length, 81 ft. 9 in.; beam, 16 ft. 2 in.; draught, 5 ft.; and displacement, 90 tons. The Constructors' Department can, therefore, hardly be blamed in this instance, for they merely expected their Naval officers to do what the French had done before them. Continuing our quotation, we find that the writer remarks somewhat as follows:—"There was, furthermore, built that monstrosity called the ironclad corvette Hansa. When completed, it could neither use her guns, nor manœuvre under sail or steam, nor attain anything like the intended speed. Having, then, at a cost of about two millions been repeatedly reconstructed, she was at last sent on a cruise to the West Indies, and here she lay when the capture of the German steamer Luxor by the Peruvians necessitated the despatch of Imperial ships-of-war to Peruvian waters. The Hansa was, therefore, sent to Callao, whither her passage took exactly twice as much time as any trading steamer." Now, a greater parcel of nonsense could not possibly have been got into a smaller space. The Hansa was laid down at Dantzig in 1868, and was launched long before Herr von Stosch had any connection with the Navy. She has, moreover, proved a very superior sea boat, both under steam and sail, and admirably fulfils her purpose, viz., that of a cruising ironclad. When first commissioned, the Hansa was generally considered as overmasted for a vessel of her class and size, but the officer in command reported so favourably of her performances in all weather, that her spars were not reduced. The fact that an ironclad on a foreign station should under certain cirumstances take twice as much time as a trading steamer in making the passage from port to port, can only surprise those who know nothing whatever of Naval affairs. In this strain the writer continues to surround many sensible remarks with a halo of absurdities. He finds fault with the custom pursued by the Imperial Government of placing a General of Infantry at the head of the Admiralty, and this complaint seems not unreasonable. But why does not the Frankfurt writer propose a remedy? To place a civilian at the head of Naval affairs is next to impossible in a military country like Germany, in which even post-office and railway officials carry swords, and where only the uniform commands respect. Under these circumstances, the German Government was left to choose between, comparatively speaking, inexperienced Admirals, and Generals who had at least shown some talent for organisation. That the choice should have fallen on one of the latter is not, therefore, remarkable; yet the Government left no stone unturned to avoid the necessity of making such an appointment. It is even affirmed by well-informed persons that this was only done after a certain German Prince, who holds a prominent position in the British Navy, had declined to fill the vacant post. Speaking of the ironclad gunboats of the Wespe type, the writer gives it as his opinion that they are quite incapable of properly fulfilling the purpose of their design, viz., that of efficient coast defenders. This estimate of the value of the above gunboats, as fighting vessels, coincides with the information which has from time to time reached us on the subject. It would have been strange, indeed, had these vessels proved anything but failures, as they simply represent an armoured variation of the Staunch type, but embodying all the faults of the latter, with but few of its advantages. The article next refers to unarmoured corvettes and torpedo-boats, as follows:—"It will suffice if we remark that the German Navy does not include a single corvette which steams more than .14 knots, and no torpedo-boat that runs more than 16 knots, especially when it is taken into consideration that not only England and Russia, but even Denmark have built torpedo-boats which easily steam 20 knots. This sore point has not been overlooked by Herr von Caprivi, and "well-informed" correspondents have already published a paragraph according to which it is the intention of the Admiralty to order a torpedo-boat in England which is to serve as a model for those which it is intended to build in Germany. According to our information, this intention, if it ever existed, has been abandoned, as private German firms have undertaken to build such boats, having a guaranteed speed of not less than 20 knots." Here our Frankfurt friend is again at fault, for in our impression of February 10, 1883, we published the following paragraph:—"It is rumoured that several Continental Naval Powers, who have for the last six or eight years been building their own torpedo-boats, will shortly place some good orders with our well-known English builders, who will, however, do well to remember that these vessels will be used as 'patterns' by foreign firms, though ordered by Government." To this we have only to add that the German Government have since then purchased a torpedo-boat of Messrs. Thornycroft and Co., and that nineteen similar vessels are at the present moment in course of construction at Bremen and Stettin. Taken as a whole, the Frankfurt articles are not unworthy of careful consideration, although, as already observed, they appear to have been written for the express purpose of throwing discredit on the administration of the ex-Minister of Marine. That grave mistakes were committed cannot be doubted, yet when the many difficulties are taken into consideration with which the ex-Chief of the Admiralty had to contend, but few will be found to deny the fact that the German nation owes him a debt of gratitude for instilling new life into a service which had hitherto been as rotten as it well could be.

THE HIGHLAND BONNET.

SIR,—Allow me to enclose the petition which has been sent to nearly every Scotch town for signature. I wish to add that ostrich plumes, though few are aware of it, were worn in Charles I.'s days with the Highland dress, the kilt and belted plaid. I can prove this by an etching, lately done for a work I am engaged on, of a picture of one of the Earls of Murray, by Jamesone.—I am, &c.,

ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL.

[COPY OF PETITION.]

"To the Secretary of State for War.—We, the undersigned Scottish civilians, petition that the Highland feathers bonnet, a headdress long worn with distinction by the various Highland regiments, be retained in these same regiments."

A complaint has been forwarded to the Commander-in-Chief in India to the effect that whereas the present value of the rupee is only 1s. 7¾d., it is charged to the troops as pay at 1s. 10½d., and that each rank, from private upwards, is receiving annually seven weeks' pay less than troops quartered in England or anywhere in the British Empire out of India.

EXAMINATIONS FOR SANDHURST.

It has been decided by the authorities at the War Office to make a very considerable alteration in the system and scheme of the competitive examinations for entrance to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, and we subjoin the new regulations, which have been approved of, as far as they affect the subjects for examination.

The subjects of the further examination and the maximum number of marks obtainable for each subject will be as follows:—

Up to the end of the year 1884:—1, Mathematics, viz., algebra, up to and including quadratic equations, the theory and use of logarithms, Euclid, Books I. to IV. and VI., plane trigonometry, and mensuration, 3,000 marks; 2, English composition, tested by the power of writing an essay, letter or pieces, English literature, limited to specified authors, and English history, limited to certain fixed periods, the authors and periods being notified beforehand, 3,000; 3, Latin, 3,000; 4, Greek, 2,000; 5, French, the examination to be partly colloquial, 2,000; 6, German, 2,000; 7, Experimental sciences, viz.—(a), Chemistry and heat, or (b), Electricity and magnetism, 2,000; 8, General and physical geography and geology, 2,000; 9, Drawing (freehand), 1,000; 10, Drawing (geometrical), 500. Of these ten subjects candidates will not be allowed to take up more than four nor less than two, exclusive of freehand drawing and geometrical drawing.

From the year 1885 inclusive:—Class I.—1, Mathematics, viz., algebra, up to and including the binomial theorem; the theory and use of logarithms, Euclid, Books I. to IV., plane trigonometry, up to and including the solution of triangles, and mensuration, 3,000 marks; 2, Latin, 3,000; 3, French (600 for colloquial), 3,000; 4, German (600 for colloquial), 3,000. Class II.—1, Greek, 2,000; 2, Higher mathematics, including analytical geometry, conic sections, differential calculus, statics, and dynamics, 2,000; 3, English history—one paper general, one paper limited to a fixed period of which notice will be given, 1,500; 4, Experimental sciences, viz.—(a), Chemistry and heat, or (b), Electricity and magnetism, 1,500; 5, General and physical geography and geology, 1,500. Class III.—1, English composition, tested by the power of writing an essay, letter, or précis, 500; 2, Drawing (freehand), 500; Drawing (geometrical), 500. Of these subjects, candidates must take up three subjects in Class I., and may, in addition, take up one subject in Class I. or II., and all the subjects in Class III.

The following will be the mode of selecting the successful candidates at the open competitive examination:—The number of marks gained by each candidate in the several subjects in which he has been examined will be summed up, and the resulting total will determine the place of the candidate in the competitive list.

Naval writers will, no doubt, rejoice to learn that an Order in Council having been issued sanctioning the retention of Naval writers of approved efficiency after they have completed their time for pension, with the view of employing them permanently in certain positions on home stations, the Admiralty have issued a set of regulations which provide that a limited number of such writers will be allowed in the flagships at Sheerness, Portsmouth, Devonport, and Queenstown, the guardships of the Steam Reserves, the gunnery and torpedo training-ships, the office of the inspecting captain of boys' training-ships, the training-ship for cadets, and the first reserve ship for Coastguard duties. These places will be considered of a permanent character, and the writers serving in them will be exempt from the rule under which other writers in home ships are relieved on completing three years' service. They are to be filled by Naval writers selected from those who have completed no less than fourteen years' service. On the completion of time for pension, these men, if thoroughly efficient, may be retained as pensioner writers, subject to the approval of the Admiralty, and will be allowed to serve if efficient, and required, up to the age of 60. They will retain their naval pension while so serving, but will have no claim to increase of pension nor to civil superannuation or gratuity on discharge. Their scale of pay, in addition to their naval pension, will be 3s 6d a day for the first five years, 4s 3d a day for the next five years, and 5s a day afterwards.

Mr. Barnaby, Director of Naval Construction, and Mr. Barnes, Chief Constructor and Surveyor of Dockyards, paid a visit to Portsmouth last week, and made an inspection of the new work in hand, directing particular attention to the Phaeton, which is preparing for her steam trials. During the visit progress was made in the preparation of the Naval Estimates. There is no truth in the report which has gained currency that the Admiralty propose equipping a flying squadron in the spring. Even were there no other obstacles in the way, none of the unarmoured cruisers at Portsmouth which have been mentioned as likely to compose the squadron could be got ready in time, while one of them, the Calliope, will not be launched until June. The launching ways have only recently been commenced. Another difficulty arises in connection with the supply of seamen. There is a dearth at the present time, and new crews for the Temeraire and Carysfort will not be despatched to Malta until the men paid off from the Mediterranean Squadron have returned from leave. The special arrangements for freeing the Colossus from water in case of accident or penetration in action were tested in the repairing basin at Portsmouth on Thursday, and proved very satisfactory. The engine-rooms and drainage tanks were flooded by means of fire hose fitted with meters to register the ingress of the water; the two centrifugal pumps, each having bilge-suction pipes of 13 in., which are used to circulate the cooling water, were then set to work, when it was found that with about 200 revolutions they were able to discharge 960 tons per hour through the condensers. The Friedmann's ejectors, of which the ship is provided with four, having 5-in. steam supply pipes and discharge pipes 8 in. in diameter, were afterwards tested, the result showing that they were capable of clearing the ship at the rate of 1,100 tons per hour.

NAVAL PROMOTIONS.

A correspondent writes to us as follows, on the subject of Naval promotions :—

"I have long studied what I once considered the apparent hazard of Admiralty promotions, and having at length arrived at some conclusion, I venture to offer the results of my labour to your readers. They are, I may state, mainly deduced from negative evidence; for so great is the natural modesty of our Naval rulers, that they delight in hiding their light under a bushel, and truly it may be said of them that in this they have succeeded. In former days, the government of this great service was relegated to a Lord High Admiral, who held office for a period of years, and at times selected his own personal friends for advancement. But in these more enlightened days, we are blessed with a plurality of Lord High Admirals. It speaks well for the wisdom of successive Governments that they should have curtailed their own and their Sovereign's patronage in a service 'on which the safety, honour, and welfare of the kingdom mainly depend,' and have handed it over to a body of upright, honourable, and well-nigh infallible men, who, recognising no friends and hating anything that can bear the semblance of a job, seek no reward but that of an easy conscience. There are two sorts of promotion,—firstly, by seniority; secondly, by special selection. The first method is used in all executive ranks, and the second only in the ranks of commander, lieutenant, and sub-lieutenant. The former is such a very simple process that it does not require the united genius of the Board; the latter requires far more delicate handling, and it is by study of their modus operandi that the perfection of our system becomes apparent. At each step taken by the doubting student in this most interesting investigation, the greater grows his admiration and wonder; but he must not be too inquisitive, lest he be lost in amazement. He must not endeavour to ascertain the reason for this or that promotion, for he cannot expect to solve unaided the riddle which has taken the united genius of a conclave of the best and wisest of men to propound. It is enough to know that the Admiralty never err. In 'special selection' there is a regular form of procedure strictly adhered to, the Lord who submits the candidate's name to the Board becoming his sponsor, and answering the various questions put by the Board. It is generally believed that there are only two questions ever asked, but this is pure hypothesis, assumed because there are only two questions which in most cases could be satisfactorily answered :—1st. Has he ever served with any member of the Board ? 2nd. Who is his father ? The former question is rightly put first, for who could fail to benefit by being brought into direct contact with one of these bright luminaries. The second question, the immortal bard considered a hard one, but nothing is difficult to a Naval Lord. It is by this vicarious catechism, that all political and other influences are excluded from the deliberation of these wise men, whose only aim is the welfare of the Navy and the fulfilment of the immutable law of Nature,—the survival of the fittest. Birth is no merit, and rank is but the 'guinea stamp,' and the accident of parentage might be a disadvantage to the scions of the aristocracy who adorn the various ranks of the Navy, were it not for the wisdom of the Admiralty. In these days, when the struggle for existence is becoming so hard, to make it fair for all, their Lordships have adopted a system of handicapping, which bids fair to keep the service both efficient and popular. It would be manifestly unfair to make the ordinary plebeian officer carry penalties, and this their Lordships wisely avoid by giving time to those of more noble birth, and though it would be impossible to arrive at the time which will be allowed to future aristocratic starters in the naval life, it is easy to compute the amount that past and present handicappers have allowed. Now, taking as a standard a plebeian officer of average ability who joins the service with the full intention of becoming a second Nelson, if zeal and devotion can help him, and who has neither good nor bad luck, I find by a study of the list that the following may be taken as the allowance their Lordships have up to the present seemed disposed to allow :—Lords, 12 years ; honourables, 8½ years. Manifest as are the disadvantages of being 'born great,' worse still are those that accrue to being born the son or nephew of a Lord of the Admiralty, for close as is their connection with a lord, they cannot always prefix honourable to their names ; while, from the accident of their birth, they can neither enjoy half-pay nor luxuriate in those lovely spots to be found in the Persian Gulf or Bight of Benin, which appointments are, by the unwritten law of the Admiralty, only open to officers of plebeian and unofficial stock. Nor has one of them ever been promoted by reason of his seniority from any rank. To them, too, belongs the danger of being always sent to the seat of war ; where danger is thickest, this small band of martyrs may be found, a noble monument to the self-sacrifice and patriotism of their Lordships. The case of these unfortunates has caused their Lordships deep thought from time to time, and in their wisdom they have been pleased to make them an allowance which, considering all the hardships of their position, can in no way be considered excessive :—For a son, 10 to 12 years ; for a nephew, 8 to 10 years. The fatherly instincts of a Lord of the Admiralty are proverbially strong, and when not blessed with either children or nephews, it generally happens that some old friend's son, or perchance a signal mate in a previous command, is 'navally' adopted. From that instant the victim to paternal instincts has to eat the bread of adversity, and to struggle along the hard road which alone leads to greatness in the Navy. It matters little what he does or how he does it after that, the mantle has descended upon him : let him fall, still it clings to him like the old man of the sea on the shoulders of Sindbad ; and however weary he may become, however unfit for the struggle he may feel, there is always something urging him onwards and spurring him upwards. Surely seven or eight years' time cannot be considered more than a balm for the suffering caused by having 'greatness thrust upon him.' It is by this straightforward policy, as much as by the sagacity, foresight, and gentleness of their rule, that their Lordships have earned, and continue to secure, the esteem and confidence of all classes who have the honour to serve them and the country at sea ; and happy the officer who joined the service in the newer and happier era, after all the nepotism and patronage of former days had been swept away."

THE FOUR-DEEP FORMATION.

Sir,—I saw from your columns lately that the system of Infantry attack from a four-deep formation, which was proposed by me some years ago, is in full operation in South Australia. Col. Downes, R.A., who commands there, has kindly sent me an account of the way in which they work it there, which I enclose. Amid the chorus of objections to the present system of attack, which one hears wherever military men are free to speak their minds in private, this news of the four-deep system being found to work well out of the reach of the longest red-tape in far Australia, leads one to ask whether it is not possible to have it tried here. We try guns and small-arms, and spend enormous sums in doing so, but any experiments in tactics—which cost nothing—it is very difficult to get accomplished. But, with the knowledge that it has been tried and found satisfactory by so practical a soldier as Col. Downes, I would plead for an opportunity of trying the four-deep system at home. Can any of your readers tell me how such things are done ?—I am, &c.,

J. H. A. Macdonald, Lieut.-Col. Commandant,
Queen's Edinburgh R.V. Brigade.

"Military Staff Office, Adelaide, Nov. 29, 1883.

"Dear Sir,—I read your pamphlet, recommending the four-deep formation as the best detail for all infantry tactics, soon after it came out, and was much interested by it; but being then in England and at artillery duties, it passed apparently out of my mind. On taking command of the Forces here, and having to train and organise them from the very beginning, my attention was naturally much directed to the mode of infantry attack as prescribed by the Regulations, and as my men progressed in discipline and drill, I became more and more convinced that the prescribed form in which one company supported another, &c., was simply a means of rendering confusion worse confounded. Although I had not your pamphlet by me, and have never seen it since, my thoughts reverted to it, and I at once endeavoured to work out a means of attack upon the principles advocated by you. How far I have kept to or departed from your principles, I cannot tell, but as far as my memory served me, they were the origin of my ideas. I commenced early in 1879 to try it tentatively with a portion of my force. It answered so well, was so simple, so easily taught, and so rapid in execution, when extending either from column or line, that I issued the order enclosed in 1880, and have since that worked entirely upon this system, with very satisfactory results to both officers and men, the former being all very warm in singing its praises. I think the enclosed memorandum explains everything, it is so simple. I will add one thing, though. If a column is ordered to extend for attack, the companies are at once, on the cautionary command, formed into 'fours deep,' and faced to the direction in which they have to move. As soon as this is done, the 'executive' word or signal is given, which puts the whole in motion, and the men are out with great rapidity, and free from all confusion. Should there be anything else you may wish to ask me, pray do not hesitate, for whatever there may be of merit in this four-deep form, I owe the idea to your pamphlet.—Believe me, yours faithfully,

"(Signed) M. F. Downes."

The following are excerpts from the Memorandum :—"The Four-Deep Form of Attack.—To simplify the 'attack formation,' to make the companies self-supporting, and to avoid the confusion caused by companies being mixed up under the command of one captain, the colonel commandant has sanctioned the following amended system of drill :—1. For a Company Acting Singly.—On the order to extend for attack, the captain will at once give the command, 'Fours-deep,—Number.' The front-rank men of fours will number from the right, so as to be heard by the three ranks in rear. . . . . . The front rank of the company thus formed four deep will compose the fighting line, and will receive the command, 'Advance (from the right, left, or centre) ; to four paces extend.' . . . . . The second rank will form the support, and will move at open files (two paces interval). . . . . . The two ranks in rear will act as a local reserve, in the same formation as the support. . . . . . The formation both of the support and of the reserve will depend, however, upon the ground. The officer in command will use his own judgment in the matter. As a rule, the captain will be in rear of the fighting line, and take a general supervision of it and of the support. The senior serjeant will command the support, and be ready to act at once on receiving a signal from the captain. The lieutenants will be with the reserve. At least two non-commissioned officers will move out with the fighting line to superintend the firing of their respective half companies or sections, and regulate the intervals. When the captain judges it desirable to reinforce, relieve, or prolong the fighting line, he will, by signal, call up the support, which will extend and join the fighting line, the men forming up on the left of their front-rank men, except in the case of prolongation. The third rank will at once advance, under the senior lieutenant, and form the new support. . . . . . Second Battalion.—If a battalion is in line, the four-deep formation for attack may be carried out precisely as above. On the command, 'Extend for attack!' the two centre companies will form four-deep, and extend outwards, i.e., from the right and left respectively. The remaining companies will be marched in fours at the double to the right or left to the required distance, and when halted will receive the command 'Left turn!' or 'Right turn!' so as at once to be formed four-deep ready for extension. If a battalion is in column, it will receive the command, 'To the right (or left) extend for attack!' or 'Extend for attack, —— companies to the right!' The captains will move their companies in fours direct to the flank until they have the necessary distance. Companies will then be turned to the right (or left) in fours, and extended in the manner described above. . . . . . Nos. three and four ranks will, when a battalion is extended for attack, remain under the command of the senior major, and, at his discretion, the commanding officer may leave two or more companies unextended under the command of a major as a main reserve. . . . . ."

SERJEANT-INSTRUCTORS.

Sir,—I am glad to see that there is a chance of the serjeant-instructors of musketry being restored to regiments. I never could see any good reason for abolishing so useful a rank, unless it was a part of the destructive policy of the Army reformers, who are condemned in their acts by having to retrace their steps. What inducement is there for a non-commissioned officer to qualify for an appointment which may be again abolished as quickly as it has been restored ? I send you an extract from a letter written by one well qualified to give an opinion on anything connected with the shooting of our Army :—"I am curious to see the effect of the abolition of musketry instructors. I anticipate the closing of all regimental rifle clubs, and a general levelling-down in shooting. As it requires now an expert to detect a good shooting regiment from a bad one, there is no inducement to a commanding officer to encourage shooting. The regiment with the rifles browner and less worn than others will be considered the 'smartest.' It will pay best to devote all one's energy to marching-past. Some of us (myself amongst the number) thought a year ago that musketry had been at last fairly grasped as an Army institution ; it was generally considered that the ordinary annual course was to shooting what setting-up drill was to minor tactics,—the beginning, the groundwork, not the end of shooting. The regimental rifle clubs that were established in every regiment (in India, at any rate) encouraged and developed good shooting at the annual prize meeting of regiments. We had all sorts of practical shooting, moving targets, disappearing targets, volleys at various ranges with the squad doubling 100 yards or more between volleys ; skirmishing in various forms ; but our great stumbling-block was the want of ammunition. We never lost a chance of agitating for more ammunition, in order to further develop rifle clubs, and increase the rapidly-growing interest in the more practical form of shooting. For some years past, the 'metier' of a musketry-instructor was not to interfere with the A B C of the company shooting, viz., the ordinary individual annual course, but it was to take up the shooting from the point where the Government left it ; and by specially training the bad shots and working up a good rifle club, the instructor did a deal of real good work in the Army. Now all this is changed. There are no rifle clubs ; good shooting is not rewarded, but bad shooting punished. A certain low standard will be fixed, say, 100 points, and all men making below 100 will have extra drill, &c. The result of this is plain :—T. Atkins, having made 101, has no further interest in the business ; it is easier to miss a target or a stop butt than to hit it, and men will just fire off wildly into space. I see already a rapid falling-off in shooting from all absence of encouragement. This is a long musketry letter, but I have little else to write about, and I know you take an interest in the subject, far in excess of what I meet with now-a-days." The above was written to me from India some time ago.—I am, &c.,

SCHOOLMASTERS AND WARRANT RANK.

Sir,—In last week's edition of your paper, you publish a sensibly-written letter advocating the claim of non-commissioned-officer schoolmasters to the Warrant rank, and, as it opens a question the issue of which concerns a large number of Army Schoolmasters, I would beg to venture a few remarks on the same subject. That the publication of the last Warrant inflicted an injustice on the body of Army Schoolmasters as a whole is a fact acknowledged not by themselves alone, but by the majority of other non-commissioned officers, who, as the Warrant referred to in no way affects them, may be trusted to give an unbiassed opinion on this subject. The Army schoolmaster of to-day fills at once an arduous and responsible position, and it seems but justice that he should enjoy advantages commensurate with the duty he performs. It is because his work is purely departmental, that some are apt to overlook the important part the schoolmaster plays in the interior economy of a regiment. As the promotion of junior non-commissioned officers is now dependent on the possession of the requisite school certificate, it rests mainly on the amount of zeal and ability exhibited by the schoolmaster in the formation of special classes for their instruction, whether a large proportion of these "non-coms.," eligible for promotion so far as capacity for their regimental duties is concerned, receive their promotion or not. Apart from this, however, it is doubtful policy to lower the position of the regimental schoolmaster. He is often responsible for the discipline of two or three hundred men while undergoing instruction, and anything tending to diminish his authority must unavoidably operate against the systematic working of his school. The same remark applies even with greater force to the children's school, as the instruction given to juveniles ought always to be augmented by respect for the teacher. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the authorities will see their way to confer the Warrant rank on all Army Schoolmasters, if only from motives of educational economy.—I am, &c., A.

The Army.

1st King's Dragoon Guards. Capt. Nicholas was thrown from his horse near Canterbury Barracks, on Saturday last, and sustained severe injuries which resulted in his death on Wednesday. The deceased was formerly in the 3rd Dragoon Guards as a subaltern, and having sold his commission re-entered the service as a private, and worked his way up to a commission as rdgmr. on April 13, 1872. He became lieut. Feb. 12, 1874, capt. Oct. 15, 1881, and served as adjt. of the King's Dragoon Guards in the Zulu war of 1879 (medal and clasp).

11th Hussars. Lieut.-Col. Stewart, C.M.G., has left England for Khartoum as Military Secretary to Major-Gen. Gordon, C.B.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Col. Marshall Clarke, C.M.G., who has been appointed Commissioner and British Resident for Basutoland, will start for South Africa next week.

N Baty. A Brig., R.H.A., is to broken up, and the non-commissioned officers and men to be drafted to other batteries, to make up their strength.

Lieut. J. Lewes, Depôt Baty. 1st Brig., Western Division, has been appointed adjt. of the 1st District Garrison Artillery, at Devonport, vice Phillips, about to be promoted.

8th, the King's (Liverpool Regiment). "Kingsman" writes:—"It would appear that all former pleadings as to our new and singularly inappropriate title which was granted to us in 1881 are unavailing, and we may now well assume that the old English saying of 'fair-play's a jewel' is a thing of the past. I would yet again wish to bring to your notice that we, the old 1st Batn. 8th the King's Regt., being raised in the year 1685, to protect the Crown against Monmouth's rebellion, were then granted a royal title by the King of England, and a royal title only; we have been proud to bear under various skies and campaigns from that distant date till 1881, when would-be reformers step in, and, without a word to us, force down our throats that we are to be henceforward 'The Liverpool' Regt., vice 'The King's.' Considering that we gloried in bearing a royal title only from 1685 till 1881, it is grossly unjust and cruelly unfair that we, the old original battalion, should now in all official correspondence be designated simply and solely '1st Liverpool,' an order that can only have been brought about by those who apparently love to destroy all time-honoured association and esprit de corps. Why 'Liverpool,' I should much like to know? Neither the town bearing that lovely epithet, nor the county of Lancashire is in any manner or way connected with the regimental history. We are one of the oldest regiments of the Line; in fact, the oldest, bar seven, out of 141 battalions, so that surely, under the recognised principle of seniores priores, if radical changes must be wrought in many corps, we in fairness should be one of the last to suffer. Except to the sages that arrange these matters, it is hard to see justice done in placing our depôt at Warrington, a singularly dirty manufacturing town in Lancashire, whence diminutive recruits are caught, for the most part of a low-Irish type. The historical records of the regiment hand down to us how that in 1685 one (the first) company was raised in Hertfordshire, eight in Derbyshire, and one in Middlesex, the rendezvous of the regiment being at Derby. This has little to do with Liverpool or Warrington, but clearly points to Derbyshire as our right for the depôt, as also in procuring us an additional name, if we may not (as all desire) continue to be known as 'The King's' alone."

16th Bedfordshire Regiment. Capt. Lloyd is ordered home from India to join the 1st Batn., on promotion. A correspondent writes:—"Rumour has it that the 1st Batn. will ere long leave Shorncliffe, where they have been vegetating for the past two years, for Colchester. During the time they have been here, I have never seen a single man of the regiment misconducting himself."

25th King's Own Borderers. Lieut. Cox, a probationer, wing-officer 21st Madras N.I., is about to be admitted to the Madras S.C., from Aug. 25, 1882.

35th Royal Sussex Regiment. Lieut.-Col. Grattan and Major Sutherland arrived home from Egypt on Saturday last in the hired transport Poona.

38th South Staffordshire Regiment. New Year's Eve at Malta was celebrated by a most pleasant and successful dance given by the officers in their mess-house at Bavière, for which about 250 invitations were issued. Dancing commenced at 9.30 p.m., and was kept up with great spirit until about 4 a.m. At 12, midnight, the band of the regiment played and sang "Auld Lang Syne," and the guests adjourned to supper. The mess and corridors were most tastefully decorated with flags, flowers, and will-o'-the-wisp lamps.

45th Derbyshire Regiment (Sherwood Foresters). Major Cobbold has joined the depôt at Derby for two years.

ROYAL MARINES.

Capt. C. B. G. Dick, of the Plymouth Division, Royal Marines, has been ordered to hold himself in readiness to proceed to Bermuda, to relieve Major F. M. Shairp, whose period of command of the Royal Marine Detachment on the island expires on April 6 next.

Capt. A. C. Smyth, R.M.L.I., has been ordered to embark in H.M.S. Shannon, vice Major R. A. D. Ramsay, appointed Musketry Instructor of the Portsmouth Division, Royal Marines.

Major R. A. D. Ramsay, R.M.L.I., has been appointed Musketry Instructor of the Portsmouth Division, Royal Marines, vice Major Miller, who succeeds to the higher rate of pay, consequent on the promotion of Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. Hore, to the Lieut.-Col.'s List.

We are given to understand that Lieut.-Col. Allnutt, R.M.L.I., is about to retire.

60th King's Royal Rifle Corps. Lieut. Marling, 3rd Batn., has been appointed to the Mounted Infantry in Egypt, in succession to Lieut. Riddell, whose services have been placed at the disposal of the Khedive's Government for employment with the Egyptian Army.

68th Durham Light Infantry. Lieut. Wells having passed the higher-standard in Hindostanee, has been appointed interpreter, vice Capt. Fulton.

84th York and Lancaster Regiment. Extract from Brigade Orders by H.E. Lieut.-Gen. T. L. Gallwey, R.E., commanding Troops:—"Hamilton, Bermuda, Dec. 22, 1883.—8. Inspection of 2nd Batn. York and Lancaster Regt. His Excellency the Lieut.-Gen. Commanding has much pleasure in publishing the following extract from observations by H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief on the report of the inspection of the battalion by Major-Gen. Willis, C.B., on July 5 last:—'The account given of the 2nd Batn. York and Lancaster Regt. is very satisfactory, and his Royal Highness has been pleased to direct that his commendation be conveyed to this excellent regiment, which is as gallant in the field as smart on parade.'—By order (signed), J. G. Ponsonby, Brigade-Major."

86th Royal Irish Rifles. The death has been reported of Lieut.-Col. C. F. Heatley, for many years connected with the regiment as a subaltern and pymr.

93rd Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. Lieut. Col. Macdonald, of St. Martin's, writes:—"My attention has only just been drawn to a letter in your paper last November, where I am said to have brought certain charges against Capt. Croker, of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. I said that I considered that he behaved as a perfect gentleman in an interview which I had with him in the office of the Chief Secretary to the Government of Cyprus, in April, 1882. To that charge I plead guilty. I know nothing whatever with regard to some charges from which, I read in the Cyprus papers, he was honourably acquitted."

98th North Staffordshire Regiment. Major Tyacke has been granted leave from India to England for 12 months, on medical certificate.

105th King's Light Infantry. The Queen has approved of Capt. Barter being appointed an Instructor of Military Topography at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, from the 1st inst.

Pay Department. The Times says:—"The Army Pay Department, which was instituted by Col. Stanley in 1877, does not appear to have yet attained the desired degree of success. For a time many combatant officers joined it, but it was apparent that their reason was the fear of being compulsorily retired as captains at the age of 40, rather than any inclination for the duties or position of paymaster. The increase of the number of regimental majors has tended to diminish largely that apprehension, and the candidates for the Pay Department are so few, that at the present moment there are no less than about 40 regimental districts and regiments without their proper financial officers. Some little time back the appointment, which had been previously reserved for captains only, was made available for lieutenants of 10 years' service, but as yet only two or three of this grade have come forward to fill vacancies. The conditions of service are stated to be insufficiently attractive, and the paymasters have made certain representations upon the subject which are understood to be now under consideration at the War Office. They ask that they should have a representative from their own body at the War Office to regulate the roster of service, as is the case with every other department of the Army; that chief paymasters should have the honorary rank of colonel from the date of their appointment, instead of, as now, after five years' tenure thereof. They also ask that the number of chief paymasters should be increased, so as to have one for each military district. This would make an addition of six to the present establishment (15) of chief paymasters, and would give a help to promotion. Staff paymasters should, it is urged, have the rank of lieutenant-colonel after five years' service in that grade, those entering as captain that of major after five years', and those entering as lieutenants after seven years', service in the department. These readjustments would do no more than serve to equalise their rank with that of regimental officers of about the same age and seniority. Their main request, however, is to be placed on the same footing as regards rank, pay, and retirement as the Commissariat and Ordnance Store Departments, between which and their own they institute comparisons considerably unfavourable to themselves. The fact that so large a number of vacancies remain unfilled would seem to show that some steps must be taken to add to the attractions of the department."

The Auxiliary Forces.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

2nd West Yorkshire. The first of a series of troop competitions with the Marris tube took place last week at the head-quarters of each troop in this regiment. From September to April, there will be, in future, one each month, the men firing 15 rounds on each occasion, and the highest aggregate scores at the conclusion of the series will receive prizes, presented by Major Edwards. This monthly muster is in addition to the fortnightly meetings of the troop shooting clubs, which are held every alternate week in the year at the rifle-range, and which have been well attended, notwithstanding the distance which most of the men have to come. These clubs have greatly improved the shooting of the regiment, and it is to be regretted that the men cannot be supplied with a more serviceable weapon. At present the regiment is armed with the Snider carbine, an excellent weapon, when in good condition, up to a certain distance, but many of the carbines have almost lost their rifling, which is, to say the least of it, a drawback to accurate practice. Mr. Christie, of Jernaulx Abbey, Bedale, has been gazetted to the regiment, and will be posted to D Troop.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

18th Middlesex (Paddington) Rifles. The prizes were distributed on Friday evening last, at St. James's Hall, by Mrs. Gordon Ives, wife of the commanding officer, Col. Gordon Ives. The colonel stated that the regiment was now the strongest in the county with one exception, the 3rd London, but he was glad to know that it was one of the only two regiments in the county fully equipped and ready to take the field, the other corps in that condition being the Post Office Rifles. The regimental challenge cup was won by Pte. E. Smith, the Kindersley cup by Bandmaster Heath, the Shakespeare cup by Serjt. Jefferson, the first of the commanding officer's challenge prizes by Pte. J. Spurgin; the principal prizes in the field officers' series by Bandmaster Heath, Pte. Downes, Pte. Pound, and Serjt. Gomme; Col. Barrows's prize by Pte. C. Perkins, the medical officers' by Pte. J. Banks, the Baylis-Barron challenge cup by Bandmaster Heath, the Adjutant's cup by Pte. J. Banks, and the Welford prize by Pte. H. Downes. There was also a very long series of company prizes. The regimental ball was afterwards held.

We find from the annual returns of the Voluntee Force that out of a total of 207,336 of all ranks, only 303 are under 17 years of age. Between 17 and 18, the numbers are about 7,000; between 18 and 19, 16,000; between 19 and 20, nearly 19,000; and between 20 and 21, 19,196, this being the highest total recorded. With regard to length of service, those of one year and up to four years number no less than 128,685; from four to five years' service, the total is 15,093; from five to six years, 11,574; from six to seven years, 8,844; from seven to eight years, 7,303; from eight to nine years, 6,072; from nine to ten years, 4,948; from 10 to 15 years, 12,704; from 15 to 20 years, 6,735; and upwards of 20 years, 5,168.

"R.N.A.V." writes:—"'An Old Volunteer,' writing in your issue of the 19th inst., is evidently not aware that there is at the present moment a Corps of Volunteer Marine Artillery. Though called under another name, viz., 'The Royal Naval Artillery Volunteers,' there are batteries in most of our principal seaports where the Volunteers are instructed in gun-drill, boat-drill, fort-drill, &c.; each battery goes to sea for about eight days every year. I left the R.N.A.V. in 1875, on joining the Army, but still feel a keen interest in my old corps, and feel rather surprised at 'An Old Volunteer' not knowing that there was such a corps as the Royal Naval Artillery Volunteers. H.M.S. Rainbow, off Somerset House, is where the London brigades are drilled."

With reference to the subject of a recent meeting of officers commanding Metropolitan Volunteer Corps, for the purpose of discussing certain matters connected with the organisation and equipment of the Volunteer Force, a communication, signed by Lord Wolseley, Adjutant-General of the Forces, has been received by the officers concerned, in which it is pointed out that "the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief is of the opinion that meetings like that in question are irregular and inconsistent with military discipline, and also with the provisions of paragraph 4 of the Regulations of the Volunteer Force, which places the Volunteers in each district under the command of the General Officer commanding the troops." The Adjutant-General further observes that, "Although in the year 1861 Lord Herbert of Lea, then Secretary of State for War, gave his sanction to the commanding officers of corps in London and Middlesex meeting occasionally under like circumstances to the present, the constitution of the Volunteer Force was very different then to what it is now, and the Secretary of State considers that the changes since come into effect obviously cancel the sanction referred to." Lieut.-Gen. Higginson, C.B., has been requested to cause this decision to be made known to the officers commanding corps belonging to the district in his command.

London Amusements.

The Royal English Opera Company at COVENT GARDEN, has, according to promise, introduced to London the four-act opera of "Victorian; or the Spanish Student," brought out a few months since in the provinces, when the composer, Mr. Julian Edwards, filled the position of conductor. The story used by Weber for his opera of "Preciosa," and afterwards modified to suit the requirements of Balfe for his "Bohemian Girl," is well suited for musical treatment, but its latest form of interpretation only enables the auditor to perceive that the young composer has not yet acquired the power of satisfactorily competing with his predecessors. Sir Julius Benedict's "Lily of Killarney" and Balfe's "Satanella" have been included in the arrangements for the week.

At the GLOBE THEATRE, "Our Regiment," originally brought out at the Vaudeville a year since on the occasion of a morning performance, and since successfully represented in the country, has been transferred to these boards to meet a sudden emergency. The farcical three-act comedy, by Mr. H. Hamilton, on a German play, signifying by its title, "Peace and War," and very popular in the United States though an American version, has but the faintest claim to represent a sketch of military life in country quarters, but the few incidents introduced are amusing, and the piece has been once more well received by a metropolitan audience. Mr. Gerald Moore and Miss Fanny Brough resume their original positions as Guy Warrener, the young officer, and Enid Thurston, the wealthy ward, and an excellent cast is provided in other respects. Miss Carlotta Leclercq as the buxom matron doating on the military, Mr. Edward J. Henley as the old husband rendered uncomfortable by the very sight of a soldier's uniform, and Miss Florence Trevelyan, Miss Abington, Mr. J. F. Young, Mr. H. J. Lethcourt, and Mr. E. W. Gardener, as representatives of the rest of the personages presented in the piece, afford abundant diversion.

This (Saturday) evening, Miss Mary Anderson appears at the LYCEUM as the heroine of Mr. W. S. Gilbert's dramatic sketch, entitled, "Comedy and Tragedy." This one-act drama is founded on the interesting story which the author contributed four years since to Mr. Clement Scott's theatrical annual, called The Stage-Door. It will be given as an afterpiece, and, with "Pygmalion and Galatea," will be repeated through the remainder of Miss Anderson's engagement.

The new opera comique in three acts, composed by R. Planquette, written by Mr. H. B. Farnie, and entitled "Nell Gwynne," will be produced at the AVENUE THEATRE on Monday, Feb. 11. Miss Florence St. John represents the heroine.

The new Prussian Army List, the publication of which has been rather delayed this year, has just made its appearance. It comprises 966 pages, or one more than last year. As an innovation, it may be mentioned that this time the Military Cabinet is given as an independent department, whilst formerly it was a section of the War Office. This arises from the fact that the head of the Military Cabinet, Gen. von Albedyll, is the senior, as lieutenant-general, of the present War Minister, Gen. Bronsart von Schallendorff. The following Royal personages appear as chiefs of regiments for the first time in the List:—The Prince of Wales, Blücher Hussars; the King of Spain, 15th Uhlans; the Grand Duke Franz II. of Mecklenburg, Infantry Regiment No. 24; Prince Alexander of Hesse, Dragoons No. 13; Comte de Flandres, Dragoons No. 16. The Prince of Wales is styled "first" chief, a practice very seldom followed. Numerous changes have taken place during the past year in the higher posts of command. There have been newly appointed 12 lieutenant-generals, of whom 11 are commanders of divisions; 39 major-generals, 28 colonels of infantry, 20 of cavalry, 5 of field artillery, 3 of foot artillery, and 2 of engineers. As regards the share of the various arms in the higher and highest posts of command, the proportion is more favourable for the cavalry than the infantry, as amongst the 14 generals commanding army corps seven belong to the cavalry and as many to the infantry. Of divisional commanders, 18 proceeded from the infantry and 12 from the cavalry, whilst the corresponding proportion in accordance with the number of existing commanders of brigades would be two to one.

The Assam Railways and Trading Company (Limited), with a capital of £350,000, is issuing £250,000 six per cent. debentures of £100 each (interest payable Jan. 1 and July 1 in each year), of which £19,400 are reserved for conversion by the holders of a like amount of debentures already issued. The debentures are secured by a mortgage, and are a first charge on the railways with their rolling-stock and plant (including the subsidy of the Secretary of State for India in Council), the flotilla of river steamers, &c., the collieries and other valuable concessions of the Company, but subject to any unconverted portion of the £19,400 debentures already issued, which are secured by mortgage on the railways and subsidy only. The Company was formed in 1881 for the purpose of carrying out certain concessions for the construction, under a subsidy from the Secretary of State for India in Council, of railways in Assam, about 79 miles in length, traversing the numerous tea plantations, and connecting the River Brahmapootra with Talup and the rich coal district of Makum, and for other purposes, amongst which is the establishment of a service of steamers and lighters upon the River Brahmapootra.

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 26, 1884.

THERE is no subject of more vital importance to the country, nor of greater interest to Naval men, than the actual state and condition of the Navy. It is on the ability of our Fleet to keep the sea against all opponents, and to protect our ocean highways, that the food supply of the nation will depend in time of war. It is on the structural strength, armament, speed, seaworthiness, and general efficiency of our ships that the personnel of the Navy have to depend for the means of coming victorious out of the struggle. Hence, even to insinuate that the state and condition of our ships is not what it should be, is to lessen the confidence of the public, and of those serving in the Navy, in the Admiralty and in the Government. Such doubts have been freely expressed of late. Both in these columns, and in the columns of the Daily Press, letters and articles innumerable have appeared on the subject. The letters, written for the most part by men in whose judgment the country and the Navy repose the greatest confidence, have, one and all, warned the Admiralty and the Government that, in comparison with the Navy of France, that of England is far too weak to be able to adequately discharge the duty committed to its charge of safeguarding the interests of the Empire. The articles which have been published by our contemporaries on this subject have, for the most part, agreed with the views enunciated by the writers of the letters already referred to. The Times alone has partly sided with our rulers, while at the same time demanding that the strength of the Navy shall at all times be such as to ensure the safety of the kingdom. This the Times considers to be the case, or nearly so, at present. At the same time, our contemporary would not have the Admiralty enter upon a sensational policy, even to keep pace with the energetic building operations going on in dockyards across the "Herring Pond." These are looked upon as not likely to last, and the argument of the Free-trader, that all nations will follow the example of England, is again insisted upon in the matter of the policy of building armour-clads, and maintaining the supremacy of the seas by means of the superiority of our Fleet. The fallacy of this argument has been most ably demonstrated by Sir Edward Sullivan in the columns of the Morning Post, and we have also pointed out that, at the present moment, France possesses ten armoured vessels more than England, and that the Admiralty have thirteen ships and several hundred seamen less in commission at this moment than were in commission in 1879. Sir Thomas Brassey has also proved most clearly in his work on the Navy that, in speed, gun-power, and, perhaps, in structural strength, the French ships surpass ours. The publication of these facts, following so closely on the inspired article which recently appeared in the Times, written, apparently, with the view of allaying the fears of the public, of gaining time for the Admiralty, and of restoring confidence in the Government, has sadly exercised the minds of all the officials responsible for the well-being of the Navy. The question then arose as to what steps should be taken to controvert the facts above mentioned, and, as usual in such cases, a Return was called for. It has now been duly published, and there can be no doubt as to with what object. This official Return commences by stating that, during the past year, fourteen vessels of different tonnages have been launched for the Navy; that during the same term a dozen vessels have been ordered to be constructed, and that there are seven vessels on the stocks which were under construction prior to the commencement of 1883. The Return then gives a long list of vessels now being fitted for service, and a résumé of this "officially prepared" document is sent to the Times, apparently in the hope that its publication will lead the great mass of Englishmen, who know nothing about Naval matters, to believe that with such a long list of ships built, building, and fitting out, there can be no danger to the country from the Naval armaments of foreign Powers. We cannot too often remind our readers that all the ships included in this official statement have been allowed for in the comparisons made in these columns of the relative Naval strength of this and other Powers. Indeed, so far from mending matters, the Return clearly proves that we are not keeping pace with France in the matter of building ships-of-war, and the ugly fact still stares us in the face that at this moment France can send to sea ten powerful armour-clads more than we can. These figures are taken from a Table of Foreign Fleets, compiled by Captain G. R. Noel, R.N., and published by Captain F. G. D. Bedford, R.N., in his "Sailor's Handbook," proving that France owns seventy-seven modern armoured ships exceeding 1,000 tons displacement, while England can only boast of sixty-seven. Such are the plain facts, which no returns can contradict. Were all the armour-clads of England being prepared for sea, they would still remain the same; and should war ever break out between the two countries under such circumstances there can be no doubt but that the condition of the great mass of the people inhabiting the British Isles would be most deplorable.

Her Majesty has been pleased to approve the appointment of Colonel J. H. Buchanan, C.B., as Deputy-Quartermaster-General in Ireland, vice Colonel H. J. Maclean, about to be placed on the Retired List. Colonel Buchanan is exceptionally fortunate in stepping from one Staff appointment to another. It was only last week that he vacated the appointment, after five years' tenure, of Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General at Dover.

A correspondent at Suakim gives an account of an occurrence there lately. He says:—"The order of the day announcing General Baker's supreme authority was read out. An Egyptian officer refused to recognise it. He demanded to see the Khedivial decree on the subject. He put his finger to his nose and thrust out his tongue, by way of imparting point to his logic." Baker Pasha would seem to have his work cut out for him, if he wishes to maintain discipline in the Egyptian Army.

The article on the "National Defences" which appeared in the Times of Thursday is very much to the point. There is no doubt that in this respect, as the writer shows, we are lamentably behind the age. We simply have no system of defence, i.e., no properly organised system. All manner of schemes have been drawn up, and reports submitted on the subject, but no practical results have been obtained. Successive Governments have been only too ready to shirk a question which would have been expensive, and consequently damaging in a political sense. The Times has done well in opening up the matter, for it is one that could be discussed with advantage.

The Cavalry changes carried out last month, in view of the return home of the 19th Hussars, were arranged a little prematurely, for the 19th Hussars seem likely to remain an indefinite period in Egypt.

A regiment which has two recruits for every drilled soldier, and is split up into seven detachments, must indeed be an efficient unit. If the regiment, when brought together at Aldershot or elsewhere, is found by the Inspecting General to be not altogether what it should be, we wonder will the commanding officer be pronounced a "drone and a dullard," and become a "marked man" at Head-quarters.

The Government of India has lately recommended that appointments to the Indian Staff Corps should be made in future direct from Sandhurst; but the home authorities have not been able to see their way clear to carry out the idea, at present.

A Cavalry Pioneer Class will be formed in February at the School of Military Engineering, Chatham.

A "Commanding Officer" writes:—"I have just had a batch of recruits from the depôt. I have had 30 years' experience of the Army, but I confess that I am surprised how half these boys were ever accepted. They are the veriest weeds, and all the exertions of the War-Office reformers would prove of no avail in making soldiers of half of them. The other half will, no doubt, be good for something some day, in two or three years' time."

The annual practice from the Spithead forts is nearly concluded. The firing of the 38-ton guns has been successful.

A propos of the recent inspection by her Majesty of the new service dress for infantry, it may be observed that many inventions have been shown to the Queen which have not been adopted. On February 28, 1882, eight men from the 52nd and 53rd Regiments, four wearing the Oliver equipment and four the valise proposed by Sir T. Steele's Committee, proceeded to Windsor, for inspection by her Majesty; but the old valise is still worn by our Army.

The late Lieutenant-Colonel Manningham-Buller, Coldstream Guards, had sent in his papers to retire. Owing, however, to the rule that, unless an officer survives his application to retire by six weeks, the amount of money to which he was entitled shall be forfeited by the State, the deceased officer's relatives are deprived of a sum of about £8,500, which, if Colonel Buller had lived a few weeks longer, would have been paid over as a matter of course.

We believe that her Majesty takes a great interest in the agitation which is now going on with the view of inducing the War Office to reconsider its decision with regard to the Highland bonnet. Lord Archibald Campbell, ever devoted to the cause of Scotland, has been working with his well-known energy and perseverance to secure the retention of a national head-dress for the kilted regiments, and he has been ably supported in his endeavour by Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon Alexander, late of the 93rd Highlanders. Among those who have signed the petition which has been drawn up for presentation to the Secretary of State for War, might be mentioned the name of the Duke of Sutherland, many Scotch representative peers, and numerous Scottish societies. As we pointed out some weeks ago, the abolition of the feather bonnet will have a most injurious effect upon recruiting in the districts north of the Tweed, and it is difficult to understand on what grounds the innovation has been suggested, unless it be a determination to alter everything that is characteristic or time-honoured.

The meeting of Volunteer Commanding Officers last night was agitated. The War Office demand that the meeting should sit under the presidency of a General Officer was not received with universal favour.

In Tuesday's Gazette appeared the promotion to Colonel (by Brevet) of two more Staff Officers of Pensioners, again showing how misleading was the reply of the Secretary of State for War to a question asked of him regarding the treatment that had been meted out to the Majors and Captains of this branch of the service, who have, since the issue of the Royal Warrant of 1881, been denied their just rights of promotion, and are now cut off from all further advancement. The granting of a step of promotion, on retirement, is what all officers are entitled to; "and, therefore, such an excuse as that given was merely trifling with the common-sense of those who understood the nature of it. Had the Accountant-General's Department bid the Secretary of State say that the giving these Majors and Captains what they were fairly entitled to would entail some amount of extra retirement, and that was the reason of their being denied further promotion—although many of them have more length of service than the Lieutenant-Colonels—it would have been the truth. Now, considering that there are only seven or eight officers who are seeking justice, we consider that the denying of promotion to them is in principle paltry, and to themselves cruel and degrading, and it is only asking a very small matter that Staff Officers of Pensioners having a continuous service of 30 years' should receive an extra step of Brevet rank from that which they hold, seeing that Brevet rank by succession was their only means of advancement, and that now this ladder is cut away, no other one has been substituted. If no concession is ultimately given or inquiry granted other than by the civilians at the War Office, who have treated this branch of the service so unmercifully ever since it has entirely fallen into their hands, we are constrained to read between the lines, and our reading is this,—that this unjust treatment is intended to be carried out for the purpose of forcing these officers to retire, and so the sooner to do away with these appointments, which are now so rapidly falling in. During the framing of this Royal Warrant—which has so cruelly hit Staff Officers of Pensioners—not one of these officers was consulted, and hence what fell to their lot entirely emanated from the Accountant-General's Department. The Warrant increased their retirements by £8 a year," and deprived them at the same time of five years' service. As the maximum named for Majors—£350 a year—is on account of the combination of age and length of service, we hear only obtainable by one of the number, this being known in 1881, "Accountants" were well able to take advantage of the circumstance.

The English gentlemen who have shot with Count Cahen d'Anvers would be rather amused if they read the remarks in the Globe of Thursday, in which there was some mild chaff anent a recent shooting party in the Count's coverts. Our contemporary, ignorant of the fact that Count Cahen of Anvers has been entertaining large parties since the opening of the "chasse" last year, takes the word of "a boulevard paper," whatever that may be, as his text, and says that it was to a "mop-up" of the outlying ground of the 13,000 acres of wood and covert which he shoots over that the account referred. Lord Dupplin and others who have shot with the Count Cahen of Anvers could give very different reports of some days at the opening of the shooting.

The suggestion thrown out by the Duke of Cambridge that the Volunteers should abandon the Brighton project, and instead of having one big review, arrange for three smaller ones at Aldershot, Dover, and Portsmouth, is, like many other of the official ideas propounded of late years, admirable in theory, and will some day, no doubt, be carried out. But in the present state of the Volunteer Army—fostered as the martial enthusiasm of the Force is, to a great extent, by the munificence and patriotism of a few moving spirits among the Commanding Officers—the Volunteers have not attained that degree of perfection which will allow of any new departure in the matter of the annual outing. That Brighton reviews will become a thing of the past, we have no doubt. But we must not expect so sweeping a change to come all at once. What the Volunteers want is more encouragement, not of this but of a really substantial nature—more money, in fact—and when they get this, they will be more ready to listen to reason.

The proposal of Captain Warner Brooks for the creation of a Volunteer Reserve Force is one that the War Office would do well to encourage. Captain Brooks's idea is to attach to each Volunteer battalion a company of reserve men,—men who have retired from "active" service, after having been returned for four years as efficients. They would be required to go through five days' drill annually, at such time as might be found most convenient to the majority, and those who complied with these conditions would draw a capitation allowance of 5s. Captain Brooks' object is to retain the services of those who, from business or other causes, quit the service on the completion of their first term. There is undoubtedly merit in the scheme. Many of the proposals which have been made from time to time with the object of improving the Citizen Army have been open to serious objection; but credit is certainly due to Captain Brooks for having drawn up a project which is not only original, but ought to be feasible also.

The letter of Sir Lintorn Simmons in the Morning Post must have made "the old General"—we hope it is not Sir P. McDougall?—feel very uncomfortable. But what is more important, it must have caused uneasiness among those who are or were satisfied that all is for and of the best, in the best possible of armies. But the Jerome Paturots of Pall Mall will go on sounding their trumpets and singing pæans, for all that. We must wait till Parliament meets, for the M.P. who has written to our contemporary in Wellington Street, and others, to get at the truth, and lay it bare before the eyes of the country. As one correspondent remarks, an army without a reserve, bad as it is, must be better than a reserve without an army; and the figures quoted by Sir L. Simmons to show what was the condition of the battalions of the first line at the end of the year are sufficient to excite great uneasiness, to say the least of it, as to the fitness for service in the field of the regiments which would have to go to the front. We shall be glad, indeed, to have it clearly shown that there is no ground for that uneasiness, and that our Army is as efficient as a British Army should be to maintain the interests of the Empire and the reputation of our arms.

The latest bulletin as to the state of General the Marquis of Hertford is as follows:—"Friday, 8 a.m. —Lord Hertford's condition remains unchanged. His lordship slept at intervals during the night."

The Rambler was at Monte Video on Dec. 26; she has since left for England. The Algerine and Wrangler were at Monte Video, and remain.

Carysfort, Capt. Walter Stewart, has been ordered from Malta to Suez, to convey Major-General Gordon (Chinese) to Suakim.

Euphrates, Capt. Cardale, left Bombay on Jan. 22, and is expected at Portsmouth on Feb. 18.

Goshawk, Lieut. and Com. W. J. Moore, arrived at St. Vincent, Cape de Verdes, on Jan. 19, when the Comus and Flirt were to leave.

Nelson, Comdre. James E. Erskine, was at Adelaide on Dec. 16, and was about to leave for Hobart, calling at Port Phillip Heads (her arrival at Hobart on Dec. 31 has since been reported). The Diamond was at Sydney on Dec. 13; arrived from New Guinea, and remains. The Espiègle arrived at Auckland on Dec. 12, and remains. The Miranda left Levuka, Fiji, on Nov. 9 for Samoa, on High Commission service, and will return to Sydney, viâ Fiji and the New Hebrides. The Dart was at Sydney on Dec. 13, and ordered to join the Commodore at Hobart. The Lark was at Auckland on Dec. 12, refitting. The Raven was at Sydney on Dec. 13, and ordered to join the Commodore at Hobart.

Northampton, Capt. Digby, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir John Commerell, V.C., was at Bermuda on Dec. 31. The Dido was at Jamaica on Dec. 10; ordered to be at St. Kitt's on Jan. 6, as senior officer on Barbadoes Division. The Griffon was on passage to Barbadoes Division; to be at St. Kitt's on Jan. 6. Temeraire, Capt. Nicholson, C.B., has been ordered from Corfu to Malta, to pay off.

Tourmaline, Capt. R. H. Boyle, arrived on Dec. 15 at Tamatave, and left Dec. 20, arriving at Mauritius on Dec. 24; was still there on Dec. 29.

The Italian Government have recently completed a lengthened series of machine-gun trials near Turin. The committee, according to the Hampshire Telegraph, did not consider the shoulder aiming piece of the Hotchkiss revolving cannon, of five barrels and 37 millimètres calibre, at all satisfactory, and they have also reported that the rate of fire of this gun is only equal to that of the ordinary Italian field artillery. The Committee have reported most favourably on the Nordenfeldt mitrailleuse firing rifle ammunition.

It is the intention of the Admiralty to build a new torpedo ship. The Hecla, the only vessel of the kind at present in the service, was not originally constructed for the purpose to which she is applied, but was purchased from an Irish firm and converted. The new Hecla will be considerably larger, and will be especially designed to carry first-class torpedo boats, of which type the Admiralty intend to add a number to thé Navy. They will resemble the class with which the services of Russia, Brazil, and other Powers have been provided. The existing Hecla is only fitted to carry torpedo craft of the second-class.

The arrangements for working the boilers of the Rapid with forced draught being complete, it is proposed to make a trial at moorings, and, if satisfactory, a four hours' trial at sea, using the forced draught. The defects of the Himalaya have been taken in hand, but nothing is to be undertaken which is not absolutely necessary for a month's voyage, the ship being required to be kept ready for immediate service. A trial of Prideaux's furnace doors and fire bars is being made in the Conquest for comparison with a trial made last week with the common furnace doors and a special design of fire bars, ¾-in. wide. The newly-fitted superstructure of the Hecate having proved very satisfactory, the ship will accompany the Reserve Squadron to sea next summer if ordered. The boilers of the Thalia are undergoing repair and alteration which will occupy the remainder of the financial year. Messrs. Hawthorn, of Newcastle, are placing the new machinery on board the Reindeer in the basin at Keyham. The Etna, new paddle-wheel vessel, for use at Devonport, which has been built and engined by Laird Brothers, of Birkenhead, is being steamed from thence to Devonport.

Epps's Cocoa.—Grateful and Comforting.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in packets, labelled—"James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence.

THE CHANNEL SQUADRON.

Gibraltar, Tuesday, January 15.

This morning, at daylight, the Sultan and Neptune left the Mole, and anchored off. The outside ships have unmoored, and we start this afternoon for Palma, Majorca, where we are to arrive on Saturday next, the 19th. Yesterday we struck lower yards and topmasts, and sent them up again for our forenoon drill. In the afternoon, the Poonah, hired transport, came in from Egypt and Malta. Being in quarantine, she did not come alongside the Mole; she embarked drafts for England, and left at 5 o'clock. They consisted principally of men of the 2nd Batn. North Lancashire Regt. (47th), which is going to India, who are unfit for Indian service. The Serapis arrived last evening, and went alongside the Mole this morning, as soon as the Sultan and Neptune had moved out; she has brought the 2nd Batn. Royal Dublin Fusiliers (103rd) for this place, and takes the North Lancashire on to India. Last night the chief and first-class petty officers of the Squadron gave a "quadrille party" at the Armoury. The Duke of Edinburgh, the Governor, and Lady Adye, and a number of ladies and Naval and Military officers took part in the opening quadrille. It was altogether very successful, and dancing was kept up with great spirit till an early hour. The Calpe hunt is in full swing at this time of the year. They hold meets every Tuesday and Friday. During our stay a number of officers of the Squadron have been out, and had some very enjoyable days.

THE NAVY.

An Admiralty Return just issued shows that during the past 12 months 14 vessels of different tonnages and power were launched, 12 vessels ordered to be constructed and in most cases commenced, and that at the present time there are, in addition, seven others on the stocks, which were under construction prior to the commencement of last year. The vessels now being fitted for service, some of which are in a very forward state, include three double-screw second-class steam cruisers, each to carry 10 guns, of 3,750 tons each, with engines of 5,000 horse-power, named respectively the Amphion, Arethusa, and Leander; two single-screw composite corvettes, with 12 guns, and each of 1,420 tons and 950 horse-power engines, named the Rapid and Royalist; two screw composite gun-vessels, the Dolphin and Wanderer, each to carry three guns, of 925 tons and 750 horse-power engines; three screw composite gunboats, each to carry four guns, of 560 tons, and fitted with engines of 650 horse-power, named respectively the Albacore, Mistletoe, and Watchful; a 16-gun screw corvette, the Calypso, built of steel and iron, cased with wood, of 2,770 tons, and 3,000 horse-power engines; a 10-gun steel twin-screw, armour-plated, barbette ship, the Impérieuse, of 7,390 tons, and with engines of 8,000 horse-power; a double-screw, steel armour-plated barbette ship, the Collingwood, designed to carry 10 heavy guns, of 9,150 tons, and 7,000 horse-power engines; and a 7-gun paddle composite vessel, named the Sphinx, of 1,130 tons, and supplied with engines of 1,140 horse-power. The new vessels ordered to be constructed during the past 12 months comprise the following:—Two double-screw, steel armour-plated barbette ships, each to carry 10 heavy guns, of 10,000 tons burden, and to have engines of 7,500 horse-power, to be named the Anson and Benbow; a double-screw, steel, second-class steam cruiser of 3,550 tons, with engines of 6,000 horse-power, to carry 14 guns, to be named the Mersey; a screw composite corvette, of 1,420 tons and 1,000 horse-power engines, to carry 14 guns, to be named the Pylades; two steel second-class twin-screw cruisers, each of 3,750 tons, and to be supplied with 6,000 horse-power engines, to be named the Severn and Thames; three screw, composite gun-vessels, each of 950 tons, with 850 horse-power engines, each to carry four guns, and named respectively the Acorn, the Mariner, and the Racer; two composite, screw gun-vessels, of three guns each, the Melita and Swallow; and a steel, twin-screw, armour-plated turret-ship and ram, with every modern improvement, to be named the Hero. The other vessels now in progress, some of which are in a forward state for launching, include a 16-gun, screw corvette, built of steel and iron, cased with wood, of 2,770 tons, and 3,000 horse-power engines, to be named the Calliope; a 14-gun, screw, composite corvette, of 1,420 tons, with engines of 950 horse-power, to be named the Caroline; three twin-screw, steel, armour-plated barbette ships, each of 9,600 tons and engines of 7,500 horse-power, to carry 10 guns each, to be named the Camperdown, Howe, and Rodney; a similar vessel, but of less tonnage—viz., 7,390 tons, but with engines of greater horse-power—viz., 8,000, to be named the Warspite; and a 10-gun, double-screw, steel, second-class steam cruiser, of 3,750 tons, with engines of 5,000 horse-power, to be named the Phaeton.

Issue of £250,000 Six per Cent. Debentures, of £100 each (interest payable January 1 and July 1 in each year), of which £19,400 are reserved for conversion by the holders of a like amount of Debentures already issued.

The Debentures are secured by a mortgage, and are a first charge on the Railways, with their rolling stock and plant (including the subsidy of the Secretary of State for India in Council), the flotilla of river steamers, &c., the collieries and other valuable concessions of the Company, but subject to any unconverted portion of the £19,400 Debentures already issued, which are secured by mortgage on the Railways and subsidy only.

PROSPECTUS.

The Assam Railways and Trading Company, Limited, was formed in 1881 for the purpose of carrying out certain concessions for the construction, under a subsidy from the Secretary of State for India in Council, of Railways in Assam, about 79 miles in length, traversing the numerous tea plantations, and connecting the River Brahmapootra with Talup and the rich coal district of Makum, and for other purposes, amongst which is the establishment of a service of steamers and lighters upon the River Brahmapootra.

The Railway Concessions are in perpetuity, the Government having, however, the option of purchasing the railway and rolling stock and other equipments at the expiration of the first five years from the date of opening the Main Line and Branch and at the end of every subsequent period of five years, paying the Company 20 per cent. in excess of its value as a dividend-paying investment.

By the same Concessions a subsidy is given by the Secretary of State for India in Council for 20 years from the opening of the Railway and Branch line, respectively, of an amount not exceeding in the whole 100,000 rupees per annum, viz.:—80,000 rupees in respect of the Main Line to Talup, and 20,000 rupees in respect of the Branch to Makum.

In the event of the net earnings yielding a return of 5 per cent. per annum upon the cost of construction, the Government subsidy will not come into operation. Should the net earnings not give a minimum return of 5 per cent. per annum, the Government subsidy will then be available to an extent not exceeding in the whole 100,000 rupees per annum. Upon the opening of any section of the Railway, the Government subsidy accrues in respect thereof pro ratâ.

The option of purchase applies to the Railway only and not to the other property of the Company.

Of the Main Line, 39 miles from the Brahmapootra River to Makum Junction were opened for public traffic on July 16, 1883, and the Government subsidy has accrued since that date in respect thereof. The remainder of the Main Line was opened for goods traffic in September last, and will shortly be completed for passenger traffic. The Makum Branch is completed for the carriage of coal and merchandise, and will be opened for passenger traffic in March next.

A Government Departmental Report recently issued, referring to the Makum Coal Fields, states that "these Coal measures in thickness and quality of Coal are among the first in the world, and are practically inexhaustible;" and the Mining Engineer of the Company in his Report made in November last to the Indian Government, at their request, estimates the quantity at 120 million tons above the natural drainage and easily workable. The present price of Coal at Dibrugarh and other coaling stations on the Brahmapootra River is from 35s to 40s per ton. The Company will be able to deliver their coal at these stations at a price well within these figures, and realise a considerable profit per ton.

With the present limited facilities 2,000 tons of coal can be raised weekly; an estimated profit of 10s per ton on this moderate output would yield £50,000 per annum, which, independently of other sources of profit, is more than three times the amount of interest on these Debentures.

The Debentures are repayable January 1, 1904, but the Company retains the option of repayment on January 1, 1889, or on January 1 in any subsequent year, upon giving six months' notice to the holders thereof.

Issue price, Par—payable as follows:—

20 "	"	March 15, 1884.
50 "	"	April 15, 1884.
£100

Non-payment of instalments at dates on which they fall due renders all previous payments liable to forfeiture.

Scrip certificates to Bearer will be issued in exchange for Bankers' receipts and Letters of Allotment.

The coupon payable July 1, 1884, will be for £1 15s. This and future half-yearly coupons will be payable at the Company's Bankers.

Payment in full may be made on allotment, or on March 15, 1884, under discount at the rate of £4 per cent. per annum.

The Debentures will be issued payable to bearer, but can at any time be registered at the option of the holders.

Copies of the Concessions, together with the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, and the Mortgage Deed, can be seen at the Offices of the Company, and of the Solicitors, Messrs. R. S. Taylor, Son, and Humbert, 4 Field Court, Gray's Inn, W.C.

Applications for the above Debentures must be made upon the annexed form to the Bankers of the Company, the Agra Bank, Limited, 35 Nicholas Lane, London, E.C.

Copies of this prospectus, with form of application, may be obtained from the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company, 1 Tokenhouse Buildings, London, E.C.; or of Messrs. Laurie, Millbank, and Co., 22 Threadneedle Street, London, E.C.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Enfeebled Existence.—This medicine embraces every attribute required in a general and domestic remedy. It overturns the foundations of disease laid by defective food and impure air. In obstructions or congestions of the liver, lungs, bowels, or any other organs, these Pills are especially serviceable and eminently successful. They should be kept in readiness in every family, being a medicine of incomparable utility for young persons, especially those of feeble constitutions. They never cause pain or irritate the most sensitive nerves or most tender bowels. Holloway's Pills are the best known purifiers of the blood, the most active promoters of absorption and secretion, whereby all poisonous and obnoxious particles are removed from both solids and fluids.

ROCHESTER HOUSE, EALING, W.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

At the late Examination held on September 19 and 20, Major DE THOREN and Major MORGAN have fully maintained their former good repute for passing candidates. They sent up three and passed two,— Mr. H. G. Morgan,
Mr. W. S. Carey.

At this establishment the classes are small, and the pupils receive a great deal of individual attention, which enables them the easier to grasp the subject.

Major DE THOREN has had great experience as a Military Instructor and also with Militia Officers.

Major MORGAN has passed the Staff College, and is the author of "Summary of Law" and "Summary of Tactics."

Apply to Major DE THOREN, Bellefield, Jersey.

ARMY EXAMINATIONS.—Messrs. LEIFCHILD, B.A., HICKSON, and OWEN, B.A., RECEIVE a LIMITED NUMBER of PUPILS at the Terrace, Hampton Court. There are seven Tutors (six Resident), to 20 PUPILS, hence small classes (average three in a class), and great individual attention.—Head of Military Department, Captain GREENE.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL.
The Very Rev. the DEAN of BRISTOL.
VICE-PRESIDENT.
The Rev. J. M. WILSON, M.A., Head Master of Clifton College.
HEAD MISTRESS.—Miss WOODS.

The FIRST TERM of 1884 will begin on WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 23. Application for Admission may be made to the Secretary, at the School; or to the Hon. Sec., G. H. WOLLASTON, Esq., 24 College Road, Clifton. Information as to Boarding Houses may be obtained from either the Secretary or Hon. Secretary.

MILITARY EDUCATION, GERMANY.—Colonel BERDOE WILKINSON, late R.E., formerly in charge of the Ordnance Survey in Ireland, and Lieutenant-Colonel WILKINSON SHAW, M.A. (Staff College), late Garrison-Instructor at Aldershot, prepare Candidates for Sandhurst and Woolwich, and for Line Commissions through the Militia.

At the five Militia Competitions which have taken place since September 1, 1881, Colonel WILKINSON and Lieutenant-Colonel SHAW have secured for their Pupils THIRTY-SEVEN COMMISSIONS, although they have only Prepared and sent up a very Limited Number of Candidates. A list of successful Pupils, showing the high places taken by them, will be furnished on application.

At the Militia Literary Examinations held during the same period, a Number of Pupils have also passed; in this Competition the FIRST PLACE was taken in April last by Lieutenant Lord Skelmersdale, and the SECOND PLACE in the recent October Examination by the only candidate sent up, Lieutenant the Honourable Victor A. Pelham.

The General Score for all Examinations now amounts to SEVENTY-ONE SUCCESSES achieved by Pupils during the last two years.

LIEUTENANTS of MILITIA desirous of competing for Line Commissions can be received by the Rev. WALTER BAKER, M.A., at Batcombe Rectory, Evercreech, Bath. They will be thoroughly prepared in all Military Subjects by two Officers who for several years past have been engaged with distinguished success in this special work.

Great individual attention is secured, both Instructors are resident and give their whole time, very few Pupils are taken, and steady work is insisted on. Since the introduction of the Military Competitive, out of Forty-four Lieutenants of Militia sent up, Twenty-seven have been successful, several taking high places in the list.

A Large Staff of Experienced Tutors, all resident, assist in preparing for the Qualifying Examinations, and for the Sandhurst and Woolwich Competitions.

References to parents of pupils successful at all Examinations, INCLUDING SANDHURST and MILITIA COMPETITIVE in 1882 and 1883. All sent up for the last Militia Qualifying Examination passed.

The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose." DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

Dear Sir,—We embrace this opportunity of congratulating you upon the wide-spread reputation this justly esteemed medicine, Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne, has earned for itself, not only in Hindostan, but all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported into the country, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES and Co., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a Liquid Medicine which assuages Pain of every kind, affords a calm, refreshing sleep without Headache, and invigorates the Nervous System when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff), discovered a remedy to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE.

The General Board of Health, London, report that it acts as a charm, one dose generally sufficient.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

COUGHS, ASTHMA, COLDS,

BRONCHITIS,

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,

AS we write these lines, General Gordon is on his way from Assouan, on the First Cataract, to Korosko, where he ought to arrive on Monday next. We do not suppose that he will be tempted to stop by the way to examine them, but there are points of great historical interest on both sides of the river in this part of Nubia; and the records of expeditions and conquests of the old dynasties of Egyptian kings, such as Rameses II., are complemented by the ruins of modern forts and the remains of Turkish Pashas' encampments. Korosko is a miserable Nubian village, but Egyptian civilisation under European influence has set its mark upon it. There is a post office, where the officials speak Italian and French. There is a telegraph office. Every Monday a swift dromedary carries the post across the Desert to Assouan, in time for the boat which starts to catch the mail train from Siout every Wednesday. The journey from Korosko to Abou Hamed will take four or five days, through a desert where the scanty wells, with one exception, contain only brackish water. From Korosko the Nile takes a wide sweep away to the west, by the Third Cataract, and then from Old Dongola turns sharply back eastward, to Abou Hamed, where the travellers will take boat, and make their way to Berber, about three days' journey, against the stream. It will, we presume, depend upon the intelligence which Gordon receives when he reaches that place whether he will go on by water to Khartoum, or attempt the journey along the river bank by Shendy. It appears extraordinary, as there are 18,000 Egyptians between Assouan and Khartoum, that Gordon Pasha should travel apparently without escort, and that no movement of troops to the points on the Nile whence they could protect his passage should be reported. General Graham, an old brother-officer, in Crimean days belonging to the same corps, accompanied him as far as Assouan; and thence he continues on his way with apparently his only European companion, Colonel Stewart, of the 11th Hussars, who was for some time employed in Asia Minor, when Lord Beaconsfield's policy of placing British Consuls to watch over the development of reforms, and to constitute in fact a protectorate there, was inaugurated. Colonel Stewart has travelled much in Eastern countries, and his recent visit to Khartoum, on which he drew up a report, will, no doubt, enable him to give his chief valuable assistance; it certainly is not a very imposing Staff, and the son of the King of Darfour, leaving it at Korosko, will deprive it of some dignity in the eyes of the native population. We shall not have the advantage of hearing from an official source what are the exact instructions which General Gordon has received for the conduct of his mission, till Parliament meets. It may turn out that the apparent inconsistencies and contradictions which have been noticeable in the accounts of what he has been commissioned to do, and of the mode by which it is to be effected, are imaginary, but it would certainly seem, so far, as if his mission, after his arrival in Egypt, had been subjected to influences which were not anticipated when he left England. The causes which have led to the abandonment of the project of reaching Khartoum from Suakim are not in view, but it may be that Baker Pasha sent information which deterred the General from embarking in the Carysfort, and induced him to go to Cairo to consult with the Khedive, and then start by the Nile route for Khartoum. A man who goes out as General Gordon does, superseding all the authorities, may expect unconscious opposition; a feeling of irritation, caused by supersession, will almost insensibly infuse itself into the acts and demeanour of those who should co-operate with the chief, but it is quite certain that General Gordon would receive every assistance and zealous help on service from Sir Evelyn Wood and Baker Pasha. That Sir Evelyn Baring would place at his disposal all the information that could be procured respecting the internal condition of the country, and that Nubar Pasha would fortify any tendency in the mind of the General to abandon hazardous enterprise with much warmth is equally positive. When he set out from Cairo for Assiout by rail, the character of the enterprise must have undergone some modification, for Gordon Pasha, instead of being a British officer acting solely under the orders of his Government, had accepted from the Khedive the title and powers of Governor-General of the Soudan. Of this dignity it is said, however, he is about to deprive himself, for he will abandon all the Soudan except Khartoum. When he was last in that country as Governor-General, he appeared, in the person of his officers and his staff, with all the outward pomp of a great Pasha. He had an army at his back, and all the prestige and power of the vigorous, despotic Khedive then ruling in Egypt, whose authority, except by a few slave-dealers and marauders, was unresisted. He went there to extend the Khedive's power, and, continuing the work of Sir S. Baker, he in fact established an empire, from the Lakes to the sea. Now he will appear there without army or staff, without any prestige except that of his own name, of which, we fear, the extent is somewhat exaggerated; he will be received as the representative of a ruler who is about to abandon his dominions, as the agent who is to carry out the evacuation of the provinces conquered at the cost of so much blood and treasure by the Khedive's immediate predecessors. These are circumstances to tax the genius and resources of any man, and it well may be that Gordon has expressed some doubts respecting his success.

THE history of the "set" made against Baker Pasha when he was named by the Khedive to command the Egyptian Army, has never up to this time been made known; but we hope some fine day it will all be cleared up. It may be admitted that Baker Pasha took leave of the Sultan's service rather too abruptly; but that was not an inconvenance our Government was bound to notice or to punish. In fact, after rendering immense services during the war with Russia, and saving the gros of the retreating Turks on one memorable occasion, Baker was shelved, for the Porte never did anything to organise the Gendarmerie, of which he held nominal command. Baker sent in his resignation, but no heed was paid to him, and at last he started for Egypt without any leave-taking; and there he was welcomed, and appointed General-in-Chief of the Egyptian Army, which he was commissioned to create. He entered on his work with characteristic vigour and spirit, and soon elaborated a plan which, after repeated sittings in Council, the Khedive and his Ministers approved. In this scheme, the Regulars of the three arms, the Staff, the Gendarmerie, and the Police, were organised as parts of "one harmonious whole" down to the minutest details; and these details were, in fact, submitted to the authorities at home, and were pronounced to be deserving of thanks and entire adoption. But a storm was brewing somewhere in London. There were ominous questions and more ominous answers in Parliament. Then appeared articles, "inspired," as they say, in which Baker was attacked most bitterly, and in which the composition of the force he was recruiting with stiffening materials from Albania was assailed with especial fierceness. He was accused of enlisting bands of ferocious foreign cut-throats and janissaries to trample on the people, and demands were made for their disbandment. Finally, public opinion having been duly ripened, orders were sent out to Lord Dufferin and Sir E. Malet to coerce the Khedive to dismiss Baker from military employ, as the British Government were about to send out Sir Evelyn Wood and a body of officers to organise and command the Egyptian Army. The Khedive was reluctant, astonished, and angry, but his remonstrances were vain, and he was obliged to yield. Baker, whose appointment as Sirdar or General-in-Chief had been announced to him, was dismissed from the Army; but he was permitted to take in hand the organisation of the Gendarmerie and Police, with distinct instructions the result of which was to render the former as useless as possible. Though very much disgusted at his treatment, Baker went to work once more, and did his business so well that the Gendarmerie, in spite of the restrictions put upon him in selecting good material, were in advance, as far as discipline and drill were concerned, of Wood's levies, and were able to mount guard and take duties in Cairo which the Regular Army could not fulfil. But that was too much. They were too good. Again orders came out that Baker must not give a military character to the Gendarmerie. Nay, they were not to be called "gendarmerie," but "constabulary." Their officers were not to have military rank, but to take the nomenclature used for the rural police. They were not to think they were at all like soldiers, and the infusion of Turks and Circassians, which had been surreptitiously put in, was probably permitted at first in lack of knowledge of their presence. Nevertheless, when it became necessary to send some sort of force to Suakim, to lay a basis for future operations to protect the place, overawe the tribes, and try to relieve the beleaguered garrisons, it was on Baker Pasha's police the Egyptian Government had to rely for these purely military duties. Since that time the operations of Baker Pasha have been conducted with his usual vigour, and he has done much to restore the influence of the Khedive on the shores of the Red Sea and among the Arab tribes. He has opened communications and established friendly relations with the Abyssinians. He seems to have had neither help nor sympathy, but he has collected a considerable force of irregulars, has drilled blacks and Arabs, conciliated a holy sheik, and prepared the way for the safety of Sinkat, if not Tofit, all with his despised police, and such officers as he had with him; and as the correspondent of the Standard pointed out in his letter of last Wednesday, it is certain that had he been allowed to raise and organise his Gendarmerie as he at first designed, he would have swept away Osman Digna's hordes like flies, and have entered triumphantly into Khartoum long ago. Now, what is the secret history of his treatment? It is worth while to find out. Certain it is that the feelings which were supposed to have been aroused, in one high quarter, by an occurrence years ago, for which, if really credible in all its parts, a heavy penalty had been exacted, had nothing whatever to do with the matter; and it is difficult to give much weight to the allegation that, as Baker Pasha was not a British officer, it would not have been possible to have sent out officers to serve under him, and that therefore he was dismissed, knowing the many examples there have been to the contrary. However, he is doing his duty like a gallant, stout-hearted, and capable commander, and we believe, in the long-run, the country will do him justice. The latest news we have received indicates an actual movement to deliver the garrisons near Suakim. There is a discouraging rumour that the black troops, upon whom so much depends, are discontented because their leader, Zubeer Pasha, has been removed. It is part of the fatality which seems to have marked so much of our action—if it be ours—in Egypt, that we are continually devising combinations without at all inquiring into their probable working. Zubeer Pasha was taken out of a retirement which was, in reality, imprisonment in Cairo, in order that his influence might be used to assist Baker in liberating the Khartoum garrison, and in gaining the support of the black populations of the Soudan. Gordon Pasha was sent out to assume the chief command, and then it was suddenly discovered that Zubeer Pasha did not regard him with the most friendly feelings in the world, because the British Governor-General had found it necessary to shoot the Pasha's favourite son, on a charge, which the Pasha alleges to be unfounded, of a slave conspiracy. However, if Baker does advance from Trinkitat, we believe that he will attain a victory over Osman's hordes, and release one, at least, of the beleaguered garrisons.

PARLIAMENT is about to assemble, and, as is usual at this time, the various Departments of the Admiralty are busily engaged preparing the Naval Estimates for the coming financial year. It is much to be hoped that when presented to Parliament, they will be found to have been drawn up in a liberal and enlightened spirit. Such provision should be made for the administration of the Navy as to leave no doubt as to the ability of the Admiralty to place our "first line of defence" upon a sufficiently strong footing to ensure its being able to minister to all the various requirements of the Empire, both in time of peace and in time of war. The fact that, for political considerations which are but imperfectly understood, it has been necessary to send the Channel Squadron to strengthen the Mediterranean Fleet, clearly proves that in point of numbers the Admiralty have not a sufficient number of ships at their disposal. True, there are modern armourclads being completed in our ports; but, at the present moment, the defence of our coasts has been left to the Reserve or Coastguard ships, vessels which are utterly unfitted for the task. In the matter of seamen, the Navy is also deficient. It would be impossible for the Admiralty to man the ships being completed in our Naval Arsenals without calling out the Naval Reserves. This is not as it should be. No doubt, the problem as to how to man the Navy is a difficult one to solve, when those attempting to do so aim solely at shipping able-bodied men; but, when it is remembered that the Admiralty have it within their power to enter double and treble the number of boys now yearly admitted on board their training-ships, surely the difficulty of manning the Navy should be made to disappear. It requires only a little courage. Their Lordships need only ask for the requisite sum of money, and the difficulty will at once vanish, for the Admiralty will then be in a position to rear their own stock of seamen. This should be done, whatever the cost to the country may be; for the modern merchant steamer, while displacing the sailing-vessel, is not only reducing the number of seamen at one time sailing under our flag, but is also causing the quality of the raw material to deteriorate. Hence, year by year the Navy has to look to a contracting and inferior source from whence to fill the vacancies created by death, disease, and discharge; and the waste thus accruing is not made up as yet by the number of boys sent into the service from the training-ships. This number should be greatly in excess of the present 2,300 odd, and we are glad to observe that the Admiralty are now advertising extensively for boys to join the Navy. At the same time, until the Pension scheme, recently promulgated, is revised, until punishments in the Navy are administered by strict rules and regulations, instead of at the will and caprice of commanding officers, until our seamen are dealt with in a more liberal spirit in regard to the matter of leave-granting, and until, in a word, the Navy is made popular among those classes from which we draw our supply of seamen—men who do all the hard work of the service, receive its hardest knocks, and get in return its least comforts, honours, and rewards—the Admiralty may rest assured that the problem of how to man the Navy will never be solved. Hence, we hope that the coming year, even more so than the past, will be one of judicious Naval Reform. But the first and greatest Naval reform of all, the one the most needed, must be initiated by the Admiralty in Parliament. The Navy Estimates must be increased, and made adequate to the requirements of the Empire and the well-being of the Navy. The Treasury policy must be set on one side. In ships and guns, in seamen, and in pay, the Navy is deficient. No service can be efficient which does not keep pace with the times. The Navy is many years behind the times. In every walk in life on shore salaries have been vastly increased within the last fifty years; but in the Navy the pay of officers and men has, except in a few instances, remained stationary. Muzzle-loading guns are still in use, while foreign Navies have breech-loaders. The repeating rifle is unknown in the service. The shell-firing machine-gun is only just being introduced, while in foreign Navies this weapon has been in use for years. The Admiralty have, therefore, thanks to the parsimonious policy of the Treasury in the past, much leeway to make up. We have been weathered by every Admiralty abroad, and unless a shift of wind soon comes, their Lordships will find to their cost that a stern chase is a long chase indeed.

The Channel Squadron, under the command of Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, consisting of the Minotaur, Agincourt, Achilles, Neptune, Northumberland, Sultan, and Forward, arrived at Palmas Bay, Sardinia, from Palma, Majorca, on January 27.

Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., was at Trinkabah on January 30, when the telegraph line to Suakim was opened, and at once communicated with the Admiralty. Sir William proposed meeting General Gordon at Suakim on January 31, and then return to Trinkabah.

Captain G. D. Morant has been appointed to succeed Captain Cumming as Commodore at Hong Kong.

By the retirement of Lieutenant-Colonel W. W. Allnutt, of the Portsmouth Division, Royal Marines, Major and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Moody succeeds to the substantive List of Lieutenant-Colonels. Lieutenant-Colonel Moody is at present recruiting officer for the Royal Marines in London, and, we are given to understand, will retain his appointment on promotion.

The official report regarding the grounding of the Euphrates off Tarifa having been received by the Admiralty, their Lordships have determined to try Captain Cardale and the officer in charge of the navigation of the ship during the illness of the navigating lieutenant by court-martial at Portsmouth. The Euphrates will reach England about February 15, and the court will assemble soon after on board the Victory, under the presidency of Admiral Sir Geoffrey Hornby, the Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth. This will be the first time Admiral Hornby sits on a court-martial since the days of the old Edgar.

Sub-Lieutenant Frederick William Fane Hervey, R.N., has been awarded the Beaufort testimonial for the year 1883, having passed the best examination of his year for the rank of lieutenant in the Navy. His seniority dates from December, 1882, and he obtained first-class certificates in seamanship, torpedo, navigation, and gunnery.

The month of February is one which, to Naval officers, yearly brings round reminiscences of which they certainly need not feel ashamed. Exactly one hundred and one years ago, on February 1, 1783, the Naval College at Greenwich was opened. Coomassie was captured on February 4, 1874. In 1813, the Amelia fought the French ship Aréthuse on February 7. February 9, 1872, will ever be memorable as the day on which Mr. Childers promulgated his new rules as to Naval promotion, which he was the first to break. The Naval victory off Cape St. Vincent was won on February 14, 1797; and the Ajax was lost on the same day in 1807. On February 19, 1807, Admiral Duckworth entered the Dardanelles, and on February 20, 1653, the English obtained a victory over the Dutch Fleet off Portsmouth. Six ironclads forced the Humaita passage on February 21, 1868. The memorable loss of the Birkenhead took place on February 25, 1852. The Anunghoy batteries were stormed on February 26, 1841, while the day following the Bocca Tigris was forced. On February 29 was announced the suspension of hostilities between Russia and the allied forces in the Crimea in 1856. These facts are taken from the "Journal Book and Diary for the Use of Officers of the Royal Navy," a most useful work, published by Messrs. Griffin and Co., of Portsea, which no Naval officer should be without.

A correspondent calls our attention to the fact that regarding Naval promotions, the four first Honourables on the Lieutenants' List, respectively of 17, 16, 15, and 14 years' standing, and of good service, remain unpromoted, remarking, however, that "it is curious that they should all belong to Conservative families."

The new torpedo ship about to be built to supersede the Hecla is to be fitted with the gear and appliances necessary to hoist torpedo boats, weighing from 50 to 60 tons, out and in. These boats will be over 100 feet long, and similar in many respects to the Australian boat Childers. They will be able to keep the sea alone, and will have a speed of 18 knots an hour. They are to be fitted with two fixed torpedo guns built into the hull forward, and which will be completely covered by a raised deck, at the after end of which will be the conning or steering tower. In fact, the craft will be in all essential particulars similar in design and arrangement to the Batoum, built four years ago for the Russian Government. This boat was the first of a type of sea-going torpedo boats that are now finding much favour with foreign Governments, a considerable number having been supplied to Russia, Greece, Brazil, and other Powers, but the English Admiralty do not at the present time possess a single specimen.

The Goodenough Medal for the year 1883 has been awarded to Lieutenant A. W. Ewart, serving on board the Euphrates.

Several correspondents have written to us with reference to the proposed changes which are anticipated in connection with the Generals' List of Royal Marines. Although willing at all times to open our columns to correspondents who may be desirous of bringing to public notice such matters as, in their opinion, may tend to the advantage of the public service, and especially so in the case of the Royal Marines, we feel somewhat reluctant in opening up a controversy which may be otherwise. The argument set forth by "Calpe," that the gallant corps has on previous occasions narrowly escaped serious results by "class legislation," we fully endorse; but, at the same time, we would point out, in the interest of the younger officers of the corps, that this "class legislation" has always hitherto been to the advantage of the seniors. The maladministration pointed out by "Calpe," which led to the disastrous condition of the corps in 1877, is as yet but inadequately rectified, and should their Lordships be pleased to sanction the proposed changes, promotion cannot but be materially accelerated. Though fully recognising some of "Calpe's" remarks, we feel sure that the interests of the Royal Marines will be better served by leaving in the hands of the Deputy-Adjutant-General the welfare of the corps, over which, we feel assured, he will ever keep a watchful eye, than by publishing the facts asked for by our correspondents.

Vice-Admiral Acton, commanding the Italian Permanent Squadron, has been unable to proceed to sea in the Dandolo, owing to a severe illness, which forces him to keep perfectly quiet for the present. The Dandolo has, therefore, been ordered into dock to take out seven boilers supplied by Messrs. Penn and Son, which have been condemned as unfit for further use. The cost of replacing these boilers will fall on the English firm. Admiral Acton's flag will, for the time being, be transferred to the Roma. The crew of the Dandolo is to be turned over to the Principe Amadeo, which, when fitted out, will hoist the Admiral's flag, and proceed to sea on a cruise this month, with the Palestro and Maria Pia in company. The giving-out of the English-made boilers on board the Dandolo has given great dissatisfaction to the Italian Government.

The Hon. John Smalman Smith, recently appointed Judge of the Supreme Court of the Gold Coast, arrived at Lagos on December 1, and entered upon his duties. His Honour is well known among Naval men as the compiler of a work, entitled "How We Are Governed," which deals in a very able manner with the Naval and Military forces of the country and their administration.

We read in the morning papers this week, "£100,000 have been placed at General Gordon's disposal." Very lately there appeared in one of the leaders of public opinion, "The one thing needful to secure honesty in the administration of Egypt is to teach the people to regard corruption as dishonouring, and to inculcate a horror of bribery amongst the officials." It must be remembered that there are in Egypt people, natives though they be and dark-skinned, possessed of very acute intelligence, who put this and that together, and who are very quick at detecting flaws in argument, inconsistencies in conduct, and who are even capable of denouncing hypocrisy. It would certainly tax the ingenuity of the most accomplished logician to reconcile the principle laid down in the beautiful sentence which we extracted from a homily in one of the daily papers some time ago, regarding the affairs of Egypt, with the announcement that General Gordon has been entrusted by the Egyptian Government with £100,000, not to pay troops or for personal expenses, but to bribe the chiefs of the Arab tribes who are with the Mahdi to desert him. That may be perfectly legitimate. It was with a golden sword poor Palmer, and Charrington, and Gill were sent out to fight in the Desert. It may be altogether right and politic to employ gold as the means of winning back to allegiance disaffected subjects, or of detaching tribesmen from the cause of an impostor rebel. But it would not be easy to show that the Mahdi is a rebel at all, or that those who have their hands greased by such a great personage as Gordon Pasha will not consider it ample justification of what we call bribery and corruption, whenever they can practise it themselves. In fact, a man of the purest personal character and honour, whose contempt for money is almost a weakness, but who places great reliance upon it as an agency for moving the baser natures of the world, is sent for by a Government that has been reading high moral lessons to an Oriental race, to begin a systematic employment of bribes to effect a political object. The Egyptians, at all events, will scarcely appreciate the arguments by which such a course will be sustained.

When the distribution of territorial battalions was announced, we called, over and over again, attention to the obvious absurdity of assigning to Scotch districts a number of battalions which could not by any possibility be recruited by Scotchmen in Scotland; and the present state of recruiting North of the Tweed justifies all that we then wrote. Whatever may be the case in other parts of the United Kingdom, it certainly is not true that the Scotch regiments belong to Scotland in the same sense in which the battalions recruited in certain districts in England certainly represent the youth of that particular locality. In the Highland regiments are many Lowlanders, and in the Lowland regiments there are many men belonging to the Irish and Scotch emigration.

General J. A. Street, C.B., will be placed on the Retired List from the 6th inst., under the terms of the Royal Warrant.

In the late Mr. Jeffery Samuel Prendergast, whose death took place on the 22nd ult., at his residence, Melville, Blackrock, County Dublin, the last Waterloo officer of the Brigade of Guards has passed away. Mr. Prendergast, who was in his 87th year, was also the last of the gallant band of Guardsmen who were present at the defence of the building and orchard of Hougomont, that important position on the immediate right of the British line, rendered, in the words of Siborne, ever memorable by the truly heroic and successful stand maintained throughout the day by the troops allotted for its defence. Mr. Prendergast was gazetted in February, 1814, to the 2nd Battalion 3rd Foot Guards, and retired as Lieutenant and Captain on June 25, 1825. He was senior in his regiment at Waterloo to the late Colonel Sir Harry Blane and Lord Rokeby, the two junior ensigns of the battalion of the Foot Guards which Colonel Hepburn commanded. Since his retirement he had settled on his estate at Fortmoy, in County Tipperary, an estate which he fortunately sold prior to the recent agitation.

The question to be discussed in the Military prize essay at the Royal United Service Institution this year is, "Should the European Army in India continue as at present constituted, or should it be converted in whole or in part into a local force?" The subject is important, the competition ought to be keen.

Hart's annual Army List, now in the 45th year of its issue, has made its due appearance with the new year, and will be found to contain a large and much-needed addition of officers' services. In its get-up and general arrangements it is in many respects far superior to its younger and formidable rival, the official Birthday Book, and as such is, no doubt, more acceptable to the service. It is only when reference is made to war services that a falling-off is noticeable, the absence of a large number of records being still apparent. Under 7th Dragoon Guards, for instance, we notice that only three officers are credited with war service; the 4th King's Own gives no record of its officers who are decorated for the South-African campaign; and one searches in vain for the services of the two, Sartorius, Reginald, V.C., and the officer who is at present so unpleasantly occupied at Suakim. The 5th Fusiliers, also, make no mention of their Afghan records; and if we are to believe "Hart," such men as Alan Hill, V.C., 58th, and Surgeon-Major Reynolds, V.C., of Rorke's Drift fame, have never seen a shot fired. A little attention to these details, and "Hart" will speedily resume the position it occupied when its founder, the late Lieutenant-General Hart, devoted such care and diligence to it.

The Times correspondent at Khartoum, telegraphing on the 29th, expresses a belief that Gordon's summons to the Sheiks to appear before him will be ineffectual. It is indeed, we fear, too late to try a policy of conciliation, but it may not be too late to try the application of golden ointment to these itching palms. The scapegoat has been sent into the Desert; but it will be a terrible day for those who sent him, if he be sacrificed. At the very moment that an official German paper is not very darkly indicating the result to England of the policy of annexation, which is recommended from the Foreign Office at Berlin, we are informed that Nubar Pasha has plainly expressed his opinion to a friend, who has kindly published it in a German newspaper, that he expects to be virtually Governor of Egypt under our rule. Many things may happen before that; and meantime, the policy of those who have recommended total abstention is coming more and more to be considered with attention by those who at first rejected it, in their haste to seize the fruit of the Gardens of the Hesperides, which may turn out to be Dead-Sea apples, after all. For our own part, we would prefer even Arabi Pasha to Nubar Pasha as Minister for Egypt, if it was considered desirable to gain the support of the Egyptians in their own country. It appears much to be regretted that no effort is made by the authorities, or by what is called Society, in Ceylon, to make the exile's residence agreeable, or to get him to regard with interest or affection the agencies by which he has been installed in that distant island.

In one District an order has been issued forbidding Regimental Serjeant-Majors and others who are Warrant Officers to wear plain clothes for recreation purposes when off duty and on leave in the evening, with the exception of Conductors and a few who are not Warrant Officers. In Para. 6, Section 12, Queen's Regulations, Warrant Officers are allowed this privilege by the sanction of the General Officer commanding. Is it well to draw distinctions,—to have Warrant Officers in one District enjoying privileges, while they are denied in another?

Captain G. F. Price, U.S.A., now on recruiting service, gives a good account of recruiting for the American Army:—"Contrary to the general impression, a large per-centage of enlistments in the Army are of men of American birth. The percentage of foreigners is small, and of these the Germans come first, and the Irish and English next. There are few Frenchmen and Scotchmen. We accept about one man in ten of those examined. Our standard is one of the highest in the world. Our cavalrymen on the plains are physically perfect, a splendid body of men, equal to the Queen's Life Guards, and better mounted, though the latter organisation are mounted on American horses."

The clerical rule of the War Office under which we now labour is, according to its own statements, endeavouring to minimise an officer's expenses, and a recent instance of the successful application of their rule may prove interesting. At the last examination for promotion, held at Aldershot on the 1st of this month, the gymnasium in the permanent barracks was appointed for the purpose. At the last moment, however, some one—common report said the Chief Instructor in Gymnastics—interfered, and the locale was changed to the gymnasium in the North Camp. The whole of the officers under examination —some 52 in number—with one solitary exception, were quartered in the South Camp, or Permanent Barracks, and this utterly unnecessary change cost the majority of officers a cab fare there and back on four days, and the expenses of luncheon at the hotel on two days out of the four, for few if any were honorary members of the messes in the North Camp; and even had they been, they would not have felt it fair to utterly swamp the two messes. Had the original arrangement held good, every one would have walked to the gymnasium in the permanent barracks, and would have adjourned to his own mess for luncheon. But unfortunately, a squad of recruits wanted the gymnasium at the hours named—this was the reason given—and so the officers were bundled off to the North Camp.

In noticing last week a report that, in the event of a European war, General Saussier would be entrusted with the command-in-chief of the French armies, we said that it appeared strange to us, supposing the report to be true, that this General should remain in Algeria. We now see that General Saussier is coming home, and that he is going to fill the post of Military Governor of Paris. This will, at all events, place him in the centre of affairs. One can imagine how inconvenient it would be, on a declaration of war, having to send to Algeria for the Commander-in-Chief.

In view of the great importance of a rapid transport of troops in case of a sudden mobilisation of the Army, German railways, both Government and private, are required to keep in store a certain number of wooden benches, for the immediate conversion, in case of need, of goods-waggons into troop-waggons. As the benches used during the last Franco-German War are no longer considered serviceable, enormous numbers of new seats have lately been ordered. An ordinary German goods waggon is supposed to carry 40 men or six horses.

One finds in the Progrès Militaire the account of a curious blunder committed by the Staff of the 19th Army Corps, which occupies Algeria. The consequences of this blunder appear to be that the 2nd Battalion of the Foreign Legion, which was sent to Tonquin at the end of last month, counts out of 800 men no less than 250 young soldiers who had been in the service only four months, and who were consequently insufficiently drilled, and who, of course, can know nothing of musketry. It was said officially a short time ago, and re-echoed everywhere, that 30,000 volunteers had offered themselves for service in Tonquin. But the Progrès says that the above error might have been avoided, had the authorities, instead of taking the men in a lump from the depôt, asked for volunteers from Tiaret, Saida, and other garrisons.

A rather formidable account is now given in the French papers of the strength of Bacninh, which appears to be fortified after the most approved principles of modern art. It is considered, in fact, to be so hard a nut to crack, that doubts are entertained as to the possibility of carrying it as Sontay was carried, and without resorting to a regular siege. In the meantime, it is not supposed that General Millot will be ready to assume the command of the forces with which he is about to operate before February 21, owing to the transport in which he sailed having broken down. A similar accident to another transport will prevent a considerable portion of the reinforcements which left France a fortnight ago from reaching the scene of action before February 28. As all campaigning after March will be impossible, General Millot will have no time to lose. As the capture of Bacninh was anticipated some time ago, it is not unnatural to find a good many spiteful reports in Paris, due, for the most part, to animosity of political opponents. One Paris journal has ventured so far as to say that the Government received a despatch a few days ago from Admiral Courbet, to the effect that he had made an attempt to carry Bacninh, but that, finding the works too important, he had fallen back. The French Government, in its unofficial organs, has given this story the most unequivocal denial, hinting that it has a very Celestial odour about it. The foundation for this report may be, perhaps, a reconnaissance on the part of the Brionval and De Maussion columns, which are said to have carried out an expedition successfully; while Colonel Belin, of the 1st Regiment, in a reconnaissance which he made in the direction of Bacninh, found that place strongly occupied. The French continue sending reinforcements, naval and military, to the scene of action, and the large transport Ariège is about to start with troops and the pieces of eight gunboats, which will be put together on the banks of the Red River. It is not improbable that more Chasseurs d'Afrique will be sent out, as the services of those already in Tonquin have been found invaluable.

TRAINING NAVAL OFFICERS.

The paper read by Captain C. C. P. Fitz-Gerald, R.N., at the Royal United Service Institution yesterday, calls attention to a subject of the most vital importance to the efficiency of our Navy as a fighting machine. The title was rather a long one, "On the Necessity for the Systematic Training of Naval Officers in the Art of Manœuvring Ships under Steam." The proposal to fit up small vessels in such a manner as to admit of their ramming each other with impunity, and to exercise officers in ramming and other tactics, is by no means new, and the lecturer disclaimed all pretension to originality, but he strongly urged the danger of giving too much attention to, and placing too high a value on, the theoretical training of Naval officers, to the neglect of their practical training. A Naval officer should be, above all things, practical; if he is not practical, he is a fraud and an impostor, and entirely out of place in a service like the Navy; and it was evidently with the view of directing attention to what he calls "the undue exaltation of mathematics, to the neglect of practical seamanship," that Captain Fitz-Gerald has raised his voice, and pointed out the absolute necessity of taking some steps for teaching our young officers the practical art of handling a steamer skilfully, an art which, as the lecturer truly said, "will be of the most vital importance in any future Naval war." It is not too much to say that skill in handling individual ships and squadrons will go farther in deciding the issues of a Naval battle than either thickness of armour or power of guns, both of which are so much talked and written about, and upon which such vast sums of money have been spent whilst no well-devised and systematic steps are taken to instruct the future conductors of these expensive machines in the art of using them skilfully. It will not be a question of the superiority in seamanship of the British sailor, nor so much that of his skill in gunnery, as it will be of the skill, judgment, quickness of eye, boldness, and confidence of one individual, who, by simply giving the orders "starboard" or "port" at the right second of time, will decide the fate of his ship, or of that of the enemy, as the case may be. Captain Fitz-Gerald likens the art of manœuvring ships ("fencing with ships" he calls it) to the art of fencing with small swords, and points out that in the days when duelling was common, no man would have thought of engaging in a duel without having had considerable practice with a blunt foil, to teach him how to handle his weapon; and thus he strengthens his argument for establishing a systematic school of instruction either at Portsmouth or Plymouth to teach all Naval officers practical steam tactics. The necessity for such a school is becoming daily of more importance, and the fact that no one in a man-of-war, with the exception of the captain and navigating officer, ever have an opportunity of handling their ship, except under the simplest conditions, ought to open the eyes of the authorities to the true state of the case, and to the great want so forcibly set forth by Captain Fitz-Gerald,—"Men learn to shave on the chin of a fool," but our captains and commanders ought not to learn shaving on the bows of our ironclads; they should be expert manœuvrers before being put in commandof a ship. But this desirable end is only to be attained by establishing a systematic school of tactics and instruction.

LONG v. SHORT SERVICE.

SIR,—Your mention of my name in connection with the letter of "An Old General" leads me to address you. That letter was not mine, as you appear to suppose, nor was it the sort of letter I should have written in any case. I have no doubt that the statistics of "An Old General" were literally correct, but I hold it as quite beside the mark to show satisfactory per-centages as to the age, height, or physique of our soldiers now serving, unless, like Sir Boyle Roche's bird, they could be in two places at once, since the numbers on which the calculation is based are so lamentably insufficient. The battalions serving abroad are in every way satisfactory in the above respects, and would, if taken alone, show much higher per-centages than those quoted. It is the condition of the home battalions that constitutes a standing reproach to the political administration of our Army; and I have long given up the expectation that we might one day possess an Army so maintained in peace as to be prepared for war, and for the following reasons:—I have seen the Government of the day in 1869 summarily discharging 20,000 trained soldiers, because matters seemed peaceful abroad, and increasing the Army again by the same number of recruits in 1870, in the panic occasioned by the Franco-German War—an ill-advised measure, to which a great portion of our present difficulties are attributable. I have seen the same Government in 1872 introducing the present short-service organisation with a great flourish of trumpets, and in 1873, in the teeth of their own experience only two years old, absolutely ruining their own handiwork by largely reducing the number of men on which the efficient working of their scheme absolutely depended. I have seen the same Government in 1872 commending their scheme to the acceptance of Parliament, by the promise that within a given time the Reserve, constituting the primary advantage of short service, would attain a certain large development; and yet in the year following rendering their promises impossible of fulfilment by striking off 7,000 of the men out of whom that Reserve must be manufactured. I have seen a different Government, in 1878-79, carrying on two difficult wars at one time on peace estimates, and entirely neglecting all the conditions on which the organisation of the Army was based, because it seemed less objectionable to them to imperil the lives of our officers and soldiers by employing inadequate means, than to risk an adverse division in the House of Commons. And now, at the present time, we see yet another Government deaf to the warnings of the past, and in defiance of the conditions laid down by themselves in 1872, imposing on 66 battalions of infantry at home the task of supplying 75 battalions abroad without any increase to the numbers of the former. If two duty soldiers are required to do the work of three, as is often the case in England now, and has generally been the case in Ireland during the last two years, it can hardly be surprising if they should break down, and be not altogether contented with their condition. In a recent speech, Lord Wolseley truly expressed the cause of the present unsatisfactory condition of our home infantry, which offers an easy theme for ridicule to the opponents of "short service," in saying that there is not enough of it. Nothing but a considerable increase of numbers can enable the Army efficiently to perform even the duties of peace, and that only after the lapse of time. For although it were possible to raise on the moment all the additional men that would be required for that purpose, a recruit cannot be counted as a duty soldier at home until he has served at least eight months, or as a soldier fit to send abroad under a full year. In your issue of September 15, you did me the honour to express approval of a then recent paper of mine in the Nineteenth Century, but only at the expense of my consistency. But all the proposed remedies which you enumerate as having been advocated by the Army all along, and to which you assume that I have only recently "become a convert," have been persistently urged by myself, as well as by other "military reformers," since 1873, and I submit that it is quite possible to be at once "a steadfast believer in the general policy of the War Office," while condemning in toto the manner in which that policy has been administered. The necessity of increasing the weaker home battalions to the strength on which the organisation was based has been the subject of incessant representation by the Commander-in-Chief and his military advisers, as I showed in my remarks appended to the Report of Lord Airey's Committee, (para. 29, et seq.) An increase of the Militia Reserve to compensate for the diminution of the Army Reserve was proposed by me in an official paper in 1875. In 1876 I was a member of a Committee on Recruiting, which recommended improving the position of the non-commissioned officer, a recommendation only carried out after having been pigeon-holed for five years. I have always held and have recorded the opinion that a system obliging a battalion at home to furnish out of its establishment all the drafts required by a battalion abroad, in addition to the serious drains to which it is subjected on its own account, is vicious in principle, and only to be defended on the score of economy. There is no soldier who would not prefer that the two battalions of a regiment should both be supplied from a third or depôt battalion, but that would involve an enormous increase of rank and file, which no Government would propose, even though any House of Commons would be likely to sanction it. We must, therefore, bow to hard facts. But I hold that the principle of "short service and reserves" was completely vindicated by the experience of the expedition to Egypt, the battalions composing it having been completed with proper fighting material without "volunteering," and ready to embark in two weeks after order. That some battalions had to be filled up with too large an infusion of Reserve men was due to a quite recent and sudden increase in their establishments, rendered necessary by past maladministration. It is not matter of opinion only, but of fact, that no expedition sent out from these shores was, so far as infantry is concerned, so quickly dispatched and with so little friction. And none has ever left behind it anything like the same reserve of fighting soldiers for the supply of field drafts, for of the 9,700 infantry reserve men who were utilised on that occasion, only 2,290 went to complete the fighting battalions, while 7,950 were held in reserve in Alexandria and at home depôts. And behind these, again, were the balance of the Army Reserve and the whole of the Militia Reserve, numbering 26,000. The following is from a letter I addressed to the Morning Post in July last:—"It is, however, the organisation of our Infantry alone, based on short service, to which I have referred as having been vindicated by the campaign in Egypt; for he would be a hardy partisan who should contend that in other respects our Military system, in the preparations for that campaign, manifested anything approaching to a proper preparedness for war; and it is devoutly to be hoped that the evils of that unreadiness for which England is conspicuous, and from the consequences of which she will not, perhaps, always find her insular position a sufficient protection, may not be brought home to the nation by the bitter experience of some war, short, sharp, and decisive, waged against a really well-organised foe."

—I am, &c., P. L. MACDOUGALL, General.

SOME MAGAZINES.

In the lively article called "Army Vivisection" in this month's number of Blackwood the writer continues his criticism of the policy of the reformers of the Army. The paper constitutes the greatest attraction for members of the service, which is compared to an unfortunate dog bound down to the operating-table for the successive Secretaries of State to try their surgery upon, and which now pathetically calls for rest from vivisection. The Adjutant-General, who may be regarded as master-cutler, gives very little promise that their cries will be attended to. Less short-service, indeed! Give the rogues one cut, and see how they like it. Lop a few months off here, and take away more drafts there. Clearly, however, the necessities of the case will compel those who are charged with the conduct of these bold experiments to do that which their friends and patrons abhor. They must ask for more money; already that demand is foreshadowed in the speech on which so much stress has been laid. The demand may be very justifiable, and we believe it to be quite right, under all the circumstances, that it should be made and acceded to; but it comes from a very bad quarter, and contains a confession pro tanto that the new scheme has not conduced to economy. Taking into consideration the payment which has been made in India to retain a few thousand men under the colours, it is not encouraging to find that a deficiency of at least 5,000 men is anticipated in the numbers on the Indian Establishment in the ensuing year. And not even Lord Wolseley, we presume, would maintain that the young giants who are being sent out from the home battalions compensate in their physique and power of endurance for the gaps in the ranks of our debilitated battalions. However, it has become, so far, a matter of assertion and counter-assertion, of belief on one side and of bigotry on the other, that, as we have said elsewhere, a calm and judicial investigation into the actual condition of the service is absolutely needed, to enable the country to know the truth. With every respect for the reformers, we devoutly pray that the system may not be subjected to any immediate test, in a campaign with more formidable enemies than Quashies or Kaffirs. There is a very interesting and original paper in Blackwood, called the "New Phaedo," which puts us in mind somewhat of the old style of essays, in the form of dialogues, in which our ancestors delighted, as set forth by Walter Savage Landor, and in the Noctes Ambrosianae; also a lively paper which, perhaps, may be traced to the pen of Mr. Davenport Bromley, upon "More Reminiscences of a Ross-shire Forest;" a laudatory and just review of Sir Theodore Martin's "Life of Lord Lyndhurst,"—a very excellent paper; and a poem on Pessimism, worthy of the subject.

The new number of Colburn's United Service Magazine contains some articles of general interest. The number opens with a most instructive paper on "The Army as a Profession." Its author, Lieut.-Col. R. T. Higgins, having only lately retired from active service, speaks from experience, and the picture he draws is a truthful one. He tells of things as he found them, and the deductions to be drawn from his outspoken and graphic enunciation of difficulties which stand in the way of the "every day" British officer is not one such as is likely to raise the Army as a calling in the eyes of those who have nothing but their own brains to recommend them. Major W. J. Elliot dilates at some length on the question of the magazine rifle, showing what European States are doing, and pointing out what the duties of our own Government are. Col. Lonsdale Hale brings to a conclusion his article on "Life in a German Regiment during the War of 1870-71." Well acquainted as he is with the organisation and interior economy of foreign armies, Col. Hale's paper is especially instructive, and might be studied with advantage by the officers of our Army. "The Result of Reconstruction," by Col. W. W. Knollys, treats of a well-worn subject. Col. Knollys takes the same view that all do who are not biassed in favour of the fads which have robbed the Army of all its old vitality, and have rendered the inefficiency of Great Britain as a military Power a by-word among European States. "The Life and Adventures of Mrs. Christian Davies," by Capt. E. O'Callaghan, gives particulars of a most eventful life. Mrs. Davies served for years as a private soldier, died at the age of 72, and was buried at Chelsea with military honours. Her story is done full justice to by her present biographer. There are other papers, and altogether it may be said that the number now before us is a cheap shilling's-worth, containing as it does much valuable matter.

In the National Review, there is, we think, a direct advance under the able lead of Mr. Alfred Austin, but we regret to find such a prejudiced and illiberal paper as that of the Lord Mayor, entitled "The Boers." Unfortunately, Alderman Fowler paid a visit to the Cape at a time when there was a great deal of excitement respecting the question of the Transvaal, and he was scarcely, apparently, in a state of mind to refuse to lend his large intelligence—very capacious ad hoc—to receive the stories, and the statements which were addressed to him, as a convenient medium for expansion in England. Knowing something about the country and the people, we cannot accept the conclusions of the Lord Mayor, and turn with pleasure to the first of a series of letters by Lord Carnarvon. A loyal, just, and upright gentleman, who is perhaps not very likely to be elected by a Liberal constituency, Mr. Herbert, contributes an able paper on "Forty Years of Income-tax;" and we have no doubt the other papers, which we have not yet been able to read, will prove of equal value.

In "The Government of the Indian Empire," the Edinburgh Review thrashes out a good many sheaves of wheat and straw, and the general result is the production of a very solid and substantial literary loaf, to which we commend our readers; and if they are inclined for more food of the same solid character, they can go on to the paper of "Mr. Herbert Spencer's First Principles," which are resolved by a very trenchant criticism into no principles at all. It is to be regretted that the great Reviews do not pay more attention to what are called service questions. Parliamentary reform, and ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and even the Egyptian question itself, are, we hold, of far less importance in this country than the efficiency of the Navy and of the Army, as Constitutions, jurisdiction, and ability to interfere with effect in foreign politics, come, in the last resort, to be decided by the power to apply force; and considerations connected with the life of a nation depend on the strength of its arms by sea and by land. The paper in the Edinburgh on "The Anarchy of Paris" might furnish subject for deep meditation to the reformers who rely upon pure moral force to keep in check the passions of the multitude, when all semblance of physical power has vanished from the Government.

The little Argosy, under the able conduct of Mrs. Henry Wood, is as full of golden grain as ever this month.

Longman's Magazine not only maintains the character with which it started, but appears to make strides steadily onward towards the goal of magazine excellence, and has already secured itself a high place in public favour.

The Cornhill this month contains several pretty stories and some interesting recollections, but we miss, it must be confessed, the papers like the old "Roundabout" of Thackeray, which were once its peculiar glory; and we cannot consider the woodcuts which illustrate the story of "The Rock Scorpions" as any additional attraction.

The Quarterly Review is occupied with the consideration of the great questions connected with Finance and the Church, the Dwellings of the Poor, and the Forthcoming Session, which hold a high place in the thoughts of men engaged in the conduct of affairs; but there is also a very interesting analysis of the Constitution of the United States, and a paper on the Copts, who, however interesting theoretically, are certainly in their actual manners, customs, and lives, if not morals, not an attractive people. An account of Schliemann's last works and of Mr. Jebb's Homeric writings, with a concluding paper on the statistics of agitation, constitute the main attractions of the present number.

The Times says:—"After the return home during the next few weeks of the 2nd Royal Irish and the 1st York and Lancaster, the Infantry battalions in India standing for relief during the next few years are as follows:—In the season 1884-85, the 1st Essex, now proceeding to Aden; the 2nd East Surrey, at Dinapore; and the 1st Royal Irish, at Meerut. In 1885-86, the 1st Durham Light Infantry, at Allahabad; the 1st Oxford Light Infantry, at Bangalore; and the 1st South Lancashire, at Peshawur. In 1886-87, the 1st South Yorkshire Light Infantry, at Bareilly; the 2nd Hampshire, at Cannanore; and the 2nd North Staffordshire, at Quetta. In 1887-88, the 2nd Dorsetshire, at Roorkee; the 2nd Royal (London) Fusiliers, at Bellary; and the 2nd Cheshire, at Cherat. The 20 battalions at home standing next for foreign service are the 2nd Royal Irish and the 1st East Surrey, at Aldershot; the 2nd South Lancashire, at Devonport; the 2nd Oxford Light Infantry, at Limerick; the 2nd Highland Light Infantry, at Plymouth; the 2nd South Yorkshire Light Infantry, at York; the 1st Hampshire, at Gosport; the 1st Dorsetshire, at Aldershot; the 1st North Staffordshire, at Manchester; the 1st East Kent, at Dublin; the 1st Royal (London) Fusiliers, at Colchester; the 1st Cheshire, at Portland; the 1st Duke of Cornwall's, at Cork; the 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade, at Aldershot; the 1st Norfolk, at Colchester; the 1st East Yorkshire, at Sheffield; the 2nd Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, at Belfast; the 2nd Border Regiment, at Newry; the 2nd King's Own Borderers, at Kinsale; and the 2nd Duke of Wellington's, at Tipperary. Owing to the prolonged occupation of Egypt by British troops, there are four regiments with both battalions abroad—namely, the Royal Sussex, the Essex, the Durham Light Infantry, and the Royal Dublin Fusiliers; while one regiment—the Highland Light Infantry—has both battalions upon the Home establishment."

Major-Gen. W. Hamond Gwyn, R.M.L.I., has been elected without opposition, to serve as Town Councillor for the west ward of Folkestone.

THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For those symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the Glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d, tins, 1s 1½d, labelled "JAMES EPPS and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, M.D., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

THE PAY OF GENERAL OFFICERS.

SIR,—General Officers on the Half-pay Active List are paid quarterly in "arrear," officers on the Full-pay Active List receive their pay monthly in "advance." Would you kindly inform me whether there are insurmountable obstacles to half-pay officers being paid monthly or quarterly in advance? The advantages of having ready money wherewith to make purchases over the credit system are so obvious, that it does not require any argument to prove how great a boon it would be to the officers in question to receive their pay in advance. Half-pay officers, as a general rule, are married, and have to meet many urgent demands on their purses at a time when the purchasing power of the sovereign has greatly diminished, whilst there has been a steady advance in the price of most articles.—I am, &c.,

HALF-PAY.

Obituary.

The accident to Gen. the Marquis of Hertford in the hunting-field terminated in his death on the night of the 25th ult. His lordship had been sinking for several hours, and the case was so hopeless that his medical attendants had left him, and the issue of bulletins had been discontinued. The spine was so seriously injured that the greater part of the body was paralysed. The deceased was born in 1812, and served in the Army from 1827 to 1876, retiring with the rank of General. He had been connected with the Court for many years. He was for some time Equerry to the Prince Consort, and Groom in Waiting to the Queen, as well as Deputy-Ranger of Windsor Great Park. From 1874 to 1879 the Marquis held the office of Lord Chamberlain, and he was also a Privy Councillor. He married, in 1839, Lady Emily Murray, daughter of the third Earl of Mansfield, by whom he had four sons and six daughters.

The Court Circular expresses the regret of the Queen in these words:—"Her Majesty has sustained another sad loss in the person of the Marquis of Hertford, who had served her long and faithfully, and the news of whose death has deeply grieved her."

Admiral Francis Vere Cotton, a cousin of Field-Marshal Viscount Combermere, died on Wednesday at his residence, Allport, Whitchurch, Salop. He was born in 1799, and having passed through the Royal Naval College, embarked in 1814 as a volunteer on board the Pomone frigate, in which he sailed for the coast of North America. He afterwards served for five years in the East and West Indies, and having passed his examination, and attained the rank of lieut., was appointed in that capacity in 1823 to the Weasel, then stationed in the Mediterranean. In 1828 he was transferred to the Galatea, employed on particular service. He was promoted to the command of the Champion in 1830. After serving for some time on the Halifax station, he proceeded to the West Indies, where he removed to the Racehorse. He was placed on half-pay in 1833, and attained the rank of capt. in 1841. He became a retired rear-admiral in 1862, vice-admiral in 1867, and an admiral in 1875.

Rear-Admiral D. Miller died last week, at his residence, Streatham Hill, aged 65. He entered the Navy in Aug., 1831, and was promoted to lieut. in June, 1840. The following month he was appointed to the Rodney, commanded by Capt. R. Maunsell, under whom he served at the blockade of Alexandria, and in the operations on the coast of Syria, for which he received the Syrian and Turkish medals. After further services he was promoted to the rank of commander in August, 1853, and was in command of her Majesty's ship Majestic, in the Baltic, during the war with Russia, and received at the conclusion of the operations the Baltic medal. His commission as captain bore date June, 1863, and that of Rear-Admiral on the Retired List, Dec. 1878.

CAIRO CIGARETTES.—SPECIAL NOTICE.—In consequence of the extensive demand for these Cigarettes, SPILLER and CO. have imported a large Consignment in tin boxes. They are pronounced by connoisseurs to be "the only Cigarettes worth smoking." For sample and prices address, SPILLER and CO., 494 Oxford Street, W. Wholesale Prices to the Trade. Cheques Crossed "London and Westminster."

HOW TO AVOID THE INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF STIMULANTS.—The present system of living—partaking of too rich foods, as pastry, saccharine and fatty substances, alcoholic drinks, and an insufficient amount of exercise—frequently deranges the liver. I would advise all bilious people, unless they are careful to keep the liver acting freely, to exercise great care in the use of alcoholic drinks, avoid sugar, and always dilute largely with water. Experience shows that porter, mild ales, port wine, dark sherries, sweet champagne, liqueurs, and brandies, are all very apt to disagree; while light white wines, and gin or old whisky largely diluted with soda water, will be found the least objectionable. ENO'S FRUIT SALT is peculiarly adapted for any constitutional weakness of the liver; it possesses the powers of reparation when digestion has been disturbed or lost, and places the invalid on the right track to health. A world of woes is avoided by those who keep and use ENO'S FRUIT SALT, therefore no family should ever be without it. CAUTION.—Legal Rights are protected in every Civilised Country. Examine each bottle, and see the Capsule is marked "ENO'S FRUIT SALT." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Directions, in Sixteen Languages, how to Prevent Disease. Prepared only at ENO'S Fruit Salt Works, Hatcham, London, S.E., by J. C. ENO'S Patent.

INDIAN ITEMS.

The Times' correspondent telegraphs:—"The Akha expedition may now be said to be at an end. The surrender of the captives makes it no longer necessary to continue the operations; and the troops are returning. The chief, Mehdi, does not yet appear to have redeemed his promise of giving himself up; but his capture is hardly an object of such importance as to warrant the continuance of the operations."

Brevet Lieut.-Col. A. C. Toker, Bengal S.C., wing-commander 18th N.I., has been appointed to officiate as 3rd Assist.-Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, vice Capt. W. J. B. Bird, appointed to officiate as 2nd Assist.-Secretary.

Major-Gen. H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught presented their Egyptian medals to the officers and men of the 13th Bengal Lancers on Dec. 19.

The officers and men of the 28th Bombay N.I. received their Afghan medals from Major-Gen. Sir John Ross, commanding the Poona Division, at Poona, on Dec. 3.

The command of the 5th Bombay N.I. has fallen vacant, Col. F. Roome having succeeded to colonels' allowance. It is believed that the successional steps will go in the regiment, Col. Hunt becoming commandant, Major Poole second-in-command, and Major Hennell wing-commander.

The death of Col. F. F. Rowcroft not only leaves the command of the 44th Bengal N.I. vacant, but will allow of the filling up of the vacancy in the 4th Goorkhas, which has been in abeyance since the death of Col. Turton; the idea being that Col. Rowcroft would have wished a transfer to his old corps, with which he had served so long, and commanded for some time during the late war. Major Hay, the second-in-command, has been officiating as commandant since the vacancy occurred, and as he has served with the 4th Goorkhas for close on 22 years, he will in all probability be confirmed in the appointment, Major Rogers becoming wing-commander.

LAUNCH OF THE WARSPITE.

The Warspite, 10, twin-screw armour-plated barbette ship, which has been built at Chatham Dockyard, was floated out of dock on Tuesday afternoon, in the presence of some thousands of spectators. The Warspite is one of a new class of fighting ships now being built, of which the following are the principal dimensions:—Length between the perpendiculars, 315 ft.; extreme breadth, 62 ft.; depth of hold, 23 ft. 9 in.; load draught, forward, 24 ft. 5 in.; aft, 25 ft. 5 in., mean, 24 ft. 11 in.; and load displacement, 7,565 tons. The armament of the vessel will consist of 10 guns, comprising four 18-ton breechloading guns, which she will carry en barbette, and six 6-in. breechloading guns, which she will carry for broadside firing. In addition to these guns she will carry ten Nordenfelt and four Gardner guns. She will have six ports for discharging torpedoes, the vessel having been fitted with the Whitehead torpedo apparatus. Her armour plates are the usual Cammell compound, the hardened steel surface being opposed to the enemy's fire, the plating on the sides of the citadel being 10 in. thick, on the ends of the citadel 9 in., and on the barbettes 8 in. She will be fitted with inverted vertical compound engines of 8,000 horse-power, which it is estimated will give her an average speed of 16 knots per hour. Under ordinary circumstances she will carry 400 tons of coal, but provision is made for her carrying a larger quantity, if necessary. At the floating-out, the christening ceremony was performed by Lady Kerr, the wife of Capt. Lord Walter Kerr, in command of the Medway Steam Reserve. The prayers appointed to be read at launches were read by the Rev. W. Dearden, M.A., dockyard chaplain, and immediately afterwards the vessel was hauled safely out of dock by four powerful steamtugs, and moored in the river. As the vessel left the dock, the band of the Chatham Division Royal Marines played "Rule, Britannia," and the National Anthem. The Warspite has been removed from the harbour into the steam basin, where she is to proceed with her equipment and be brought forward for commission.

The French are endeavouring to carry out an energetic policy on the Gold Coast. A correspondent of the Globe, writing on the subject, says:—"Two British officers with an escort having been sent to examine and survey the boundaries between British and French territory on the Gold Coast, the King of Half Assini (which is within the English limits) refused to allow the British flag to be hoisted in his town. In consequence of this, King Blay, of Eastern Apollonia, our firm ally during the last Ashantee war, has proceeded to Half Assini with a large force, in order to compel the submission of the recalcitrant monarch of the latter place, and has been followed by the District Commissioner of Axim and the garrison of that fort. The rebellious conduct of the King of Half Assini may be attributed to the intrigues of the French at Grand Bassam, which place has recently been placed under the rule of the Commandant of Gaboon, who has openly avowed his determination to drive all English traders out of the latter colony; this appears to be the policy of the French all over the West Coast of Africa."

The steam and gun trials of the Victoria and the Albert, two new gunboats, built by Sir W. Armstrong, Mitchell, and Co. for the Victorian Government, took place on Friday off the mouth of the Tyne. Both the boats are of steel, the plates varying from three-eighths to five-eighths of an inch in thickness, and are propelled by twin screws. The Victoria, the larger vessel of the two, is of 530 tons burden, and is 145 ft. long. She carries three Armstrong guns, one 10-in. 25-ton gun, two 13-pounders, and Nordenfelt machine-guns. The Albert is a vessel of 350 tons. She is armed with one 8-in. 12-ton gun, one 6-in. 4-ton gun, two 9-pounders, and two Nordenfelt machine-guns. The trials were satisfactory.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL is universally in high repute for its unprecedented success during the last eighty years, in promoting the growth, restoring, improving, and beautifying the human hair. It may now also be had in a golden colour, and is especially suited for fair-haired children. Ask anywhere for Rowland's Macassar Oil, and avoid spurious imitations. Sizes, 3s 6d, 7s, 10s 6d, and 21s; sent by post for 3d above these prices to A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20 Hatton Garden, London.

The Army.

Royal Horse Guards. Sir Richard Mostyn Lewis Williams-Bulkeley, of Baron Hill, Anglesea, died on Monday, at his seat, near Beaumaris. The late baronet was the eldest son of the late Sir Richard Bulkeley Williams-Bulkeley, of Baron Hill. He was formerly a captain in the Blues, from which he retired in 1865, and he succeeded his father as 11th baronet in 1875.

1st (King's) Dragoon Guards. The funeral of Capt. R. G. Nicholas, who died from the effects of an accident sustained while riding on that day week, was conducted at St. Thomas's Hill Cemetery, Canterbury, on Saturday, with military honours. The cortège comprised the whole of the officers and available troops in garrison, the cavalry being under the command of Col. Le Quesne (commandant), the Royal Horse Artillery under Capt. Eden, and the Buffs (East Kent Regt.) under Major Carr. The deceased being a Roman Catholic, the Rev. Father Power performed the burial rites. Capt. Nicholas died on the 23rd ult., on the anniversary of his 41st birthday. Educated at Sandhurst College, he entered the Army, in the 3rd Dragoon Guards, in 1862, but sold out in 1866. He re-enlisted as a private in the 1st Dragoon Guards, and rose to the rank of capt. He was, in succession to his father, heir to the old title, long in abeyance, of Lord de la Roche, Baron of Haverfordwest, Pembrokeshire, which was not claimed by his father, Major Nicholas, late 5th Fusiliers, as there were no estates except Roundway Park, Devizes, which was inherited by this old Wiltshire county family.

2nd Dragoon Guards (Queen's Bays). A memorial brass is about to be placed in All Saints' Church, at Aldershot, by the officers of the 2nd Dragoon Guards (Queen's Bays), to the memory of the late Capt. F. G. Doyle, of the regiment, who died in December, 1882, from the effects of fever contracted during the Egyptian campaign.

3rd Dragoon Guards. The Times says:—"The 3rd Dragoon Guards, at Manchester, will be brought to Aldershot in the course of next season, in place of the 15th Hussars, who, it is understood, will go to Brighton, relieving the 4th Dragoon Guards, proceeding northwards. The other Cavalry regiments likely to change stations are the 5th Dragoon Guards, at York, the 11th Hussars, at Leeds, and the 16th Lancers, at Dundalk."

7th Dragoon Guards. The depôt proceeds from Shorncliffe to the Curragh on the arrival home of the 10th Hussars from India. Lieut.-Col. Campbell, C.B., who lately retired upon half-pay, has been appointed Assist.-Adjt. and Qrmr.-Gen. in charge of the Recruiting District at Dublin.

8th Hussars. The Standard says:—"Lieut.-Col. Bell has been selected as a D.A.Q.M.G. in the Quartermaster-General's Department (Intelligence Branch), from April 1 next, vice Major Carmichael, 5th Lancers, who completes his period of service in that post on the above date."

10th Hussars. The head-quarters and service troops embark at Bombay for England next Wednesday in the Jumna, and are due at Portsmouth on March 4, whence they proceed to Shorncliffe, where the depôt and some 300 horses lately belonging to the 7th Dragoon Guards await their arrival.

13th Hussars. The Cavalry Brigade of the Meerut Division is now under Col. Sir Baker Russell, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., who has appointed Capt. Baden-Powell to act as his Brigade-Major.

14th Hussars. Lieut. and Adjt. Tuthill has been granted leave from India to England for 12 months, on medical certificate.

18th Hussars. The Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has approved of Capt. and Rdgmr. Hodgins being appointed ridingmaster at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, vice Capt. Brook, about to be placed on the Retired List.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Lieut.-Col. Sandham has assumed the command of the Field Artillery Depôt, now being formed at Colchester.

Lieut.-Col. W. G. Brancker has received orders to proceed from Belfast to Ipswich to assume the command of the Artillery there, vice Col. Percival, retired.

Capt. J. A. Coxhead has been appointed Aide-de-Camp to Gen. Sir H. Norman, K.C.B., Governor of Jamaica.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The C Compy., consisting of Capt. Purcell, Lieuts. Irvine and Paske, and 99 men, sailed for Bermuda on Wednesday in H.M.S. Himalaya.

Scots Guards. The Hon. Arthur Hay David Fraser, second son of Lord and Lady Saltoun, died on Sunday, at Palermo, Sicily, from an attack of typhoid fever. The deceased was born in 1852, and entered the Army as an ensign in the Scots Fusilier Guards in 1870. He became lieut. and capt. in 1873, and retired in 1881. Mr. Fraser married in 1877 Lucy Jane, only daughter of Major R. D. Fergusson, of Cassillis House, Ayrshire.

1st, or Royal Scots. Major Paterson, 2nd Batn., is about to retire on a pension of £250 a year, with the hon. rank of lieut.-col.

3rd Buffs, East Kent Regiment. Lieut. Retallack has resigned his probationary appointment for the Indian S.C., and is ordered to join the 2nd Batn., at Hong Kong.

4th King's Own. Capt. Sutherland, 1st Batn., has been pronounced by a medical board as unfit for further service, and is about to retire. It will be remembered that he met with a severe accident by being thrown from his horse and pitched on his head, while riding in the streets of Pietermaritzburg. From this accident Capt. Sutherland, who is now senior of his battalion, has never recovered.

5th Northumberland Fusiliers. Major Dyke, Lieuts. James, Caulfield, and Wilmot, 2nd Batn., and a draft of 108 men, leave England on the 4th prox. for India.

7th Royal Fusiliers. Lieut. Nicholson, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for one year, on a medical certificate.

12th Suffolk Regiment. Capt. Kennedy, 2nd Bat., has been selected for the Adjutancy of the 4th Bat., ordered to Ely by March 1, to assume duty there.

19th Yorkshire Regiment. The 1st Batn., at Halifax, N.S., has been placed under orders of readiness to proceed to Malta.

21st Royal Scots Fusiliers. The Queen has approved of Major MacSalmond, now deputy-assist.-adjt. and qrmr.-gen. for musketry in Scotland, being appointed deputy-assist.-adjt.-gen. at the School of Musketry, Hythe. The serjeants of the depôt held their annual ball on the 18th ult. After the first half of the programme had been gone through, the company adjourned to supper.

22nd Cheshire Regiment. Lieut. Maxwell, a probationer for the Indian S.C., has passed the higher-standard in Hindostanee.

24th South Wales Borderers. Capt. Willans, Lieuts. Kirkpatrick, Drury, and Field, and a draft of 277 men of the 2nd Batn., are under orders to embark for India on the 4th prox. Lieut. Caulfield, 2nd Batn., a probationer for the Indian S.C., has passed the higher-standard examination in Hindostanee.

35th Royal Sussex Regiment. Capt. Freeman has been appointed deputy-assist.-adjt.-gen. and qrmr.-gen., for duty as Assist.-Provost-Marshal in Egypt.

37th Hampshire Regiment. We understand that Major W. E. Gilbert, Deputy Chief Constable of Norfolk, late of this regiment, is a candidate for the appointment of Chief Constable of Somerset. Major Gilbert was for a long time adjt. of his regiment, and also adjt. of the Hampshire Militia from 1877 to 1882.

42nd Black Watch (Royal Highlanders). Lieut. Maxwell has been appointed staff capt. for military police duties in Egypt, with local and temporary rank of capt. in the Army whilst so employed.

45th Derbyshire Regiment (Sherwood Foresters). Lieut. Watts has resigned his probationary appointment for the Indian S.C., and is ordered home to rejoin head-quarters.

ROYAL MARINES.

Lieut.-Col. Hore, R.M.L.I., has joined the Chatham Division, on promotion, and has also been granted leave of absence from Jan. 30 to March 15.

Capt. and Adjt. R. Denny, R.M.L.I., has rejoined head-quarters, Chatham, from leave of absence.

Major H. Everitt, R.M.A., having applied to be retired, Capt. La Trobe Cockcraft becomes a major, and Lieut. and Assist. Gunnery Instructor T. R. Swinburne, a capt. Lieut. Swinburne, who has close on 12 years' service, has been nearly three years at the head of the Lieutenants' List, consequent on the changes which took place in the Royal Marine Forces, dated July 1, 1883.

Major W. H. Vallack Tom, of the Plymouth Division, Royal Marines, has been placed on the Retired List, at his own request.

Lieuts. Wolfe and Henderson, Chatham Division, have been ordered to join the Portsmouth Division on Feb. 1, for the purpose of undergoing a course of garrison instruction.

Capt. G. B. Dick, of the Plymouth Division of Royal Marines, embarked in the Himalaya on the 28th ult., to command detachment stationed at Bermuda.

The retirement of Lieut.-Col. Allnutt will promote Lieut.-Col. J. M. Moody, who has been on the recruiting service in London since July, 1880, his time having been extended three years.

56th Essex Regiment. Major Spencer sailed for Gibraltar on Wednesday in H.M.S. Himalaya.

72nd Seaforth Highlanders. At a recent examination at Parkhurst, Colour-Serjt. G. W. Anderson, Serjt. J. Middleton, Lance-Corpl. W. Wood, and Serjt. G. Sellex, A.H.C., were successful in obtaining 1st-class certificates of education.

75th Gordon Highlanders. Lieut. Stewart, whose services were recently placed at the disposal of the Egyptian Government, for duty with the Egyptian Army, has been attached to the 1st Brigade of that force, for active service, if necessary.

82nd South Lancashire Regiment. The orders for the embarkation of the regiment, now at Devonport, for conveyance to Malta, have been countermanded, the 1st Batn. 19th, from Halifax, Nova Scotia, proceeding to the Mediterranean in its place.

84th York and Lancaster Regiment. Lieut. Lynch-Blosse sailed for Bermuda on Wednesday, in charge of a draft of 63 men.

89th Royal Irish Fusiliers. The head-quarters and service companies sailed from Bombay on Sunday last, en route to England. The Times says:—"The 2nd Batn. of the Royal Irish Fusiliers has embarked at Bombay, and will be due at Devonport on Feb. 23. This battalion was relieved upon the Indian establishment by the 1st Batn. of the same regiment, and the circumstances are worthy of note as furnishing one of the first illustrations of the working of the new scheme, whereby the services of each soldier can be utilised as far as possible for the purposes of foreign service. Before it left Aldershot for India, in September, the 1st Batn. mustered over 1,000 rank and file, while the 2nd Batn. in India numbered about 600, exclusive of serjeants, trumpeters, and drummers, while the depôt was about 120 strong. The 1st Batn. embarked at a strength of 570 rank and file, the other 430 left behind consisting of men who had not three years to serve and of recruits under 20 years of age. Of the 600 soldiers constituting the 2nd Batn. in India, some 300 were men having but a short time to serve, while the remainder had three years or more to complete their colour service. This latter moiety at once joined the 1st Batn. on its arrival in India, bringing it fully up to its prescribed establishment of 820 rank and file, while the former came home with the head-quarters of the 2nd Batn., which will land in England at a strength of about 300 rank and file only, and many of these will at once join the Army Reserve. The detachment left at home by the 1st Batn. being, together with the local depôt, nearly 600 strong, will on joining the 2nd Batn. bring it up to its proper strength. Thus the relief will have been effected so as to keep at home those who have not long to serve and those who are not yet matured for life in India, while all in India who have yet some years to pass with the colours and are physically fit are retained in that country, thus effecting a considerable saving to the public, while no transfers or volunteering from other corps have had to be resorted to. Had these two battalions not been part of the same regiment, it would have been necessary to fetch home from India some 300 men who are fit and eligible for from three to five years' duty in that country, and, on the other hand, to send out a similar number, some of whom would have to be brought back after a stay of one or two years in India, while others would be young soldiers under the age of 20, and as yet unfit for a tropical residence. The advantages of the new system over the old are thus very considerable, and it is understood to be the intention of the authorities to relieve two of the three battalions coming home from India annually in the same way, the other battalion, which always returns from Aden, being dealt with somewhat differently, inasmuch as its relieving battalion on the foreign establishment would probably be sent to the Colonies. One of the next regiments for India is the 2nd Royal Irish, at Aldershot, which, in anticipation of its regular relief of the 1st Batn. in Bengal about the end of this year, has already sent out a draft of nearly 400 men, who will, of course, rejoin its ranks upon its arrival in the East."

95th Derbyshire Regiment (Sherwood Foresters). Major Bowles leaves for India on the 4th prox., in charge of a draft of 140 men, to join head-quarters.

98th North Staffordshire Regiment. Qrmr. Couch has been granted leave from India to England for eight months, on urgent private affairs.

100th Leinster Regiment (Royal Canadians). Major Prior, Capt. Thompson, and Lieuts. Tighe and Stoddart, and 145 men leave England on the 4th prox., for India, to join head-quarters.

103rd Royal Dublin Fusiliers. Capts. Cooper, O'Neill, MacGregor, and Leicester, and a draft of 116 men, sailed for Gibraltar on Wednesday in H.M.S. Himalaya.

Rifle Brigade. Majors Prideaux-Brune and Norcott, and Lieuts. Drummond and Mackenzie, and a draft 164 men, 1st Batn., are under orders of readiness to sail for India on the 4th proximo.

1st West India Regiment. The command fell vacant on Wednesday, on the expiration of Col. Smith's term of appointment.

Pay Department. The following paymasters, who have been ordered to India, have been posted to the battalions specified:—Capt. J. G. C. Robotham, 30th Foot; Capt. H. M. Caine, 2nd Batn. 2nd Foot; Capt. G. F. Thunder, 2nd Batn. 21st Foot; Capt. G. W. Furlong, 1st Batn. 25th Foot; Major J. G. Coppinger, 33rd Foot; Major G. H. Turner, 67th Foot; Capt. G. C. Fuller, 34th Foot; Capt. G. C. Irving, 9th Lancers; Capt. W. G. D. Russell, 99th Foot; Capt. C. R. Taaffe, 2nd Batn. 13th Foot; Capt. F. N. Woodall, 2nd Batn. 24th Foot; and Capt. Ward, 98th Foot.

Commissariat and Transport Staff. The services of Assist.-Comy.-Gen. A. S. Leonard, now serving in Egypt, have been placed at the disposal of the Government of that country, with a view to his acting on the Staff of the Egyptian Gendarmerie.

The Auxiliary Forces.

MILITIA.

The 7th Brig., South Irish Division, Royal Artillery (late Clare Militia) will be trained this year at Portsmouth or Gosport, commencing on May 5.

It is probable that the 3rd Batn. Dorsetshire Regiment (late Dorset Militia) will train at Portsmouth this year, for the purpose of being brigaded with the Regular troops.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

7th Middlesex, London Scottish Rifles. The annual winter inspection and distribution of prizes were held at Westminster Hall on Saturday evening. Gen. Sir Archibald Alison, K.C.B., on arriving with Lady Alison, proceeded to inspect the battalion, which was formed up in column in the hall; and subsequently Lieut.-Col. Lumsden, the commanding officer, in the course of his remarks, congratulated the corps on the fact of last year being the most prosperous in its history. They had attained the full maximum establishment of 804, and he had reason to believe that his application for an increase to 1,000 would soon be granted. The prizes were distributed by Lady Alison. At the close of the distribution, Sir Archibald Alison addressed the battalion. It afforded him the greatest pleasure, he said, to see there, in the capital of the British Empire, Scotland represented by a Volunteer battalion in such a state of discipline and efficiency as the London Scottish. Ever since its formation this battalion had maintained the same high character, and he trusted it would always retain it.

Until the 8th inst., when the report of the committee appointed at the meeting on the 7th ult. will be presented, nothing definite respecting the proposed Easter manœuvres will be known. The committee, which consists of 13 officers of metropolitan Volunteer corps, is now engaged in inquiries from the railway companies concerned whether they are willing to convey the Volunteers to the points suggested by the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, and, if so, upon what terms. An impression, however, prevails that there will this year be one more review on the large scale, and that the site will be either Brighton or Portsmouth.

The Gazettes.

London Amusements.

With this week, the English Opera Company terminate their short season at COVENT GARDEN. Their latest revival has been Balfe's opera of "Satanella," originally brought out at this theatre, Dec. 20, 1858, when Mr. William Harrison and Miss Louisa Pyne were the lessees. The cast on this occasion included, besides the managers, Miss Rebecca Isaacs, Mr. Weiss, Mr. George Honey, Mr. St. Albyn, and Mr. H. Corri. Balfe's flowing melodies, "The Glorious Vintage of Champagne" and "The Power of Love," have still a hold upon the public ear, as attested by the enthusiastic encores demanded, though the opera has not been heard in London for 15 years. Madame Rose Hersee, who now assumes the part of Satanella, sings the music most effectively. Miss Emily Parkinson was Lelia, Miss Helen Armstrong, Stella, and Mr. J. W. Turner, Mr. George Fox, and Mr. Charles Lyall represented Count Rupert, Braccacio, and Karl. "Faust" and "The Lily of Killarney" have been the other operas of the week.

Miss Mary Anderson, at the LYCEUM, has appeared as Clarice, the actress, in Mr. W. S. Gilbert's "Comedy and Tragedy," a powerful one-act drama, which provides the representative of the heroine with a rare opportunity of histrionic display. Since the first night, when nervousness marred her efforts, Miss Mary Anderson has greatly improved, and very impressive is her embodiment of the stage beauty who lures her persecuting admirer into a position which enables her husband to slay him in a duel. The strong situation, where the real emotions of the actress are mistaken for simulated grief and frenzy, would alone recommend this cleverly-constructed little piece to public favour. Miss Anderson is adequately supported by Mr. Barnes, as the libertine Duke d'Orleans, in whose Regency the action is supposed to take place, and by Mr. George Alexander, who plays the difficult part of the avenging husband.

Mr. Burnand's three-act burlesque drama of "Camaralzaman," originally intended to be the Christmas novelty, has been this week added to the GAIETY play-bill. Mr. Edward Terry and Miss E. Farren represent the prominent characters, and the piece has the advantage of calling into requisition the whole of the company. A burlesque of the same Arabian Nights' story, written by Mr. H. J. Byron, was produced at the Vaudeville in November, 1871, when Mr. Thomas Thorne was the Prince, Mr. David James the bad Djinn, and Miss Nelly Power the Princess Badowra.

At the ROYAL WESTMINSTER AQUARIUM military promenade concerts are now given, the programme being changed every evening.

The EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, will be closed in a fortnight, to allow of structural alterations, which are expected to be completed by Easter. In the meantime, Messrs. Maskelyne and Cooke will give their ingenious illusory entertainment at Edinburgh.

The Queen's Physician, Dr. Fairbank, has written strongly recommending LENTILLA, or TONIC DAILY FOOD. It cures indigestion, heartburn, constipation, liver and stomach complaints, &c., besides having such wondrous nourishing properties. Makes soups, porridge, biscuits, puddings, custards, &c. Tins, 1 lb., 1s 6d; ½ lb., 10d. Barrels, 28 lb., 30s; 14 lb., 16s. Of all Chemists. Proprietor, H. J. DEACON, Beckenham, Kent.

H.R.H. the DUKE of CAMBRIDGE, K.G.
CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEE.
OFFICE—40 CHARING CROSS, S.W.

This Asylum was opened in February, 1854, to provide a home for the widows of non-commissioned officers and privates of the Army of not less than 50 years of age.

There are 65 widows in the Asylum.

Each widow has a furnished room, and receives seven shillings weekly, besides a monthly allowance of two shillings and sixpence for coals.

The House is capable of containing 70 widows, and the Committee appeal to the public for funds to enable them to admit the additional number, the present subscriptions being insufficient.

The funded income of the charity yields only £930, with an additional £50 from the Princess Mary's Fund for Nurses, to meet an estimated expenditure of £3,000 per annum.

An annual subscription of half-a-guinea, or a donation of five guineas, entitles to one vote at each election, with the right of nominating a candidate.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 ERRATUM.—By a printer's error, the word "Tories" appeared in lieu of the word "Times," in the leading article on General Gordon's Trials, in last week's number of the "Army and Navy Gazette," January 26, 1884.

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1884.

ON a very agreeable, if not very appropriate occasion, the Adjutant-General of the Forces delivered to an audience, collected for a very different purpose, what may be described as an enthusiastic and exulting defence of that Military administration which has been the source of so much uneasiness, invective, and criticism. It is not to be expected that those who are in what the leading paper calls "the outer circle" will accept without challenge the accuracy of the description of the Army given to the Artist Volunteers, who were assembled to present a testimonial of regard to Sir F. Leighton, the retiring Colonel to whom they owe so much, without protest, comment, and more or less successful dissection. But for the present, the Adjutant-General, with all the artillery of official reports on his side, is in occupation of the field; and it will be difficult to dislodge him,—not, indeed, that he is impregnable, that he is not open to many damaging attacks, but that for the present he stands in the eyes of the country as the responsible administrator, who vouches for the complete efficiency of the Army. He not only does so with very great assurance and confidence, but he proclaims to the people of England that the Army is not only better than the Army of the Crimea and the Army of Wellington, but that it is better than any Army in the world, whether it be that which fought at Sadowa or Custozza, at Sedan or Gravelotte. It is on the present situation the Adjutant-General takes his stand, and from it he has opened a heavy fire of statistics on Sir Lintorn Simmons, M.P., in support of the skirmishers under the "old General," and the young leader of the light troops of the Times, which he had sent forward to clear the ground in front. On one point, Lord Wolseley made an admission which it was quite a relief to come across, in the midst of so many flowery adjectives. He admitted that the Army was short — in other words, that we wanted more men—although 33,000 recruits had come into the ranks within the year; and it was hinted that such increasing liabilities as the occupation of Egypt and the growing demands for troops in other places were the causes of the shortness which short service is especially intended to rectify, both in the First Line and in the Reserve. But if we contrast our establishments in 1873 with those of 1883, we do not think that any justification of the statement can be discovered. Indeed, the reverse would seem to be the case. Our Military Establishments in the Colonies have been reduced. Now, we venture to affirm that no persons in the whole of the Empire will have read the remarks of the Adjutant-General with more profound surprise than the officers actually in command, now serving with her Majesty's Army, at home and abroad; and we do not think it at all impossible that the illustrious person who is chief of the staff to Lord Hartington, and who is popularly regarded in the Army as Commander-in-Chief, may have experienced something of the same feeling, mingled, perhaps, with a little amused astonishment. These persons, however, do not belong to the favoured few composing what the Times calls the "inner circle," of which it is easy to guess the centre, of which the radii may be counted on the fingers of one's hand, projecting into the various seats of power of departments in the Temple of War at Pall Mall, and they may be all out of the way of the truth. If, laying aside Artillery and Cavalry, we were to commence with the officers in command of the battalions of the Household Brigade, and, taking the Colonels in command at home seriatim, asked their opinions, it would be found, we venture to assert, with very few exceptions, that these officers, whether of the old school or the new, would say that the present condition of their respective battalions was not satisfactory, and that they could not look forward with any confidence to next year or the year after for an improvement. "But," says the Adjutant-General, "that sort of thing is always going on; it was so when I joined the service; it was so in the Crimea." And the Times backs him up, and exclaims, "Why, even Wellington abused the soldiers who fought at Waterloo!" It is well known that the optimist views of Lord Wolseley are not entertained by many Generals and Colonels and Staff Officers now in the different commands throughout the United Kingdom and abroad; but it may be that all their fears and head-shakings are the results of inveterate prejudice, old-fogeyism, and of that tendency, in a conservative body like the Army, to revert to the past for standards of excellence, and to regard all change with distrust. Nevertheless, it would seem to us to be rather a dangerous principle to lay down that the warnings of experienced men should be rejected, because one sanguine and experienced man pooh-poohed them. In such a state of things, it seems to us absolutely necessary to have an inquiry by unprejudiced persons into the actual condition of the Army at home. It need not be very tedious or costly. It may be replied, that there is no need for such an inquiry, as the Adjutant-General's Office has full statistics; but the "outer circle" are full of facts, too, and it is to solve the opposition between these two, and to give the country reasonable satisfaction, that an inquiry would be useful. Lord Wolseley not only vindicates short service from all that has been said against it, but he will not admit that the recent changes which have operated favourably on the efficiency of the Army have not been in the direction of long service; and carrying the war into the enemy's country, he announces that any further changes which are likely to be made will be in the direction of short rather than long service. A demand for more money is shadowed forth, and it is pretty clear that if the country wishes to play on the short-service whistle, it will have to pay for it. The question is whether the piper gives value for the money.

It is strange that the scheme, on which the present Khedive set his heart some time ago, of restoring Darfour to a tributary, should not have attracted more attention here. As far back as March, 1883, the Khedive expressed to Dr. Russell, at Abdin, his desire to hand over the whole of the Soudan provinces to some Lieutenant-General or Governor, who would undertake to keep peace and order, and pay an annual tribute to Cairo; and it was even suggested that Tubeer Pasha, who had conquered Darfour, should be entrusted with the office; but, somehow or other, the plan fell to the ground, one objection being that the slave-trade would almost certainly be revived. Shakour, the ruler of Darfour, is, we are told, to give guarantees or make promises that the slave-trade shall be abolished; but unless force be placed at his disposal or employed from some external source to compel the observance of his vows, it will be strange, indeed, if Darfour does not become, what it was, a very active slave-market; and by a curious irony of fate, it will be held as a fact by the natives that England has directly established that very trade in slaves with the suppression of which her efforts and her name have been hitherto identified.

We understand it is probable the Volunteers will accept the view of the War Office with regard to the reviews on Easter Monday, though there are some recalcitrants; and the elder leaders of the movement are by no means pleased with the active intervention of the authorities, of which the outward and visible sign was the presence of the General Commanding the Home District at their meeting.

Colonel H. J. Buchanan is indeed "a child of fortune" in being moved direct from Dover to Dublin without a day of that half-pay on which 56 colonels, with somewhat similar services to himself, are now languishing.

The Ministry, it seems, has declined to accept the responsibility of and finding the money necessary to give effect to the recommendations of Lord Carnarvon's Royal Commission on the fortification of our principal coaling stations abroad, such as Hong Kong, Trincomalee, and Singapore. These ports will therefore continue defenceless, either to paralyse the operations of our Navy in the event of our being involved in a maritime war, or to afford safe refuges and coal supplies for an enemy's fleet.

We understand that in consequence of the number of vacancies among subalterns of the Line, an increased entry into Sandhurst may be looked for at the next two examinations.

A new edition of the Regulations and Orders for the Canadian Militia has recently been published, with the approval of his Excellency the Governor-General in Council. It embraces a wide range of subjects, and forms a useful compendium of necessary information for all who are brought under the operations of the provisions of the Militia law. Although no radical changes appear to have been made in the system at present existing in the Dominion, many details have been added which will increase the efficiency of the service. Under the heads of military instruction, it provides that candidates for commissions and certificates will be required to qualify by a course of study at one of the military schools. Certificates will be issued for "long," "short," and "special" courses. The two former will comprise two grades each,—A and B, for officers and non-commissioned officers respectively,—each grade consisting of two classes. The "special" course is restricted to officers, and will be divided into two classes. Where old certificates are held by officers, they will be recognised, but in cases of promotion the new regulations must be complied with. It is not intended that the above regulations should apply to Manitoba, as there is at present no military school established in that province.

There has been some commotion in the Khyber. Abdulla Mir Most, an influential Khyber headman, was shot in a blood feud. He was long our chief enemy in those parts, but since 1879 has been a steady friend in return for a subsidy given to his tribe, the Kuki Kheyls, for keeping the pass open. A newsletter from Cabul in a Lahore paper mentions that the Ameer is repairing the Shere Ali's breechloading cannon factory, which has been in ruins since the war.

In order to make up the establishment of the Royal Engineers, a larger number of commissions than usual are, likely to be offered to Cadets passing out of the Royal Military Academy next term.

We understand that the Home Government, while willing to considerably reduce the garrison of Ceylon, decline to make a reduction in the charge per head.

The officers of the Army are to be congratulated on the tribute paid to their excellence in the speech delivered by the Adjutant-General of the Forces this day week. They have, as a body, made an extraordinary advance, it would seem, in a comparatively short period. Certainly, Lord Wolseley has made a complete apology for the words attributed to Sir Garnet Joseph Wolseley not so very long ago. It is pleasant to know that the praise is, on the whole, well deserved, quite as much so, as the censure implied formerly, was unjust. Whatever defects may be found henceforth in the working of the system, it will not lie in the mouths of its authors to say that the blame is to be laid at the door of the officers of the Army who neglected their work, and who did not seek honestly and zealously to carry out their duties. The criticism applied to the course of examination at Sandhurst, and the new course generally, may be well justified, but it will not much affect the programme of the Dominies who have the matter in hand. And the authorities can plead, in justification of their concession to this tyranny, that there is no difficulty in finding officers to submit to it, and even to pass the ordeal successfully. The comparative values of subjects must always be a matter more or less indeterminate, and men will forward different judgments according to their own views. The main object of the examination is to secure efficiency and proficiency. The results were only to be judged of by experience.

Her Majesty has been pleased to approve the appointment of Major-General H. Rowlands to command the Bangalore Division of the Madras Army, in succession to Lieutenant-General W. Payn, whose term of appointment expires on April 21.

We have reason to believe that the suggestion in last week's paper that Sir Partick McDougall wrote the letter over the signature of "An Old General Officer," in the Morning Post, was not correct.

It is rather remarkable that the Government should allow Perim to become an important coaling station of a private company, and yet take no steps to fortify it. Such a policy would unquestionably result in the loss of the island in case of our becoming involved in a long maritime war. It surely is the height of folly to run such a risk.

The War Office has apparently abandoned all idea of raising the new Militia battalions, of which, under Lord Cardwell's scheme, there were to have been two for each territorial regiment. The new official Army List shows total blanks in the column formerly headed, "4th Battalion proposed to be raised." The King's Own Borderers have no Militia battalion attached. Other regiments have but one battalion. We commend these facts to those who continue to assert that the condition of the Army is eminently satisfactory.

The Australian and New Zealand Governments have applied, we understand, for the services of a number of non-commissioned officers of the Royal Engineers, for employment as instructors in submarine mining, in connection with the defence of the principal Colonial seaports, and the War Office has decided that the request shall be granted. The pay for these non-commissioned officers will, of course, be provided from Colonial funds.

Thirty non-commissioned officers and men of the Submarine Mining Companies, Royal Engineers, are to proceed to India, for employment in connection with the coast defences of Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras. The men will act as instructors to a corps of native submarine miners which is to be formed.

For reasons which may be appreciated by some of our readers, and which would be by all were they acquainted with the facts, we have not thought it expedient to notice at length, in any critical fashion, a pamphlet entitled, "Our Military Position: a Note of Warning," by Captain C. W. White, which has rapidly reached its fourth edition. But the merits of the work may be judged of by the fact that it has run through three editions in a very short time, chiefly amongst soldiers, and that it has secured for the author an expression of the approbation of many of the most eminent military authorities in the country not belonging to the "inner circle," but including Field-Marshals and General Officers, as well as officers now actually in command at home. The inferences which the author draws are based upon some very cogent reasoning, and on very hard facts, the general result being to support the contention that recent attempts to reorganise have not produced an army for home defence or foreign service on which the country can rely with confidence.

The War Office, with the view to encourage rifle practice among the troops, intend to attach a rifle gallery in connection with the canteens at each of the principal military stations, fitted with Morris's shooting apparatus, which will afford the troops frequent opportunities of rifle practice. The Royal Engineer Department will select the sites for the proposed galleries.

The Navy.

ADMIRALTY, January 25, 1884.

Commissioned Boatmen—Charles Kinsman, to be chief boatman, Coverack, vice E. Ward, removed on promotion; William C. Alexander, St. Nicholas, to be chief boatman, East Swale, vice Jenkins, promoted.

Surgeons and Agents—Mr. Robert Laidlaw, at Elie, vice Kennedy; Mr. Colin McCallum, at Anstruther.

Achilles, Capt. Morant, has arrived at Gibraltar, where she will await the arrival of Capt. Buller, who has been appointed to the command of the vessel, and who proceeds to the Mediterranean in the Himalaya. The Achilles will also tranship the seamen and marine drafts taking passage in the trooper for the Channel Squadron.

Alexandra, Capt. Rawson, C.B., flagship of Vice-Admiral Lord John Hay, was at Malta up to Jan. 22, with the Inflexible, Superb, Temeraire, Monarch, Iris, Hecla, Falcon, Cruiser, Condor, Cockatrice, and Helicon. A correspondent of the Western Morning News, writing from Valetta on Jan. 22, says:—"For the last few days we have been in a state of excitement at the probability of a brush with our neighbours the French. The ships are being got ready with all despatch for any eventuality. The Temeraire arrived here last evening from Corfu, having done the distance—370 miles—in less than 30 hours, or at a speed of nearly 13 knots. She is one of the best, if not the best steamer on the station, and it is a pity that we have not more of the same class. The Monarch's defects, caused by striking on an unknown rock at the entrance to the harbour, are nearly completed, and she is expected to be undocked on Thursday next. The Superb will not be ready until the end of April, as her machinery was found to be in a very bad state, necessitating considerably more work than was at first contemplated. The Inflexible will be in hand for another month, but she can be got ready for sea in much less time if necessary. The Iris is undergoing repairs and alterations; the Carysfort has left for Naples to pick up Gen. Gordon and staff, and will probably take them to Suakim; and there is a rumour that the Helicon is to be held in readiness to take the Commander-in-Chief to Egypt—probably to the same place. The flagship and the Monarch are to be ready in a few days, and will probably go to Alexandria."

Canada, Capt. Durrant, was at Antigua on Jan. 4. A correspondent of the Western Morning News says:—"Capt. Durrant returned to the ship on the 2nd inst. from a week's visit to Government House. Our mail also arrived, and I need scarcely say that it was exceedingly welcome, after being nearly a month without one. Jan. 3 was another great day. Our athletic sports came off in the dockyard; each event was capitally contested, and the sports were a decided success. The chief event was the 'Officers' Derby,' ridden on donkeys. Exceedingly amusing in itself, it was rendered additionally attractive by the fact that Prince George of Wales was among the competitors. All the 'jockeys' were attired in the most comical costumes, and the greatest merriment was occasioned amongst the spectators. Mr. W. G. E. Ruck-Keene, midshipman, was the winner of the 'Derby,' with Mr. W. C. Fincham, engineer, second, and Prince George third. A 100-yards flat race resulted in a dead heat between Lieuts. Abdy and Currey." The Canada left St. Kitt's with the squadron under the command of Vice-Admiral Sir John Commerell on Jan. 12, to visit St. John's and St. Lucia and other West India Islands.

Himalaya, Capt. Palliser, arrived at Portsmouth from Plymouth, with naval supernumeraries for the Channel Squadron and the West Indian and North American stations. In addition to further blue-jackets, she embarked a number of military details. She also embarked Capt. Buller, C.B., who has been appointed to the command of the Achilles, and left on Thursday for the Mediterranean.

Minotaur, Capt. Fellowes, flagship of Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, with the remainder of the Channel Squadron in company, was at Palmas Bay, Sardinia, on Jan. 30.

Monarch, Capt. Bedford, would leave Malta for Syracuse on Feb. 2.

Northampton, Capt. Digby, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir John Commerell, V.C., was at St. Kitt's on Jan. 11. The Foam was at Port-au-Prince on Jan. 2, and ordered to return to Port Royal. The Mallard was at Port Royal on Jan. 9, and was preparing for sea. The Northampton, with the squadron in company, was at Barbadoes on Jan. 31.

Sphinx, Com. Crauford Caffin, was at Trinkabat on Jan. 30, when she returned the fire of the rebels surrounding that port, and completely silenced it.

Swiftsure, Capt. Aitchison, flagship of Rear-Admiral Lyons, was at Callao on Dec. 23, with the Satellite, Mutine, and Kingfisher; would leave Callao on Dec. 31 for annual cruise, proceeding south to Pisco, Arica, Iquique, Coquimbo, and Valparaiso. The arrival of the Squadron at Arica on Jan. 17 has since been reported. The Constance was at Callao, and would accompany the Squadron to Arica, and proceed thence to Honolulu and Vancouver. The Sappho was at Callao, and would accompany Squadron to Arica, and then return to Callao. The Heroine was at Vancouver as senior officer's ship, and will meet the Constance at Honolulu at the end of February, and then come on to Callao. The Sylvia was at Sandy Point on Nov. 18, surveying in the Straits of Magellan. The correspondent of a contemporary, writing from Callao, on Dec. 24, says:—"The Swiftsure and Sappho arrived at Panama on Nov. 19, the Swiftsure anchoring at Taboga, and the Sappho at Panama. Coaling was commenced on board the flagship next day, but in consequence of a strike among the labourers great delay was caused in this work, and a week was occupied in getting 120 tons on board. The coals were inferior in quality, and at the week's end it was determined not to ship any more, there being sufficient on board to take the ship to Callao. The divers have been actively employed in surveying and recoppering the ship's bottom. About one-third of the copper was found in a very bad state, and some specimens of it have been forwarded to the Admiralty. Upwards of a thousand sheets of copper will be needed to replace those which have to be removed, and as under the most favourable circumstances the divers cannot fix more than six or eight sheets a day, it will be seen that their task is one requiring the exercise of great patience. Corrosive action has set in on the sheets of copper which were put on at Esquimault, and the experiment is being tried, under the direction of Mr. Spalding, engineer of the ship, of placing zinc slabs on the copper, in order, if possible, to stop the corrosive action. The Swiftsure left the Island of Taboga on Dec. 3, and proceeded to Panama. On loosening sails on our arrival at Panama, an able seaman named Arthur Joliffe nearly lost his life. While lying out on the foretopsailyard he fell, striking the topmast studsail-boom in his fall, and then tumbled headlong into the sea. He was picked up partially stunned, but beyond a few bruises and a severe shaking he escaped unhurt. On Dec. 4, the Haytian arrived at Colon with the ship's company of the Liffey and our new gunnery lieutenant. They were transferred across the isthmus, and joined the ship on the same evening. On the 7th the Wye also arrived at Colon with ninety supernumeraries for us, and packages. The flagship left Panama for Callao on Dec. 9, leaving the Sappho behind to pick up stray packages, and so forth. Strong head-winds were experienced during the trip, and the ship steamed the whole distance to Callao. This is the longest distance that has been run under steam at one time during the commission. We arrived here on Dec. 18, and found the Constance, Satellite, Mutine, and Kingfisher here, as well as two French gunboats and an American corvette. A disturbance occurred ashore on Dec. 13 between some men of the Constance, who were returning from leave, and a number of civilians. The Vigilantes interfered, something like a free-fight followed, and severe blows were struck. About 40 of the Blue-jackets were locked up, and on Capt. Doughty, of the Constance, going ashore to make inquiries into the matter he was also arrested and placed in durance vile. Matters, however, were shortly put right by the arrival of Capt. Theobald, of the Satellite, and all the men were released. So much excitement, however, continued to prevail on shore that it was deemed advisable to curtail the men's leave. The Sappho arrived here on the night of the 21st from Panama. The French flagship Montcalm arrived on the same day, 48 days from Tahiti, having experienced very heavy weather during her cruise.

Tyne, Com. Cochrane, arrived at St. Vincent, Cape Verd on Jan. 26, and was to leave on the 27th for Gibraltar.

Valorous, Capt. the Hon. R. Hare, has proceeded to sea from Plymouth, under sealed orders.

Palma, Majorca, Thursday, January 24.

The Channel Squadron is once more in Mediterranean waters, and we are being treated to ideal Mediterranean weather. When we left Gibraltar last Tuesday there was a strong easterly wind blowing, but soon after passing through the Straits it went down, and it has been beautifully fine ever since, with a clear sky, light winds, and a smooth sea. We got under weigh at 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, the 15th, the Minotaur cast off from the Mole, and as soon as she had cleared the end of it, we formed astern of her in single column line ahead. It must have been a very pretty sight, as viewed by spectators on the Rock. After passing Europa Point we assumed our usual formation of columns of divisions line ahead. The Serapis overtook and passed us during the first watch. The next two days we had steam tactics and our usual evening drills, and on Friday we fired away the whole of this quarter's allowance of ammunition. We did not spread for practice, but formed single column line ahead, and, after dropping a line of targets, steamed up and down, firing at them as we passed. After firing, we remained stopped all the afternoon, as the Admiral did not want to get in till the next morning. We proceeded again at slow speed at 8 p.m., and arrived here a little after 8 o'clock on Saturday morning. As we approached the bay in columns of divisions line ahead, the divisions closed to 2¼ cables, and we came to in that formation. The Forward arrived just after us, with mails from Gibraltar; there was also an overland mail waiting for us. The communication between this place and England, viâ Barcelona, is very good; we got London daily papers only three days old. On Monday we manned and armed boats from the booms, and have since fired away the boats' guns' ammunition, and exploded mines, &c., for the quarter. Our stay here, though short, has been enjoyable. The town is well built, and remarkably clean; there is a grand old cathedral, and several churches which are well worth a visit, besides a number of other fine old buildings, and there are several places of interest a little way out in the country to which excursions can be made. There is a good club, which the members very kindly invited us to make use of. The opera is good, and performances have been given every evening, "Fra Diavolo," "Lucia," and "Dinorah" being the operas produced. The prima donna is an American lady named Miss Ella Russell, and she appears to be a great favourite, judging from the enthusiastic way she was received on Monday night, when she had a benefit. A great many officers of the Squadron have attended the opera every night; both the Admirals were there last night, when "Dinorah" was given. A band composed of a selection of men from the different ships played in the Almaida on Tuesday afternoon. There was a great gathering of promenaders out to listen, and they seemed to appreciate it highly. Special and privilege leave has been given as usual, and general leave till sunset. We leave for Palmas Bay, Sardinia, this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Admiral made a signal the other day that, if there was no alteration in the programme of movements already published, the Squadron regatta would take place at Terranova. The following programme and postal arrangements will be of service to those having friends on board the Channel Squadron:—

Sir,—In connection with your paragraph announcing changes to be made in the Generals' List of the Royal Marines, may I ask what are the "proposed changes"? No one that I have met seems to know, though expectations are raised. A few who may benefit are probably in the secret, but the corps at large is ignorant of the intentions of the few who seem to sway the destinies of the corps. If you could throw any light upon the proceedings in dark places, for the information of the corps in general, you would confer a benefit on the service.—I am, &c.,

CALPE.

Thomas Laffey, bandsman, George W. Howard, barber, James Richards, ship's corporal, 1st class, Duke of Wellington; John Courtnell, gunner's mate, Excellent; Henry S. Andrews, bandsman, Edward Perkins, private, R.M.L.I., Thomas John Willis, signalman, Royal Adelaide; Henry C. Keightley, naval schoolmaster, Frederick Angel, gunner's mate, Impregnable; Charles Carter, acting serjeant, Valiant; Richard Attrill, chief engineer, R.A., Alexandra; John Armstrong, serjeant, R.M.A., Hibernia; John Thomas Tozer, gunner's mate, Monarch, Charles Gear, sailmaker's mate, Condor; Henry Poynter, sailmaker, Briton; Thomas Tozer, acting chief boatswain's mate, Victor Emanuel; Bernard Burke, chief boatman in charge, Alfred Waterman, Frederick Bishop, Thomas W. J. Johns, Thomas Gill, boatmen, and George W. Haggis, commissioned boatman, of the Coastguard, have been awarded the medal for long service and good conduct.

SPECTACLES v. BLINDNESS.—Imperfectly adapted Spectacles are the cause of most cases of blindness and defective vision. Mr. H. Laurance, F.S.S., Oculist Optician, 1a Old Bond Street (late 39), has made the adaptation of spectacles his especial and sole study for upwards of thirty years. NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS, Etc.

GLENALMOND.—The list is not yet published.
TOWER.—Your information is correct.
WARRINGTON.—Both took part.

The Phaeton went out to Spithead on Tuesday morning, for a preliminary trial of her machinery, under the officers of the Steam Reserve. She also tried her turning-power. She made her official six-hours' full-power trial on Thursday.

An order has been received at Devonport Dockyard, to the effect that the Tamar, troopship, is to be ready for sea in October.

Preparations are being made at Sheerness Dockyard for the dismantling and paying-off of the following ships, on their arrival from foreign service:—The Comus, screw corvette, Capt. James East, from the Pacific station; the Rambler, composite gun-vessel, from the South-East Coast of America; and the Kestrel, composite gun-vessel, from the China station. The Comus, Rambler, and Kestrel will afterwards be placed in the Medway Steam Reserve.

DEATH.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—Though it is impossible, in this climate of changing temperature, to prevent ill-health altogether, yet its form and frequency may be much mitigated by the early adoption of remedial measures. When hoarseness, cough, thick breathing, and the attending slight fever indicate irritation of the throat or chest, Holloway's Ointment should be rubbed upon these parts without delay, and his Pills taken in appropriate doses, to promote its curative action. No catarrhs or sore throats can resist these remedies. Printed directions envelope every package of Holloway's medicaments, which are suited to all ages and conditions, and to every ordinary disease to which humanity is liable.

ROCHESTER HOUSE, EALING, W.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

At the late Examination held on September 19 and 20, Major DE THOREN and Major MORGAN have fully maintained their former good repute for passing candidates. They sent up three and passed two,—

Mr. H. G. Morgan,
Mr. W. S. Carey.

At this establishment the classes are small, and the pupils receive a great deal of individual attention, which enables them the easier to grasp the subject.

Major DE THOREN has had great experience as a Military Instructor and also with Militia Officers.

Major MORGAN has passed the Staff College, and is the author of "Summary of Law" and "Summary of Tactics."

Apply to Major DE THOREN, Bellefield, Jersey.

ARMY EXAMINATIONS.—Messrs. LEIFCHILD, B.A., HICKSON, and OWEN, B.A., RECEIVE a LIMITED NUMBER of PUPILS at the Terrace, Hampton Court. There are seven Tutors (six Resident), to 20 PUPILS, hence small classes (average three in a class), and great individual attention.—Head of Military Department, Captain GREENE.

ARMY and MILITIA.

The ABBEY, ABINGDON, BERKSHIRE.

No Class exceeds five Students. A Special Course precedes each Examination.

At the last Examination (September, 1883), five out of eight Competitors obtained Commissions. Places taken:—3rd, 17th, 38th, 50th (first attempt), 94th (Cavalry Commission).

For further particulars, apply to

MILITARY EDUCATION, GERMANY.—Colonel BERDOE WILKINSON, late R.E., formerly in charge of the Ordnance Survey in Ireland, and Lieutenant-Colonel WILKINSON SHAW, M.A. (Staff College), late Garrison-Instructor at Aldershot, prepare Candidates for Sandhurst and Woolwich, and for Line Commissions through the Militia.

At the five Militia Competitions which have taken place since September 1, 1881, Colonel WILKINSON and Lieutenant-Colonel SHAW have secured for their Pupils THIRTY-EIGHT COMMISSIONS, although they have only Prepared and sent up a very Limited Number of Candidates. A list of successful Pupils, showing the high places taken by them, will be furnished on application.

At the Militia Literary Examinations held during the same period, a Number of Pupils have also passed; in this Competition the FIRST PLACE was taken in April last by Lieutenant Lord Skelmersdale, and the SECOND PLACE in the recent October Examination by the only candidate sent up, Lieutenant the Honourable Victor A. Pelham.

The results of the last WOOLWICH and SANDHURST EXAMINATIONS have also added to the general score, which now amounts to SEVENTY-SEVEN SUCCESSES, obtained by Pupils since September 1, 1881.

Address, DARMSTADT, GERMANY.

LIEUTENANTS of MILITIA desirous of competing for Line Commissions can be received by the Rev. WALTER BAKER, M.A., at Batcombe Rectory, Evercreech, Bath. They will be thoroughly prepared in all Military Subjects by two Officers who for several years past have been engaged with distinguished success in this special work.

Great individual attention is secured, both Instructors are resident and give their whole time, very few Pupils are taken, and steady work is insisted on. Since the introduction of the Military Competitive, out of Forty-four Lieutenants of Militia sent up, Twenty-seven have been successful, several taking high places in the list.

A Large Staff of Experienced Tutors, all resident, assist in preparing for the Qualifying Examinations, and for the Sandhurst and Woolwich Competitions.

References to parents of pupils successful at all Examinations, INCLUDING SANDHURST and MILITIA COMPETITIVE in 1882 and 1883. All sent up for the last Militia Qualifying Examination passed.

THE MOUNTED SERVICE BOOT.—PATENT.

A COMPLETELY NEW and USEFUL INVENTION. By a CAVALRY OFFICER.

It is equally suitable for riding or walking, and consists of an upper and lower part, which, when adjusted by the peculiar arrangement of the spur, forms a complete riding boot, and at the same time the comfort of a boot and gaiter for walking is ensured. The lower part can be worn also as an ordinary walking boot. ECONOMY, COMFORT, and PORTABILITY.

Specially recommended to all Officers and Sportsmen going Abroad.

OROIDE GOLD JEWELLERY (REGD.)

"Recommends itself not alone to those of limited means, but to the wealthy, who, when frequenting large gatherings, whether at racecourses, theatres, public meetings, or even on that sacred thoroughfare, the king's highway, have known what it is to be robbed of their valuables."

OROIDE GOLD WATCHES,
Accurate timekeepers, 21s to 50s, safe and free per post (registered).
The "SERVICE" KEYLESS WATCH,
Open face, jewelled in eight holes, Two Guineas, post free.

"The watches of this patent are in no respect different from gold ones. The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose." OROIDE GOLD SCARF PINS, 2s 6d to 5s, post free.

"The author of this volume having been engaged for many years in preparing candidates for the different examinations into which navigation enters, has felt the want of a text-book, embracing all that the different examining boards embody under that head, and has endeavoured, and we think successfully, to supply that want by the present treatise. To the student this work will be found most useful; the chapters are well arranged, the exercises at the end of each chapter are pertinent to the preceding text, and require the student to digest the text in order to answer them satisfactorily."—Nature.

THE PARCELS POST and the DELIVERY of TEA.

THE PARCELS POST and the DISTRIBUTION of TEA to every place where there is a Post-Office in the United Kingdom.

THE PARCELS POST.—TEA of the highest excellence (as supplied to Dukes, Earls, Barons, and the County Families of England), sent free by Parcels Post in quantities of 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb., to any postal address in the United Kingdom, on receipt of a remittance for the price of the Tea and 3d.

THUS 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be sent to any address free, by post, on receipt of 8s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Half-Crown Tea can be sent free of post on receipt of 15s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea can be sent free of post on receipt of 15s 3d.

THE POSTAL LIMIT of 7 lb. will only really cover 6 lb. of Tea, as the weight of paper and twine has to be deducted, so that COOPER COOPER and CO. will send 6 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea free of post for 18s 3d, or 6 lb. of Two-and-Sixpenny Tea free of post for 15s 3d, or 6 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea free of post for 12s 3d.

PACKAGES containing 12 lb., 20 lb., 60 lb., or 100 lb. of TEA will be sent to any railway station in the United Kingdom absolutely free of carriage on receipt of remittance for the value of the Tea.

THE PARCELS POST.—4 lb., 5 lb., or 6 lb. of TEA will be delivered free of charge at your own houses by the postman, for 3d in addition to the cost of the tea.

THUS 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA will be delivered free at your own house for a remittance of 8s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea will be delivered free at your own door for a Post-Office Order for 10s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea will be sent free to your own homes for a cheque for 12s 3d.

THE PARCELS POST.—4 lb., 5 lb., or 6 lb. of THREE-SHILLING TEA despatched to any part of England, Wales, Scotland, or Ireland, by post for 3d in addition to the price of the Tea.

THUS 4 lb. of THREE-SHILLING TEA can be sent to the remotest address on receipt of remittance for 12s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea will be forwarded to any place where letters are delivered, postage paid, for 15s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea will be sent to any address in any postal district in these islands for 18s 3d.

TEAS of all descriptions on COOPER COOPER and CO.'S LIST, posted in parcels containing 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb. each by parcels post to any part of England, Wales, Ireland, or Scotland, in exchange for cash (in registered envelope). Post-Office Orders, cheques, postal orders, or stamps for the value of the tea, and 3d extra.

FOR example, a Package containing 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be sent to any place in the United Kingdom in exchange for 8s 3d in cash, enclosed in a registered envelope, and addressed to any of COOPER COOPER and CO.'S establishments in London.

OR, a Parcel containing 6 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be delivered by parcels post, carriage free, by remitting a Post-Office Order for 12s 3d.

OR, 5 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA will be despatched, free of post, for a postal order for 10s, and three penny postage stamps.

THUS, in the same manner, THREE-SHILLING TEA in parcels to the value of 12s 3d, 15s 3d, and 18s 3d each, containing respectively 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb. of tea, will be sent on receipt of postal orders, cheques, or cash for the several amounts.

CO-OPERATION. — COOPER COOPER and CO. also invite attention to the new System of Co-operation in the purchase of Tea by persons living in the country through the medium of the Parcels Post.

CO-OPERATION.—Thus, as COOPER COOPER and CO. are enabled to send packages containing 6 lb. of any of the Choice TEAS on their List to any place in the United Kingdom for 3d, it follows that if six families in a village are willing to club together, each can have a pound of tea sent for one halfpenny.

CO-OPERATION.—Or, as two parcels containing 6 lb. each can be sent for 6d, six families would be enabled, by joining together in one remittance, to order 2 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA each, at a cost of one penny only, in addition to the price of the tea.

CO-OPERATION.—This system will apply to every kind of TEA offered for Sale by COOPER COOPER and CO., and if followed out will practically enable them to place before customers in every county town and village in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, in the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man, in the Hebrides, and the Orkneys, Tea of the same choice kinds as sold in their various Establishments in London, at the same prices, with the addition of the nominal sum of one halfpenny a pound.

ON December 22 last we wrote as follows:—"In the present instance, matters are assuming such a serious aspect in Egypt that, try as it may, the Government cannot close its eyes to facts, but will be compelled, by the voice of reason, shortly to take vigorous action for the protection of British interests. It is all well and good for us to raise our hands, turn our heads and say, 'It is your affair.' We have voluntarily undertaken a responsibility, and we cannot now withdraw from our position. These things should have been thought of before the decision was arrived at to occupy Egypt. We took the decisive step, and we shall be obliged to abide by the consequences of our acts. Notwithstanding the War-Office contradiction, it is obvious that the Army of Occupation must be reinforced; in fact, nowhere is the necessity for an augmentation of the force at General Stephenson's command more fully recognised than within the walls of the War Office itself, where the utmost is being done to ascertain how many men we could spare, and in what space of time we could have them ready. In Ministerial circles, attempts are being made to underrate the difficulties which the disaster to Hicks Pasha's army has created. Every thinking soldier sees how hopeless the task is which Baker Pasha is undertaking. And yet, if the Egyptian forces meet with further reverses, there will be nothing for it but for the British Government to send out not a few battalions only, but something very like an army corps to Egypt. It is simply a case now of the stitch in time. The despatch of a few battalions to Cairo at this juncture would save endless trouble and expense hereafter, but with that blindness and perversity which on all occasions mark the actions of Liberal Cabinets, we are putting off the evil day, hoping that it may not come, or that if it comes, something will have turned up in the meantime to ease the way. Experience shows, however, that such a policy only leads to disappointment. The evil day is bound to come, and when it does, the difficulties of our task will be increased tenfold by vacillation and want of proper forethought. That reinforcements will have to be sent to Egypt, none but the blindest partisans of the Government would care to deny. Then surely the wisest plan would be for those in authority manfully to face the exigency, and push on their preparations, in case the emergency should suddenly arise; not to do as they, apparently, wish to do,—lead people to suppose that matters will right themselves, when it is only too evident that each day adds to the complexity of affairs. It may suit the purposes of a tottering Ministry to think that the dangers of the situation are exaggerated. It is, no doubt, a serious shock to the Cabinet to feel that all its calculations as to the forthcoming Budget stand a chance of being upset. Those responsible for the government of the country have, however, a duty to perform which is higher than any obligations of a Party character. This Egyptian fiasco is one of their own creation, and the only course open to them is to face the danger boldly." Our remarks may be read with interest now, seeing that our anticipations have, unfortunately, been so fully confirmed. No one can regret now more than the Members of the Cabinet do, that prompt measures were not adopted to uphold the honour of the British nation, when the news arrived of the fate of Hicks Pasha's Army.

THE Revised Regulations "respecting examinations for admission to the Royal Military College, and for first appointments therefrom to the Army," just issued with General Order 11 of 1884, though in the main differing but slightly from the Regulations previously in force, contain one or two alterations of an important and satisfactory nature. The chief alterations refer to the subjects of examination for admission to the College. As regards the "Preliminary Examination," we find that, until the autumn of 1885, there will be no alteration, but after that date an additional section will be added to the mathematical portion of the examination, viz., "Algebra, up to and including simple equations." And another alteration, or rather addition, to this part of the Regulations, is the acceptance, in lieu of the "Preliminary Examination," of the "First University Examination in Arts or in Engineering at the Royal University of Ireland," and the "Examination for a Degree, or the 'Preliminary Examination' of the Victoria University, Manchester," in addition to the University examinations previously allowable. As regards the "Further Examination," until the end of the year 1884 there will be no alteration whatever, but after that several alterations will come into force. In the first place, whereas it is now only compulsory on the candidates to take up two subjects, and permissible to take up four, out of a total of ten subjects named, and at the same time left entirely to the candidate to choose in which subjects he shall be examined, in 1885 it will be compulsory on each candidate to take up six subjects out of twelve named, and permissible to take up one more, if he chooses. Of the six subjects which must be taken up, three are absolutely compulsory, viz., English Composition, Free-hand Drawing, and Geometrical Drawing, for each of which the maximum number of marks is 500; and the remaining three subjects must be selected from the following four subjects, viz., Mathematics, Latin, French, and German, for each of which the maximum number of marks is 3,000. Consequently, it becomes absolutely compulsory to take up either French or German. One subject more will be admitted, and may be chosen from any of the subjects remaining after the compulsory six have been selected. One new subject only has been added to the list, viz., "Higher Mathematics, including analytical geometry, conic sections, differential calculus, statics, and dynamics," and this finds a place amongst the purely optional subjects. All the old subjects remain without alteration, with the exception of No. 2, which at present includes English Composition, English Literature, and English History. In the new list of subjects, this has been split up into two distinct subjects, viz., "English History" and "English Composition." For some unexplained reason, "English Literature" has been left out. But it may, perhaps, be only a clerical error, made in dividing up the compound subject No. 2 of the old list. Thus it will be seen that, with the single exception just named, nothing has been omitted from the new list which found a place in the old. On the other hand, one entirely new subject (higher mathematics) has been added. The range of one subject, English History, has been enlarged, and now consists of two portions, viz., "One paper general," and "One paper limited to a fixed period, of which notice will be given." The latter portion only of the subject was included in the old list of subjects. Again, the examination as a whole will, in the future, extend over a much larger area in each individual case. It is especially gratifying to find that, at least, one modern language (either French or German) will become compulsory, as this very point was advocated in our columns some time ago. There is only one more alteration in the "Regulations" which calls for special notice, and that is the addition of a new paragraph (32), which lays down distinctly the amount of contributions a cadet is likely to be called upon to pay, in addition to the regulated annual subscription. This is a piece of information which it is most desirable that parents should be in possession of, as it enables them to calculate pretty accurately what will be the total cost of maintaining their sons during the year's sojourn at the College. The paragraph referred to runs as follows:—"Each cadet, other than a Queen's or Indian Cadet, on first joining shall be required to pay, in addition to the regulated contribution, a sum of £25 to cover the expense of uniform, books, &c., and to bring with him the articles of clothing of which he will receive notice, and which must afterwards be kept up at his own expense. He shall also be required to pay the regulated contribution in advance, for each half-year of the time during which he remains under instruction; and a deposit of £5 on account for contingent expenses, which latter sum he shall be required to make up on returning to the Royal Military College after each vacation, to cover any expense that may be incurred on his account during the ensuing half-year."

WHEN "the shameful announcement" was made that the Wellington Statue was to be broken up and melted down, there was a feeling among the officers of the Army (whose "feelings" were not consulted naturally by a committee of taste) that the artistic demerits attributed to the work might very well be pardoned, in consideration of the interest the statue possessed as the outward and visible sign of the nation's gratitude, that had been accepted by the Duke himself as good enough for the purpose. They, therefore, sought about for means to save the statue from the melting-pot; and their feelings were so far put in the shape of action, that some officers put themselves in communication with the authorities to ascertain whether, if a subscription was got up in the service to buy it and place it on some appropriate site, the Government would allow them to purchase it for the value of the metal, as to which there were several conjectures very much under and very much over the mark. The answer was unfavourable. The authorities were bent, it was said, on absolute destruction and liquidation. We know how hot the controversy was, and the contention of opinions as to the position and fate of the statue, which meantime bided its time in its not very much decorated enclosure at Hyde Park Corner, and awaited what is called the expression of public opinion, very much as the Commendatore sat voiceless and motionless till he was asked to dinner by Don Giovanni. There were meetings of committees, and conversations, and discussions, and nothing was done, except that there was a change wrought in the melting mood of the powers that be, and it gradually came to be thought that the statue must be preserved, but that it should not be left at Hyde Park Corner; and that a new statue should be erected in honour of the hero, and to the greater credit of the metropolis. The Government, having been appealed to, named a sum which was considered sufficient to pay for the new statue, but they afterwards reduced the contribution to the sum of £6,000, and the sculptor to whom it was resolved to entrust the execution made a demand which left a considerable balance to be provided for. It is due to the initiative of Field-Marshal the Prince of Wales (who was aided, we believe, by Mr. Mitford) that the proposal has taken the tangible form in which it has come before the public, that a subscription should be opened to carry out the original design of Mr. Burton, to surmount the arch at Hyde Park with a Chariot of Victory, and to erect in "Waterloo" Place, opposite Apsley House, an equestrian statue of the Duke of Wellington, by Mr. Boehm, the eminent and admirable artist who has so long made England his home, and to whose chisel our homes and public edifices owe so many beautiful objects. The names of the committee include the members of the Royal Family, the aristocracy and gentry whose ancestors served under the Great Duke, and all the high Military Officers who have become associated with the recent triumphs of our arms. The old statue was discovered to be, in one respect, at all events, typical of the Duke. There was a lot of "iron" in it, and this metal was so incorporated with the bronze that it would have been tedious and costly to remove it, so that the statue could be melted; and if melted with the bronze, the metal would be spoiled. The result is that the statue is to be saved, and that it is to be moved in due course to Aldershot, but there are more difficulties in the way of this movement than might be imagined. The road by which the statue will be conveyed will be somewhat circuitous, in order to avoid weak bridges; but the removal has been reported to be practicable.

Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., has telegraphed to the Admiralty for reinforcements to enable him to hold Suakim against the rebels, and their Lordships have at once responded to the demand. The Admiralty have, however, been much disconcerted by this sudden call upon their already overstrained resources, as most of the ships forming the East Indies Squadron are in a very bad state and condition, and unable to proceed to Suakim until heavy repairs have been completed. At the same time, their Lordships have neither men nor ships at home that they can at once send on foreign service, except a brigade of Marines; and as Sir William Hewett is in want of reinforcements to form a Naval Brigade, their Lordships have to detain all time-expired men and paid-off crews now on their road home, and send them where neither honour nor profit can accrue to them, but where hard knocks will be plentiful. This is not the way in which to render service in the Navy popular, and is also a proof of the fact that to make war on the cheap, that is to say, to send an armed force to conquer another armed force, and maintain that so doing is not war, is the most expensive method a country can possibly adopt to vindicate her rights, from the fact that there having been no beginning, the end of the war is always far distant, as is the case now of Egypt.

The Orontes, having on board the relieved crews of the Champion, Cleopatra, Flying Fish, Kestrel, and Zephyr, has been stopped at Port Said on her homeward voyage, and ordered by the Admiralty to return at once to Suakim. The Marines are the only men of the relieved crews who have their arms with them, so that the seamen will be of little use until the arrival of the Monarch from Malta with spare arms and ammunition. The relieved crews number about 700 officers and men.

To command a Fleet is no easy task, not half as easy as to command a single ship, and when signalling to a fleet or squadron to perform a certain evolution, care should be taken that the ships having to obey the signal are within measurable distance of successfully performing the task allotted to them. The correspondent of a contemporary thus criticises the command of the Channel Squadron:—"At daylight on Sunday we sighted Sardinia ahead. At 9 o'clock the signal was made to form single column line ahead, the second division turning to starboard; as this necessitated their turning eight points, and the wind being only two to three points abaft the starboard beam, the result was that the Agincourt and Northumberland got rather into difficulties with their canvas. The second division, to start with, was some two cables too near the first division, and the Sultan some distance astern, so that the second division had a somewhat difficult task to perform in taking up their station astern of the Sultan. However, with the exception of 'a little hair being lost' by the bosses, nothing very untoward occurred,"—more apparently by good luck, than by any forethought or good management of the senior officer in command.

We understand that the new Naval Estimates will not be finally settled until as near the end of the financial year as possible, so as to enable the Admiralty to spend the last votes, and accordingly frame those for the coming financial year. The Naval Estimates for 1884-85, as at present framed, show but a very slight increase on those of the past year. The Admiralty are, however, doing all they possibly can to settle the various votes in such manner as to enable them to make some sort of display in the shipbuilding vote. The reorganisation of the Constructor's Staff has also given rise to no end of shuffling in the Controller's Department. Provision has been made for granting Lieutenants of more than eight years' standing an increase of pay of two shillings a day.

We have already drawn attention to the number of officers in the Navy qualified to act as Interpreters in Modern languages, as compared with those who have qualified in Oriental languages. On consulting the Navy List for January, 1884, we find the numbers to be "26" Modern and "58" Oriental. It is difficult to believe that so many qualify in Oriental in preference to a modern language, French, for example without some reason. Most Naval officers know sufficient French to be able to read books or otherwise amuse themselves, and there are many who, without being actually Interpreters, are quite capable of performing the duties of one, if ever called upon to do so; but, in order to pass the examination for Interpreter, they would have to devote the best part of a year to studying it, and as the accent cannot be obtained without the aid of a French master, or by a stay of a few months in France, officers ask whether it is worth the expense, considering their chance of being employed as Interpreters is when they are appointed to a Flag or senior officer's ship, and that chance is comparatively small. The pay of a Naval officer is not very large, and as a teacher charges at the rate of 3s. an hour, and even 5s., the encouragement to study is not great; for, when employed, the pay is only 2s. 6d. a day to first-class, and 1s. 6d. to second-class Interpreters; and to pass for the former, 75 per cent. of the total number of marks must be obtained. There is much more encouragement to study Oriental languages, for, in the first place, the lowest scale of pay is 50 rupees a month (the rupee varying from 1s. 7d. to 1s. 10d.), and the highest 200 rupees; the latter amount being only given to officers who have passed in Hindostanee, Persian, and Arabic; and on being appointed, 180 rupees are given to cover the expenses. No allowance is given on passing in a Modern language, when it is much more necessary, as few Oriental teachers are likely to claim remuneration at the rate of from 3s. to 5s. an hour. We think that were their Lordships to allow a small rate of pay, according to the class obtained, to each officer from the date of qualifying as Interpreter, or else give a certain sum to cover the expenses entailed in studying, more officers might be induced to spend their time in what would then be a profitable work, but which certainly is now unprofitable, putting aside the fact that time spent in acquiring knowledge must be well spent.

The trials of the sister-ships Colossus and Edinburgh have proved most satisfactory, high speeds having been attained by both ships, the former averaging over 16 and the latter over 17 knots. The Rodney, Howe, and Collingwood will be fitted with similar engines to those on board the Edinburgh. These armour-clads, together with the Agamemnon and Ajax, will, when completed and commissioned, form a most powerful squadron; but when will they be completed, and when commissioned? A correspondent writing from Portsmouth says:—"In the Dockyard here we are almost at a standstill, and everything, whether building, completing, or repairing, drags its weary length along in a most shamefully slow manner, owing to the paucity of men employed in comparison to the work in hand. There will be an awful awakening some day from this lethargic condition, or I am much mistaken."

A new phase in political pressure has been introduced during the past week, by a prayer meeting of ladies and gentlemen held in Exeter Hall, at which prayers were offered up by numerous individuals of both sexes for the entire repeal of the C. D. Acts. It is a question whether such a proceeding as this will in any way strengthen the hands of Mr. Stansfeld and his supporters, but it will be a pity if the voices of those who are carried away by impulse should prevail against the arguments of common-sense. Many of those who are advocating the repeal of the Acts on religious or moral grounds cannot be aware of the beneficial results of these Acts while in operation, and the fearful state of things that has already followed their temporary suspension. Those who live near garrison or seaport towns can testify both to the good and evil; and if the religious and moral grounds were such as honestly required the abolition of the Acts, it is not probable that high Church dignitaries and officers of rank in the Army and Navy, well known for their philanthropic principles and openly professed Christianity, would be among those who strongly and publicly urge the continuance of the Acts complained of by the screeching sisterhood and ignorant humanitarians.

Morice Bey (James Anderson Morice), who is reported among the missing in the late disaster to Baker Pasha's force before Trinkitat, was a retired officer of the Royal Marine Light Infantry. He joined the Corps as a Second Lieutenant in June, 1856; became First Lieutenant in May, 1859; a Second Captain in June, 1872; and retired, with the honorary rank of Major, in the following November. He shortly afterwards took service in Egypt with the rank of Bey, made self of much use during the Egyptian Campaign up to Tel-el-Kebir, and finally volunteered for the front, under Baker Pasha, as Paymaster-General to the Force.

An absurd rumour has lately made the round of the German Press to the effect that a French ship-of-war had crossed the line of the squadron which convoyed the Crown Prince to Spain, without saluting or observing any of the forms which are customary on such occasions. It was even reported that upon the representations of the German Government, the Captain of the French vessel in question had been dismissed the service, which is, of course, untrue. It now turns out that the whole affair has been grossly exaggerated. The French transport Mytho, two guns, bound to Tonquin with stores, encountered the German Squadron, consisting of the corvettes Adalbert and Sofie, and the despatch-boat Loreley, during a severe gale, which nearly proved fatal to the last-named vessel. As the German Squadron was proceeding in a very loose and straggling manner, the Captain of the Mytho did not feel justified in diverging from his course, and thus losing valuable time; neither was he compelled to fire a Royal salute, as such acts of courtesy are not expected of vessels which only mount two guns. Nevertheless, the Mytho communicated her name and destination to the German flagship, and proceeded on her course as in duty bound. Trumped-up reports of the above nature cannot be too severely criticised, especially when they are calculated to engender differences between nations which are ever willing to find fresh causes of hatred of each other.

The Brummer, an ironclad gunboat of a novel type, was lately launched for the German Navy from the yard of the Weser Company, near Bremen. This vessel, and another as yet on the stocks, were originally designed as sister-ships to the ironclads for coast defence of the Wespe class, of which eleven are now afloat; but as there appears to be some hitch about these vessels, the plans of the new craft were considerably altered. Whilst the Wespe is a vessel of 1,109 tons displacement, carrying a 12-in. gun in a barbette turret, protected by 8 in. of iron armour, the Brummer has a displacement of only 870 tons, and an $8\frac{1}{4}$-in. gun is substituted for the heavier armament. The thickness of the armour-plating remains the same, but Wilson's compound plates take the place of iron. An alteration has likewise been made in the construction of the hull, which, in the case of the last-named vessel, is built of steel. The Brummer will be supplied by the Weser Company with twin-screw engines of 1,500 indicated horse-power, which are calculated to propel her at a speed of 15 knots per hour. This also represents a considerable deviation from the original design, as the earlier vessels are provided with engines of only half that power, and consequently cannot steam at a higher rate than nine knots.

The Italian Government made some private experiments towards the close of last year with two 16-in. thick compound armour-plates, supplied by Messrs. Cammell and Co. and Messrs. Sir John Brown and Co., of Sheffield. The 100-ton gun failed to pierce either of these plates, the shot only penetrating the plate supplied by Messrs. Brown and Co. to the depth of eight inches. These firms have now to supply two 19-in. thick plates to the Italian Government, for further experiments.

The Stabilimento Technico of San Rocco, near Trieste, has received an order from the South American Republic of Uruguay to build a screw gunboat, to be named the General Artiga. The principal dimensions of this vessel, which appears to be the first regular ship-of-war possessed by Uruguay, are:—Length between the perpendiculars, 128 ft.; breadth of beam, 26 ft. 6 in.; draught of water, 10 ft.; and displacement, 270 tons. She will be fitted by her builders with compound, surface-condensing engines of 90 horse-power nominal, and is expected to realise a speed of 11 knots per hour. The General Artiga will carry an armament of two $4\frac{3}{4}$-in. Krupp guns, 30 calibres long.

The Danish Government have put off the armour-plate trials ordered for last month, to enable the Creuzot Works to complete and deliver their solid-steel plate. The Danes prefer everything that is French, and even send their officers to complete their education in the French service.

Considerable activity at present prevails at the Spezia Dockyard, where the powerful ironclad Lepanto is being armour-plated. Five hundred men have been engaged in this work for some time, but orders have just been received from the Minister of Marine to forward the operation with all possible despatch, and a thousand additional hands have consequently been put on. The work upon this vessel is being carried on night and day without intermission, yet it is not expected that she will be ready for sea before the autumn of 1886, although she has already been afloat for two years. It is reported that a new large dry dock is about to be commenced at Spezia, which is to be nearly 820 ft. in length, and which it is estimated will cost four million francs.

Officers of the Plymouth Division of Royal Marines who intend to qualify as gunnery instructors have gained a point by the recent decision of the Admiralty, which allows them to do so on board the Cambridge at their own port, instead of going through the course on board the Excellent, as heretofore, which necessitated their removal to Portsmouth for a lengthened period.

Some months ago the Russian Admiralty took over the vessels of the Moscow cruiser fleet, the committee having expressed its inability to keep them up without a subsidy. Since then they have still been employed in commercial pursuits, but the deficit has grown instead of diminishing, and recognising the difficulty of combining trade and warlike pursuits, the Admiralty have now decided to withdraw the vessels from commerce, and to use them exclusively as transports. The fleet consists of four ex-merchant vessels, the Russia, Petersburg, Nijni Novgorod, and Yaroslavl, and a regularly constructed cruiser, the Kostroma, built at Toulon.

Contre-Admiral Freiherr Max v. d. Goltz, recently appointed "director" of the German Admiralty, is only 46 years of age. He entered in 1853, was gazetted sub-lieutenant in 1859, lieutenant in 1861, captain-lieutenant in 1865, and captain of a corvette in 1870. In 1874 he commanded the boys' training ship Augusta to the West Indian station, and received his promotion to a full captaincy (Kapitänzur See) in 1875.

We hear on good authority that the Russian Admiralty contemplate the amalgamation of the Caspian and Black Sea fleets under one command, namely, that of the Commander-in-Chief of the Black Sea fleet. Some such measure as this was foreshadowed by the recent visit of the Minister of Marine to the Caspian, when, in making his way from Baku, the head-quarters, to Batoum, on the Black Sea, 36 hours' railway journey, the idea could not have failed to have struck him that it was easier to control the Caspian fleet from Nicolaeff or Sebastopol, distant three or four days from Baku, than from St. Petersburg, a distance of ten days to a fortnight. All the more reason existed for this from the circumstance that the Government contemplates replacing English coal in the Black Sea fleet by liquid fuel, the source of which supply is located at Baku. During his recent visit to the Caspian, Admiral Shestakoff was strongly impressed by the advantages of petroleum fuel—the use of which is universal in the Caspian steamers, locomotives, and refiners' furnaces—and within the next year or two we may expect to see it in general employ in the Black Sea, where it can be sold, at Batoum, for 26s. a ton, as compared with £3 demanded for English coal. In the simple furnace in vogue in the Caspian Sea, oil fuel goes almost as far as twice the amount of coal, while the more perfect hydrocarbon furnace of Mr. Robert Walker gives greater results than this, accompanied by a more regular diffusion of heat. If 26s. worth of petroleum fuel will do the work of £6 of coal, to say nothing of the saving in half the stowage and in the total absence of stoking, the incentive the Russian Admiralty have to dispense with English coal is obvious, and it is hardly possible that the latter can hold its own in the Black Sea.

The High Admiral of the Russian Fleet, the Grand Duke Alexis, has issued an order of the day vehemently censuring Admiral Pilkin, the head of the Torpedo Squadron, and a number of subordinate officers, for their negligence during a storm in the Gulf of Finland last September, whereby two torpedo-cutters, the Gorlitza and the Korushka, were swept from the deck of the frigate Vladimir, and lost.

We learn from Nicolaeff that rapid progress is being made with the new ironclad Catharine the Second, of the Imperieuse type. Upwards of 650 men are employed on the job, day and night, and the slip is illuminated by the electric light, to facilitate their operations. The vessel is under orders to be finished by the summer of 1885, at the same time as the sister-ironclads Tchesme and Sinope, now being constructed at Sebastopol. The armour-plates for all these vessels are to be made in Russia. From the same place we also learn that the officers and crew have returned from France who were sent there a short time ago to convey to the Black Sea the sea-going torpedo-boat Gelendjik, recently completed near Paris. This is one of the new series of large torpedo-steamers of the improved Batoum type, intended for Sebastopol, of which six are now being constructed. The Gelendjik failing to run the contract speed, the Russian Government refused to have her, and ordered the crew home.

General Kosakevitch, who has been Governor of Cronstadt for the last twelve years, has received a fresh administrative post. His successor is Admiral Schwartz, of the Baltic Fleet, who took charge of Cronstadt in December. The appointment is one of the most highly prized of the Russian Navy.

Considerable changes have lately taken place in the Marine Section of the Austrian War Ministry. Admiral von Poeck, who for many years was at the head of Naval affairs in Vienna, has been superseded by Vice-Admiral von Sterneck, which officer commanded the ironclad Erzherzog Ferdinand Max, the flagship of Admiral Tegetthoff at the battle of Lissa. It is rumoured that the late chief of the Marine Department resigned his post in consequence of serious differences with the Austrian Parliament, which originated in the circumstance that the money voted a year or so ago for the building of a small cruiser was devoted to another purpose,—viz., to the partial construction of a much larger vessel, for the completion of which Parliament refused to grant the necessary sums. Admiral Poeck has seen much service, and was many years ago presented with a sword of honour by the British Government.

The Russian Admiralty have despatched a commission to Sebastopol, to report upon the extensive fractures that have made their appearance in the hull of the popoffka Vice-Admiral Popoff. These are reported to be so serious that the Government will have no other alternative but to remove the vessel from the Active List altogether. Admiral Pestchouroff, the Commander of the Black Sea Fleet, has gone to Sebastopol, to examine the vessel.

From a lecture recently delivered by Captain Winden, we learn that a war galley, with an armour of lead, the Santa Anna, built in 1530, at Nice, belonged to the fleet sent by Charles V. against Tunis, to reinstate Muley Hassan on his throne. Andreas Doria commanded the expedition. The Santa Anna contributed considerably to this success. She carried six boarding-bridges, guns, and a crew of 300 men, was provided with a chapel, a powder-magazine, a reception-room, and a bakery, which supplied fresh bread daily. The armour was fastened to the hull with iron bolts. A picture of this frigate may be seen amongst the frescoes of the Palace of the Hospitallers at Rome.

It has been decided that the appointment of Deputy-Adjutant-General and Quartermaster-General for Musketry at Aldershot shall not be abolished for the present, but will be retained during the tenure of office of the present holder.

The first of a valuable series of lectures on stretcher drill and first aid to the wounded was given on Saturday last in the Raglan Barracks, Devonport, by Surgeon W. B. Allin, M.B., Army Medical Department, to a large number of officers, non-commissioned officers, and men from all the corps in garrison. It would be well if similar measures for imparting such manifestly important knowledge to men, many of whom will in all probability have to put it into practice at some period of their service, were more generally carried out, and classes should be formed in every garrison and on board every ship in the Navy, and not left as a voluntary measure to be taken up at will by some medical officer who may be more zealous than his fellows. It should be a part of the routine of instructions officially laid down.

The Cavalry Equipment Committee, under the presidency of Lieutenant-General Sir F. FitzWygram, Bart., after months of labour and experiment at Aldershot, have succeeded in reducing the weight of the clothing and equipment of rider and horse, in service marching order, by one and a half stones.

Notwithstanding the embarrassed state of the Dutch Exchequer, the Chambers have patriotically voted the increased estimates submitted by the Minister of Marine, to enable him to reorganise the Dutch Navy. It is intended to construct new monitors of light draught, for river work, numerous armoured battle-ships and torpedo-boats, and to form a Reserve Squadron, to protect the commerce of Holland in time of war in European waters, and safeguard the interests of the country abroad, especially in the Dutch East Indies. The War Minister has also determined to remodel the Dutch Army. Amsterdam is to be surrounded by powerful forts, so as to enable the Army of Holland to make a last stand, in case the country is attacked from the land side by an overwhelming force.

The following resolution was proposed at the annual general meeting of the Dublin Branch of the British Medical Association:—"That this branch observes with regret the great block that at present exists in the senior ranks of the Army Medical Department, and the extremely short period of home service now enjoyed by Surgeons-Major, and they request the Council of the branch to take such steps as they deemed advisable to attract the attention of the Government to these points." The resolution was unanimously approved by a crowded meeting of the leading medical men of Dublin, and a memorial has been submitted to the Council of the British Medical Association in London to be forwarded to the Secretary of State for War. The block for promotion principally affects the 150 Senior Surgeons-Major, men who entered the service during and soon after the Indian Mutiny, and the proposal is to tap this point in the same way that the Indian officer tapped the Indian Staff Corps and Artillery, by giving bonuses and extra pensions to men to induce them to go.

We presume that it is for reasons of economy that the present Minister for War in France has suppressed the wooden horse in cavalry regiments. Why waste the public money in the purchase of such things when, as he says, there is always a sufficient number of chargers in each regiment quiet enough to allow recruits to vault up on them.

A nomination to the Royal School for the Daughters of Officers of the Army, at Bath, will shortly have to be made by the Secretary of State for India. When on the formation of the Staff Corps, cadets ceased to be sent to India, the Cadet Mess at Fort William was broken up, and in 1869 the surplus funds were paid over to the above school, the privilege of having one pupil constantly in the school for 30 years being conferred upon the Secretary of State for India. The pupil must be the daughter of an officer of the Bengal Cavalry or Infantry who entered the service before 1860. She must also, of course, fulfil the usual conditions under which officers' daughters are admitted to the institution. Applications for the vacant presentation, which will take effect from April 25 next, should be sent to the Secretary of State for India through the Secretary of the School.

The French Minister of War has published a report upon the courts-martial held in France last year, and he states that out of 550,132 men coming within that jurisdiction, 4,934, or one in 107, were put upon their trial, and that of this number, 4,122 were found guilty, and the rest acquitted. There were 41 condemned to death, 86 to penal servitude, 206 to detention in a fortress, 3,717 to various terms of imprisonment, and 49 to a fine. Of the 41 men sentenced to death, 32 had the sentence commuted, and one committed suicide in gaol. Nearly half of the 4,934 cases tried were for insubordination or desertion, and 11 soldiers were handed over to the French military authorities by foreign Powers, under the Extradition Acts, for crimes at common law. Divided into grades, there were 8 officers punished out of 25,814, 113 non-commissioned officers out of 40,024, 194 corporals and brigadiers out of 44,647, and 3,255 privates out of 41,9649.

This year's "Kaisermanöver" will be executed by the 7th and 8th Army Corps. The 7th will manœuvre near Düsseldorf.

A lecture was recently given at St. Petersburg by General Barabash on Russia's power in the Pacific. In the course of some interesting remarks, the General pointed out that while Russia could be shut up in the Baltic and Black Sea, she had ample scope for cruiser operations from her base on the Pacific coast. He, therefore, urged that that base should be rendered impregnable, and a powerful squadron of swift frigate cruisers always maintained at Vladivostock. Regarding the Corea, he declared it to be of vital importance that the Chinese should not be allowed to establish any fortified port or arsenal in the northern part of the peninsula. These views were warmly supported by other speakers.

The standard of height for the French cavalry has been fixed as follows:—Reserve, 1·70 to 1·75 mètres; Line, 1·64 to 1·70 mètres; light cavalry, 1·59 to 1·64 mètres (a mètre is equal to 39 inches).

The chief interest in the General Orders for this month centres in those, of which there are four, on the subject of recruiting. General Order 15, if properly carried out, should have a most beneficial effect, —not only in preventing desertion, and also discharge by purchase amongst young soldiers newly joined, but also in popularising recruiting generally. The Order runs as follows:—"With reference to para. 2, G.O. 3, of 1884, commanding officers of battalions will, when recommending officers under their command for duty at regimental depôts, certify that they consider that such officers possess tact and the special qualifications desirable for dealing with recruits and young soldiers. First impressions go a very long way. And if this order shall be found in practice to add to the chances of a recruit receiving a more favourable first impression than has hitherto in many instances been the case, a very decided step in the right direction will have been taken. General Order 25 is chiefly occupied in laying down the new minimum standards for recruits of all branches of the Army, which are, in all conscience, low enough, and in providing loopholes for the enlistment of recruits who are below the standard, "without reference to head-quarters." "How it's done" is detailed in the two following paragraphs of the General Order:—"22 (a). Recruits between the age of 18 and 19 years may, if otherwise eligible, be specially enlisted, subject to the final approval by the approving medical officer and the approving field officer, without reference to head-quarters. 22 (b). Recruits under 20 years of age, who are within one inch of the minimum chest measurement, or within 5lb. of the minimum weight laid down in pars. 42 to 48 of this section (19 of the Queen's Regulations) may, except in the case of gunners and drivers for the Royal Artillery, and sappers and drivers for the Royal Engineer troops, be specially enlisted, if otherwise eligible, and approved by the approving field officer and the approving medical officer, without reference to Head-quarters." It appears to us that this is very like putting a premium on the enlistment of undersized lads, and we are thankful to see that at least the gunners and drivers of the Royal Artillery and the sappers and drivers of the Royal Engineers are exempted from the operation of these new rules. There is one more paragraph in this General Order to which we may refer. The paragraph we refer to is the following :—"Every recruit for the Royal Engineers must be able to read and write, and obtain a certificate of character, on Army Form B 166, from his late employer." And this brings us to the consideration of the last and perhaps the most important of the General Orders referring to recruits in this month's issue. We refer to General Order 27, of which the following are extracts :—"It is important that the soldier should be able to read and write, and keep his accounts, as well as be acquainted with his drill. Without such acquirements he cannot look for promotion, and is deprived of the interest and improvement derivable from the libraries placed within his reach. Every soldier, therefore, after he has been dismissed recruit drills, will be required to attend the regimental school regularly for a period of six months, or until he shall have obtained a 4th-class certificate. Commanding officers are, however, required to afford every encouragement to men who are desirous of attending voluntarily. Those soldiers who can satisfy their commanding officer that they are sufficiently educated to obtain a 4th-class certificate may be exempted from attendance until the first examination. . . . . . Men attending school compulsorily under the provisions of Para. 26 [quoted above], should not be placed in any permanent employment which interferes with their regular attendance." This Order we are glad to see, as it is highly important that every soldier should have, at least, an elementary knowledge of the "three R's." And it may, perhaps, be within the memory of some of our readers that, on the publication in September last of the return "showing the state of education in the Army at home in 1882," we pointed out that out of a total of 87,297 men serving at home on January 1, 1883, there were only 50,833 holding any certificate at all, and a large majority of these held fourth-class certificates only; while there were 36,464 men remaining without any certificate whatever, which virtually means without being able to read and write. This state of affairs was truly lamentable, and the new General Order strikes boldly at the root of the evil, which we may now hope to see disappear altogether in the course of a few years.

The contingent (1882 class) called to the colours in France at the end of the year numbers 137,000; 105,961 belong to the first and 31,007 to the second "portion." Of the first portion, 71,122 men have been enrolled in the infantry, 13,071 in the cavalry, 13,425 in the artillery, 2,445 in the engineers, 2,322 in the train, and 3,576 men in the army administration. Of the second portion, 17,409 men belong to the infantry, 9,637 to the artillery, 126 to the engineers, 3,148 to the train, and 719 men to the administrative troops.

It certainly appears strange that, whereas several hundreds of pounds are granted annually in the Estimates for the purpose of providing good-service pensions for deserving Quartermasters, no pensions are allowed wherewith to recognise the service of an equally deserving class, the Ridingmasters. Can it be that the Ridingmasters of the Army are considered less meritorious? It looks very much like an oversight, but if it is so, the error should be recognised; and the service champions in the House would be doing a friendly turn to a hard-worked and most useful body of officers, by drawing Mr. Childers's attention to the subject, before the new Estimates make their appearance.

We understand that the extensive works which have been for some years in progress for the defence of the Dockyard and Naval Anchorage of Bermuda are now almost completed, and that they will have cost ere they are finished upwards of £465,000, the whole of which expense has, of course, been borne by the Imperial Government.

In the monthly and quarterly Army Lists will be found, somewhere in the list of officers of each of the new territorial regiments, a short, straight line, dividing the list of officers into two sections. Any curious individual wishing to discover the meaning of the line will find an explanation on one of the first pages of the Army List, under the heading "Abbreviations;" a similar line drawn—of what this line is an abbreviation is left to the ingenious reader to conjecture—and the explanation, "Officers below this line are subject to linking rules." The first absurdity which strikes us in connection with this "line," on turning back to the regimental lists, is that it is found in a similar position in the regiments which were only linked together on July 1, 1881, as it occupies in those which were linked together on April 8, 1873. Now, if it appears in the lists of the former regiments at all, it is obvious that its proper position is below the names of all the officers of those regiments who were in the regiments on July 1, 1881. As it at present stands in such regiments, it is altogether meaningless. It is, moreover, equally useless in many of the regiments that were linked on April 8, 1873. The Army List says :—"Officers below this line are subject to linking rules." This, of course, implies that officers above the "line" are not under linking rules. Now this, unfortunately for the regulator of the "line," is far from being the fact. Time after time, lately, have we found above the "line" the names of officers who entered their regiments after April, 1873, and who, consequently, are "under linking rules" equally with those whose names appear below the "line." This is most misleading. There are many officers who have entered the Army since April 8, 1873, who have become lieutenants and captains in their own battalions, for some reason or other, passing by their seniors belonging to their linked battalion. Such officers, finding themselves placed above the "line," naturally begin to have an idea that in some mysterious manner they have contrived to evade the provisions of the General Order of April, 1873, and, not being "below the line," are not "under linking rules." Of course, it may be said that they ought to know that, having entered the Army since the Linking Order, they must be under linking rules. Granted; then what is the use of the "line" at all? It is evident that in a very great number of regiments it is quite impossible to place it in such a position that it shall show exactly which officers are "under linking rules," and which are not.

Surely some change is required in the designation of certain Yorkshire regiments,—a West Yorkshire Regiment and a West Riding Regiment are confusing. The 19th, at Richmond, in the extreme north of the county, should be styled the North York Regiment, as it used to be. The 14th, at York, which is exactly in the centre of the county, should be called the York Regiment, instead of the West Yorkshire Regiment, which latter title should be held by the 33rd and 76th. There would then be a York Regiment, and North, South, East, and West Yorkshire Regiments. The York and Lancaster Regiment should be removed from Pontefract, and localised nearer the border of the latter county, which should supply half of its auxiliary battalions.

It was found in former years that Scotland was unable to provide a sufficient number of recruits for the national regiments; yet these have recently been added to, and five new Militia battalions have still to be raised. Where are the men to come from to fill the ranks of these corps? Some months ago it was pointed out to the Horse Guards that if one Militia battalion only was allotted to each Scotch territorial regiment, there would be but one Militia regiment—the 2nd Lanark—in excess. This could be converted into Artillery, or if it were disbanded, a greater number of men would be available for the Line. By this arrangement the King's Own Borderers, which at present has no Militia battalion, would be provided for, thus :—

District.	Regiment.	Militia Batn.
1. ...	The Royal Scots	Edinburgh.
21. ...	The Royal Scots Fusiliers	Ayr and Wigtown.
25. ...	The King's Own Borderers	Scottish Borderers.

It is probable that by this time the ship which bears General Millot and his fortunes to Tonquin has arrived. However, there have been so many delays, and so many accidents, that the French in general take a very gloomy view of the expedition. They say that there has been "a run on the black," and being slightly tinged with superstition, they consider the breaking-down of the Vinh-Long, the Cholon, the Fanfare, the Chacal, the fire on board the Flore, the fact of the Shamrock and the Sarthe getting aground in the Suez Canal, and the narrow escape of the Annamite from shipwreck, as omens of evil. A despatch from Admiral Courbet gives some further details of the fighting at Sontay, which, he says, was defended by the enemy in the most obstinate manner. Before the capture of Sontay, the Admiral appears to have formed the opinion that his force was quite inadequate to attempt the capture of Bacninh; he has furnished the Government with some further details with regard to the fortifications of that place, and says that on the arrival of General Millot, he will be able to enlighten him completely on the value of the works. He says that everything is quiet on the right bank of the Red River, and that since the taking of Sontay, there has been no engagement; nothing, we believe, but a little casual skirmishing. The Black Flags and the Chinese, says the Admiral, have all crossed over to the left bank of the river, and have taken up a position under the shelter of the guns of Bacninh. According to the latest advices, it seems that from reconnaissances which have been made, it will be possible to employ gunboats against Bacninh, as some of the rivers in the neighbourhood of that fortress have sufficient water for the craft at the disposal of the French. The Chinese have made some dams, but these will be easily disposed of. As the Progrès Militaire points out, considerable apprehension exists lest the French should not have time to capture Bacninh this season. The reinforcements, delayed on the voyage, will not reach their destination until the very end of this month, and it is said that it will be absolutely necessary for the Expeditionary Corps to go into cantonments on April 1, after which date, owing to the intensity of the heat, it would be highly imprudent to do any campaigning. We also find in the Progrès Militaire the following notes :—"A high Chinese Mandarin has been sent to Bacninh, and since the arrival of this personage the works are being actively pushed forward. The Chinese troops, both Regular and Irregular, are échelonned along the north of the Canal, ten miles from the Red River, where a post has been fortified by our troops. The Chinese works are constantly disturbed by the reconnaissances which we make." And, "The Tonquin Volunteer Corps, the organisation of which has been confided to Lieutenant-Colonel Maussion, of the Marine Infantry, is being rapidly increased. On December 1, the effective had attained 2,500 men. The Tonquin Volunteers were engaged at the capture of Sontay, where they had 18 men killed and 413 wounded. The Annamite sharpshooters, coming from Cochin-China, had only three men killed and 20 wounded. The solidity and the devotion of these Native troops can be reckoned upon; although of recent formation, not a single case of desertion has been reported." It appear that Admiral Peyron, the French Minister of Marine, is about to lay a Bill before Parliament, asking it to double the present force of Marines, which consists of one regiment of artillery and four of infantry.

There are no officers in the service more deserving of consideration than those of our West India Regiments, and it seems strange that a rule should exist debarring the Captains of these corps from the privilege, enjoyed by all other branches of the service, of accepting employment as Adjutants of the Auxiliary Forces. Having regard to the nature of the climates in which they do duty, and the effect they have upon the constitutions of Europeans, it would appear to be desirable that every means should be found whereby those whose health has been shattered might be enabled to obtain a temporary immunity from the damaging influences of continuous residence in tropical countries. And yet a hard-and-fast line is drawn, which removes from the unfortunate officers of the two regiments in question all hope of qualifying for appointments, which are within the reach of almost all other branches of the Imperial service. Mr. Childers is credited with a desire to do everything in his power to improve the position of the British officer, and we trust he may find time to devote attention to this subject, and make such arrangements as will allow of a certain number of Captains of the two West India Regiments having opened to them the prospect of appointments, for which we feel convinced they would be able to prove their fitness. We are sorry to say that there exists in some quarters a disposition to regard with disfavour those upon whom devolves the duty of protecting our interests in the West Indian and West African Colonies. Now, the officers of the West India Regiments have shown on many occasions that they are deserving of the fullest confidence, and as no injury could possibly be done to the service generally were the appointments in the Auxiliary Forces opened to them, the War Office would be acting wisely in taking their claims into consideration, and offering them a proportion of appointments with the Volunteers.

A French military writer observes that the helmet has now been adopted by most of the European Powers in the infantry, while in France it is worn only by the cavalry. A good many trials have been made in France, and we have seen a battalion with a most tasty helmet, but the old ungainly shako is still retained. Going into the history of the helmet, the writer thinks that it was first introduced by Marshal Saxe, who had helmets served out, garnished with bearskin, to a mixed regiment of Dragoons and Uhlans. In due time the bear skin was exchanged for an imitation leopard skin. We also gather that the helmet with horsehair, which is still worn by French Dragoons and Cuirassiers, was due to an ordinance of the year 1763, and was known under the name of the helmet à la Schomberg, having been probably introduced into the French service by that renowned old marshal. This head-dress, we are told, gave rise to a singular incident in the reign of Louis XV. The Dragoons pretended that they had a right to wear their helmets even in church, and to put an end to this pretention the Duc de Choiseul, in 1765, had to write the following circular :—"His Majesty, considering that when the Dragoons are not on service in the church, they ought to be considered as private individuals, and fulfil the duties which decency and edification exact; he wishes, in consequence, that the Dragoons be required to take off their helmets, and to remain bare-headed in church with the remainder of the faithful." In his "Histoire du Costume en France," M. Quicherat says that one can see in the museum of Versailles the portrait of Dauphin, the son of Louis XV., and father of Louis XVI., Louis XVIII., and Charles X., in the uniform of a Colonel-General of Dragoons. We doubt if this Prince ever set a squadron in the field, but it is said that he wore a curious helmet, which is still preserved in the library of the town of Versailles—a helmet in which the hair of a woman took the place of the ordinary crinière,—"mulier formosa superne." Although the helmet has not been introduced into the French infantry, it has long been worn by the fire brigade, both in Paris and in the provinces, and the Paris brigade has certainly a very smart appearance.

It appears that the French War Department is in some difficulty, owing to the strength of the Army being in excess of the money voted by Parliament. What is to be done? Must the Minister of War send a certain number of men home before their period of service has expired, must he delay calling out the contingent for this year, or must he boldly ask the Chamber to vote him an extra sum of 16,000,000 francs? It is said that Parliament, which ever since 1871 has denied the Army nothing, will most likely refuse a further demand, should it be made. Does not the ordinary Military Estimates already exceed 600,000,000 francs (£24,000,000), is there not a good deal of distress in the country, and has not the Government been obliged to issue a loan? There ought to be five contingents out at a time, but often there are only four, and sometimes only three—only three when the War Minister sends away one contingent a year or six months before it has completed its legal term of service, and when at the same time he defers calling out a contingent which is due. A double application effects a great saving. One military reformer suggests that the Army might be reduced by any number of men with perfect safety after July 1, as by that time all political storms have disappeared, and as no European country would commence a campaign after that date. But what would become of the autumn manœuvres in this case? It is said, however, that at the last manœuvres of the 7th Army Corps two regiments had only seven old soldiers per company, who were "drowned" in 175 reservists, and yet their discipline and training was such that no one would have suspected the composition of the battalions. We put little faith in a little leaven leavening the whole lump, and imagine that if the two regiments quoted above were much like the others, the others were no great shakes.

General Order No. 3, of January, 1884, having directed attention to the question of the selection and promotion of non-commissioned officers for duty at regimental depôts, a few facts concerning the position and prospects of the senior non-commissioned officers serving with regiments may prove of interest. It is a remarkable circumstance that these are the only non-commissioned officers who are not granted progressive rates of pay and steps of promotion. Schoolmasters, armourer-serjeants, paymaster-serjeants, orderly-room serjeants all receive periodical advances in pay and promotion, as do the non-commissioned officers of the Staff and the departments of the Army, three years being the period at which each increment is granted. It is different with regimental non-commissioned officers. A quartermaster-serjeant or a colour-serjeant may be thoroughly qualified for promotion, yet, through a dearth of casualties, he may find himself, after seven or eight years' service in his rank, as far off from promotion as ever. By Para. 617, old colour-serjeants are often superseded by non-commissioned officers who were corporals and privates when they had several years' service as colour-serjeants. These hardships could be averted, and much satisfaction given to the regimental non-commissioned ranks if the authorities, overlooking the question of expense, which, after all, would not be so great, would adopt the following suggested increments in pay and steps in position:—Colour-serjeant: After three or five years' service, 6d. a day additional, with 1st-class rank. Quartermaster-serjeant: After three or five years' service in the rank, 6d. a day additional. Serjeant-major: After three or five years' service in the rank, 6d. a day additional. As the serjeant-major is the senior of his grade, no increase of rank would be necessary, though the pay would be acceptable. Something ought certainly to be done to improve the prospects of a most deserving body of men.

The French War Minister has already drawn up a plan for the autumn manœuvres, and so the officers in command will have plenty of time to study the programme. We see that two army corps, the 4th and the 17th, who have their head-quarters the first at Le Mans and the second at Toulouse, will alone manœuvre together. These manœuvres are to last for 20 days, including the time necessary for concentration and what our neighbours call dislocation. General de Berckheim will direct the operations of the 4th, and General Lerval the operations of the 17th Army Corps. Both corps are to be provided with a military chest and post-office and telegraphic services. After the manœuvres, two divisions of the 4th Corps will relieve two other divisions in Paris, and probably for the next three years enjoy garrison life in the capital, which is under an exceptional military régime, and has no army of its own. This system has two advantages. The Government is not kept in a continual state of alarm lest the turbulent Parisians, forming a regular army, should rise; and an opportunity is afforded of giving provincial troops a chance of seeing the capital. There is a Commander-in-Chief or a Military Governor of the army of Paris, and of the army of Lyons, but there are no armies of Parisians or of Lyonnese. Some of the other army corps will manœuvre by divisions, and others by brigades. All the cavalry, both the independent divisions and the cavalry attached to the various army corps, will have a clear week's manœuvring in brigade alone, and will afterwards work with infantry. An infantry regiment quartered in Corsica will execute special manœuvres,—be taught, no doubt, how to invest bandits in the maquis or thickets, where they generally flee for refuge.

L'Armée Française quotes the following passage from a work written upon Germany, and due to the pen of Count Vasili:—"One Minister alone, that of War, enjoys a distinct personality; he is an independent member in this assembly of slaves, a fact which tells prodigiously on the nerves of the Chancellor. But the Army is the only institution protected by the Emperor; it is a sacred thing, which not even the Prince has a right to touch. The same Sovereign, a soldier at heart, has always taken the part of the soldier; he has defended him, supported him, and covered him with his Imperial authority. Neither the cunning, nor the cleverness, nor the direct attacks of Prince Bismarck have met with success on this point. The Emperor remains sole master of his army, and the Minister of War is responsible to the Monarch himself for all his resolutions and decisions." The French military paper seems loth to condemn a system which has evidently raised Prussia to her present position, and makes her mistress of the destinies of Europe. All that the French editor can say is that he agrees with a contemporary which exclaimed, à propos to Count Vasili's book,—"Neither illusion nor faint-heartedness. Prussia took nearly two-thirds of a century to repair the disaster of Jena; she showed patience and tenacity, and when she found the man of genius capable of obliterating the past and of reconstituting her power, she bowed her head, neither worrying him with opposition, nor riddling him with epigrams. Let us try and profit by the lesson which our enemies have given us, and continue to give us." L'Armée Française evidently despairs of France being able to repair her great disaster under the present form of Government, seeing that if the Army does not meddle with politics, politicians meddle with the Army, which has had a dozen different War Ministers since the fall of the Empire, and which has no chief to protect it, no chief to whom it can give its affection.

The infantry brigades have been exercised in minor tactics during the week. The instruction would, however, be of still greater value if cavalry and infantry were combined.

Colonel C. M. Clarke, C.B., A.A.G. of the division, has proceeded on leave of absence till the 29th inst. On his return the spring drills and annual musketry course will be commenced, and the programme of drills, &c., for the season issued.

The "military training," by companies, of the drilled soldiers goes on here unceasingly. Night picket duty has been practised during the week by various companies undergoing this instruction. It is nothing unusual to see a company of less than twenty-five men, all told, employed in shelter-trench digging, or the construction of field-kitchens, which forms a portion of this six weeks' course, much of which, being the A B C of the soldier's training, might be wisely discontinued.

In well-informed circles it is not believed that there will be autumn manœuvres here on an extensive scale this year, statements to the contrary notwithstanding. Such matters have been talked of for years past, but the result has always been disappointing.

A course of four lectures will be delivered in the Prince Consort's Library between this date and March 14. The first lecture will be by Major Bambridge, R.A., on "Gun Ammunition." The three subsequent lectures will be delivered by Major Clayton, R.A., Professor of Fortification and Artillery, Staff College.

Surgeon-Major J. Langdon and Surgeon E. Roche, A.M.D., have arrived here for duty.

Describing the roads in the Soudan that converge on Khartoum, a correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that virtually there are two routes lying south from Korosko. The first follows, now by boat, and now by camel, the river's course; the shorter route goes across the desert of Atmoor. But practically the river is little used, many rapids interrupting its course. The most direct southerly route lies across the desert from Korosko at the knee formed by the Nile between Assouan and Wady Halfa, to Abu Ahmed at the corresponding bend, 250 miles further south. The passage may be accomplished, by ordinary travellers, in ten days.

Many playgoers in town and country will regret to hear that Miss Bella Goodall, a great favourite on the London and provincial stage, expired on Sunday last, at the early age of thirty-three. Miss Bella Goodall was a native of Liverpool, and made her first appearance there at the Royal Amphitheatre in the farce of "A Middy Ashore." Her London début was made at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, April 15, 1866, as Coralie in "A Winning Hazard," and since then her services were in great request at nearly every theatre in the metropolis.

Notwithstanding the exhaustive nature of the histories of the Indian Mutiny which have already been published by Colonel Malleson and Sir John Kaye, there remains ample room for the additional volume now laid before the public by Mr. Holmes. It must be assumed that years of labour and anxious research were employed by him in collecting the facts necessary to justify the publication of such an important work, and there can be little doubt that his gratification will be great at the verdict of approval which has been already pronounced in its favour. Any repetition of the history of the Indian Mutiny, written on the same scale as those above mentioned, would most certainly have been coldly received. There would have been no place for them—they were not desired—but the author of this work has adopted another course. While giving a detailed narrative of the chief campaigns and of the stirring events that took place at the various centres of revolt, he steadily adhered to the objects of simply writing the best history that he could, and, in doing so, recording everything that was worthy to be remembered, and thus enabling readers to understand what sort of men the chief actors in the struggle were, and, above all things, to ascertain what were the causes of the Mutiny, and how the civil population of India bore themselves during its progress. Mr. Holmes's volume opens with a general sketch of Anglo-Indian history to the end of Lord Dalhousie's administration. As a matter of course, in considering this portion of Anglo-Indian history, Clive occupies a prominent position. In the opinion of the author, however, he was not a great statesman, like Hastings. Although he knew how to devise expedients for meeting difficulties, he founded no lasting political system, but nevertheless would live in history as the founder of our Indian Empire. Mr. Holmes then rapidly narrates the failure of Clive's system of government, the succession to power of Warren Hastings, and the early measures which he adopted. At this period, 1776, the fame of England had sunk to its nadir. Twenty years before it had reached its zenith. America and half Europe were banded against England, but India was the rock against which the storm broke in vain, "for India was ruled by a man who joined to the fiery zeal of a Pitt the calmness of a Marlborough." The references made by the author to the dealings of Hastings with the Rajah of Benares and the Begum of Oude occupy but a short space only; but Mr. Holmes says that it will be enough to assert "that no] other than that policy which Burke held up to desecration could have saved the Empire in the most momentous trial it had ever passed;" though further adding that those who condemn the morality of that policy must not shrink from the inevitable conclusion that the Empire which has been charged with the mission of civilising India, and which gives England her great title to respect among the nations of Europe, was erected, could only have been erected upon a basis of iniquity." It would be impossible to do justice to Mr. Holmes's "History of the Indian Mutiny," in a simple review. It is a work of exceptional merit in every respect, perspicuous in its narrative, firm in the opinions which it maintains, straightforward, and without bias. The terrible episodes of war which so constantly marked the progress of the Mutiny have afforded the author of this work abundant opportunities of showing that he possesses descriptive power which is not accorded to very many military historians; while at the same time, when portraying the characters of the men of might who took part in the momentous events which have since become matters of history, Mr. Holmes has evinced an anxious desire to weigh facts scrupulously before declaring the conclusions he may have arrived at. The sixth chapter serves as an illustration of this. It refers to a measure of gross injustice which was perpetrated nearly thirty years ago, and which has not been yet redressed. Mr. Holmes does not suffer this blot to remain unnoticed, but he lays before his readers full particulars of a lamentable miscarriage of justice. In the month of June, 1857, while Canning had been labouring on, and striving to bear up against the news of calamity in Upper India, the position of the Presidency of Bengal depended upon the tact and energy of Frederick Halliday, Lieutenant-Governor, and one of his local representatives, William Tayler, the Commissioner of Patna. The former, who had gained a strong influence over Canning, was a hard-working man, but still had made many enemies. William Tayler was a man of culture, keen sense (it may be, a little too keen) of humour, and wide sympathies. He was not, as Mr. Holmes expresses it, a man of iron, but a man of tempered steel. No matter how grave was the duty that was cast upon him, rather than shrink before it he accepted most appalling responsibilities. The districts under his charge contained about 24,000 square miles, and a population of more than 5,000,000. To meet the dangers that were always threatening, Tayler had few resources but the strength of his own character; he had not a single European soldier in Patna, and more than that, he knew well that he would have neither encouragement nor support from the Lieutenant-

Governor. When, therefore, the flame of rebellion broke out at Meerut, Tayler knew the extent of his danger, and knew that he would have to meet it alone. He met it boldly, and for a period stemmed the tide of revolution. Notwithstanding the abundant evidence adduced by Tayler as to the danger of Patna, the Lieutenant-Governor announced "that he could not satisfy himself that Patna was in any danger, and that the mutiny of the Dinapore Sepoys was inconceivable;" and yet at that very moment most positive information had been received by Mr. Tayler of the intention of the Sepoys to attack Patna on the night of June 7, and that identical information had been communicated to Mr. Halliday by Tayler. This dramatic episode is fully discribed in Tayler's Patna crisis. At almost the same moment, the anxieties of the Commissioner of Patna were alarmingly increased by the refusal of General Lloyd to disarm the Dinapore Sepoys. Mr. Holmes enters fully into a description of the critical state of affairs that existed, and details the expedients devised by Tayler for ensuring the preservation of order, measures which "Warren Hastings might have been proud of." The pages in which the author describes the desperate efforts made by Tayler to preserve law and order read like those of some startling romance. That he had not only not despaired of, but had deserved well of, his country, was at the time, and has been ever since, almost the unanimous and expressed opinion of those who took part in these exciting events; and, nevertheless, the only reward he reaped was his dismissal from the Commissionership of Patna, at the hands of Lieutenant-Governor Halliday. It is a dreary thing to endeavour to wade through the various modes by which this official struggled to prove himself in the right, and Tayler in the wrong. It is sufficient to say he succeeded, although the conduct of the man he struggled to crush elicited wide-spread sympathy throughout India, and although the gradual march of time proved a most powerful advocate in justifying the course which he pursued. In concluding this stirring episode, Mr. Holmes says:—"But William Tayler never knew when he was beaten—the struggle is still undecided, and in the eyes of the world the combatants hold very different positions. The former Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is now Sir Frederick Halliday, Knight Commander of the Bath, and Member of the Council of India. The former Commissioner of Patna is a private gentleman, undecorated and unnoticed by his Government. But he is still the same man who overawed the Mahommedan conspirators and protected the Christians of Patna, he has still unshaken confidence in British justice, he still maintains his honourable battle, and, although victory seems almost hopeless, he still has a strong confidence, of which no injustice can rob him, for he knows that he saved Bengal."

The Touch of Fate. By Mrs. George Posnell. (T. and R. Maxwell.)

It would be quite possible to find some serious faults in the composition of this novel, but it must be remembered that it is a first attempt, and that the errors now so apparent may in time be toned down, or possibly avoided altogether. The fact seems to be that the authoress is brimful of anecdote, and hurries her readers on with such distressing rapidity as to bewilder and confuse both herself and them. This observation applies equally to her treatment of incidents or characters, but, as we have already said, may not do so in any of her future publications. Possibly the first idea which will strike the reader is that she might have formed a pretty little boudoir book by selecting out of the abundance at her hand the headings of each chapter in the novel, and calling it "Fugitive Poetry." There is one merit which this novel possesses in an eminent degree,—that is, that in it the reader is not tantalised by any delay or irritating prosiness, but is plunged at once into the full current of the authoress's ideas. The incidents that are related in these chapters are developed with vigorous treatment, and occasionally with decided dramatic effect. As to the characters, there is not much to say. Of course, we are introduced to the conventional Irishman, who, on this occasion, is presented in a series of tableaux-vivants, which will probably create a profound impression on such of the authoress's readers as have not had the felicity of visiting the Emerald Isle. Then we have a parson with an equable temper and fine digestive organs, a ruffianly hero, a confiding ingénue, and some minor characters. As to descriptive power, there is ample to satisfy the most exigeant taste. In the first volume will be found a pathetic appeal to "Youth," the sentiments conveyed in which will be echoed either joyfully or mournfully, according to the spirit of the reader:—

> "Youth! light-hearted youth, your cheerful lives and happy smiles, so utterly careless of all save the present, cast care to the four winds of heaven, and enjoy the springtide of life, for soon the wand of Time will touch your raven locks, and turn them to silver, youth! Sparkling, bright, evanescent youth, bring joy and freshness to the old, as you cast your charm over old age; he thinks not of the monotonous, dreary present, but lives over again the days that are gone, telling with delight stories of the time 'when I was a boy,' basking with happiness in the sunbeams of the past."

We must leave the reader to develope the plot, and will not interfere with the pleasure of doing so, but will rest content with recommending the authoress to mature the powers she evidently possesses, and to remember that many of the brightest successes in literature have been based upon the most miserable failures.

The tenth annual edition, 1884, of Kelly's Handbook to the Titled, Landed, and Official Classes has just been published, and appears to accomplish very fairly the large object of the publishers, which is to include in one general alphabetical list all who have a definite position from hereditary rank, from recognised titles or orders conferred by the Sovereign; from naval, military, or civil services; from legal and administrative functions; from magisterial office or landed possessions. The volume is handsomely printed, and a proof of every entry has been submitted to the person indicated, where that was possible.

Grammar of Colloquial French. By J. Massé. (Relfe Brothers.)—This little work on The Grammar of Colloquial French will be found particularly useful by advanced pupils, who may have already acquired a sound knowledge of this fascinating language. In the opinion of the author, when once a perfect command over the grammatical construction of a sentence has been acquired, and the pupil is able to express himself in a clear and intelligent manner, a knowledge of idiomatic expressions can be attained in a comparatively short time by constant application and carefully observant imitation. M. Massé points out that the object of achieving this end is the one which prompted the publication of this volume, and presses upon his readers that, unless an intimate acquaintance with the structure of colloquial sentences has been previously gained, composition in a modern tongue becomes impossible. There is a marvellous amount of matter in M. Massé's work, the preparation of which must have cost an infinity of troublesome research. Independent of the more important subjects contained in this treatise, there is a variety of other matters which must prove agreeable and instructive to all students of the French language.

The Rapid, new composite corvette, met with a series of accidents while on her steam trials on Feb. 4. The engines and boilers have been supplied by Messrs. Maudsley, Son, and Field, and appear to be no better than those of the Dandolo, just condemned by the Italian Government. The Western Morning News says:—"The vibration produced was exceptionally great, and in about half an hour after the commencement of the trial, the throttle-valve suddenly closed, causing the engines to slacken speed. Half an hour later the main discharge pipe split, and the vacuum gauge and water-service pipes attached to the condensers also carried away through the excessive vibration. At the same time the vacuum pipe from the 'governor' broke in two. A consultation was then held between the representatives of the contractors and the Dockyard and Admiralty officials, and it was decided to abandon the trial. The Rapid accordingly returned to the Hamoaze, and moored alongside the Dockyard."

A new steamer for the Caspian Fleet was recently launched at Abo, in Finland. The vessel is 102 ft. long, 16 ft. broad, and 5½ ft. deep, with compound engines of 40 horse-power, steaming at 11 knots an hour. The furnaces are constructed to burn petroleum fuel, in common with all the other vessels of the Russian fleet in the Caspian Sea. How cheap this fuel is may be gathered from the fact that crude petroleum is selling at threepence a ton at Baku, the head-quarters of the Caspian Fleet. This is due to the remarkable development of oil fields by Ludwig Nobel, the son of the Swedish engineer who invented the torpedo, and had charge of the submarine-mine arrangements at Cronstadt during the Crimean war. After the close of the war, the father failed in business, and his sons, branching out for themselves, rendered themselves famous,—one, Alfred Nobel, as the inventor of dynamite; and the other, Ludwig, as the developer of the Baku oil region. It is thanks to the latter's exertions that Russia has acquired in the Caspian Sea a fleet of steamers sufficient to convey the largest army from the Caucasus to Central Asia. In India, we observe, the Government are taking up petroleum fuel as though it were a new thing; but it has been used for more than twenty years on the Caspian, and so long ago as 1873, General Valentine Baker reported in warm terms of it during a visit to Baku. At present, nearly 200 refineries burn it at Baku, and probably as many steamers on the Volga and Caspian; while the locomotives on the Baku railway use nothing else. Instead, therefore, of inexperienced officials starting fresh experiments in India, the Government should send them to Baku, to see what is being done in the steamers 250 ft. long, and the huge refineries, with the latest patented contrivances, belonging to Ludwig Nobel and others.

The Queen's patronage of the Royal Sailors' Home at Portsmouth, as is well known, has been no merely formal recognition, and her Majesty has once more shown her kindly interest in her seamen, in graciously presenting the Home with her portrait. This handsome gift will be a very suitable adornment to the walls of the Royal Sailors' Home, which has recently been renovated.

The Admiralty have entered into a contract with Sir W. Armstrong and Co. to supply four 9-in. breech-loading gun mountings for the barbette ship Impérieuse, at a cost of £3,000 per set of mountings.

Epps's Cocoa.—Grateful and Comforting.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in packets, labelled—"James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence.

The Army.

Royal Horse Guards (Blue). The Holy Trinity Magazine, published at Windsor, says:—"Troop Corpl.-Major George Holmes, so long associated with the A Troop, which he has always maintained as A 1, is, we regret to hear, about to take his discharge. His brother non-commissioned officers are subscribing liberally to present him with a testimonial. Corpl.-Major Holmes served in Egypt, where he was greatly distinguished by his courage, patience, and cheerfulness under very trying circumstances. We understand that he is about to take an hotel at Hayes. Hayes is midway, or thereabouts, between Windsor and London; but, wherever it is, Holmes's friends will be sure to find him out and rally round him. Col. Fred Burnaby, having got leave, will join Baker Pasha in Egypt, and we may look out for something stirring before long. He left London on Jan. 9. Meanwhile, Col. Milne-Holme, M.P., who is occasionally 'relieved' by Col. the Hon. Oliver Montagu, is in command."

2nd Life Guards. The following appears in the Rev. A. Robins's Holy Trinity Magazine, published at Windsor:—"Poor John Marshall is dead. Our readers in Windsor need not be told that he was formerly Ridingmaster and subsequently Adjutant of the 'Nulli Secundus' of the Body Guard. He did not very long survive his wife, but died of consumption last month. He had left the regiment some little time."

7th Hussars. The Standard says:—"Lieut.-Col. Drew has been appointed to succeed Col. Luck, C.B., 15th Hussars, as President of the Committee, now sitting at Aldershot, to consider and report upon the advisability of adopting moss litter in lieu of straw amongst British cavalry regiments."

10th Hussars. The head-quarters and service troops embarked at Bombay for England on Wednesday in H.M.S. Jumna, and are due at Portsmouth on the 4th prox., whence they proceed to Shorncliffe, where the depôt and some 300 horses lately belonging to the 7th Dragoon Guards await their arrival.

17th Lancers. It is stated that Capt. Benson, now Brigade-Major at Poona, is likely to be appointed Garrison Instructor at Lucknow.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

"Master-Gunner" writes:—"In a recent issue of your valuable paper, a correspondent, 'X.,' states 'that the unwarranted schoolmasters of the Army are the only sufferers by the publication of the Royal Warrant of June 25, 1881.' This is incorrect, as it is well known that master-gunners of the 3rd class were also superseded. Prior to July 1, 1881, all master-gunners on appointment were senior to serjeant-majors, irrespective of the service of the latter. If schoolmasters of from 7 to 11 years' service consider that they were unfairly treated by bandmasters superseding them, what must be the feeling of the master-gunners (who were all bonâ fide serjeant-majors in all respects, and with an average service of about 19 years) at being passed over by their juniors in every corps in the Army? The following will show that all master-gunners were warrant officers in 1859. It was fully expected that in giving warrant rank to the Army, all master-gunners would be included. Extract from General Regimental Order:—'Horse Guards, August 17, 1859.—Master-gunners hold the relative rank of warrant officer in the Royal Navy, and should not, therefore, be treated as non-commissioned officers.—(Signed), Charles Bingham, Deputy-Adjt.-Gen.'"

Experiments with various kinds of projectiles were made at the proof butts, Woolwich Arsenal, on Wednesday, for the information of a class of officers of the Royal Artillery who are passing through an advanced course of instruction. One of the party, Lieut. G. R. Darley, 1st Field Brigade, ignited the fuze of a carcass shell, a rather antiquated missile, filled with a composition which burns fiercely, but does not explode. The contents, however, had probably deteriorated and shrunk with age, and it is supposed that a space was formed inside the case, which enabled the whole to ignite at the same instant; the consequence being the bursting of the shell, which scattered its fragments of metal and fire in all directions, and wounded Lieut. Darley in the face and head. The injured officer was taken to the Royal Arsenal Infirmary, where he was attended to, and then removed to his quarters at Woolwich. The latest reports as to his condition are satisfactory.

Coldstream Guards. The following obituary notice of the late Col. Manningham Buller, appears in the Rev. A. Robins's Holy Trinity Magazine, published at Windsor:—"With much sorrow we record the death of Lieut.-Col. Frederick Manningham Buller, of the 2nd Battalion, Coldstream Guards, a representative Guardsman throughout all the unblemished days of his soldiering. He had scarcely come in full view of life's prime, and yet so bravely, and in so many ways, he had done a very earnest life's best work. Few men amongst his contemporaries were, probably, less self-reliant, or less self-asserting; yet in nothing would he sit down satisfied with mediocrity. In the true unconquerable spirit of the 'Nulli Secundus' he lived his too short life, and died. It seems to us but a little while, although it must be years, since we one day passed those pleasant hours with Frederick Manningham Buller and Ronald Campbell. If in many respects different, they were, nevertheless, both true types of high-souled men. And they are both gone:—Buller so loyal to the whole Brigade, so devoted a soldier, so true a friend; and poor noble Ronald Campbell, so chivalrous, unselfish, warm-hearted, lion-hearted. They left the world, as heroes ever look to leave it, and even after so short a stay, so much the better than they found it, because so much the better and the brighter for their example. 'Whom the Gods love, die young.' But whom our God loves they never die."

1st, or Royal Scots. Lieut. Kemball, 1st Batn., a probationer, officiating wing-officer 29th Bengal N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bengal S.C., from March 26, 1882.

18th Royal Irish Regiment. The 2nd Batn. at Aldershot, has been placed under orders of readiness to proceed to the Mediterranean, to relieve a regiment proceeding to Egypt.

23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Capt. Mainwaring, 1st Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for fifteen months, on private affairs.

30th East Lancashire Regiment. Major Tidy has been selected for the post of Garrison Instructor, Eastern District, Colchester, in succession to Major F. H. Dyke, half-pay, who completes a period of seven years' service in that appointment on the 12th prox.

31st East Surrey Regiment. The regiment, at Aldershot, is under orders of readiness to leave England in the course of a few days for the Mediterranean, to relieve a regiment proceeding to Egypt.

44th Essex Regiment. A correspondent writes to the Madras Mail in reference to a recent parade of the regiment:—"The old 44th maintained their good name for steadiness. The number of men of this regiment on parade was very small, owing to their being considerably under the proper strength, and having three companies on detachment. On arrival in Madras, about two years ago, they were upwards of 900 strong, and since that time they have been augmented by two very strong drafts from England; still it is a matter for great regret that they are unable to keep up to strength, and that the very best men of the regiment (aye, the very back-bone of the regiment) have left, and are still leaving the regiment, and proceeding to the colonies, presumably with a view of bettering themselves. Almost every steamer for Colombo embarks a consignment of these hardy fellows, and at present about twenty more are awaiting another ship. The men seem to be disgusted with the service, particularly with the form of discipline that has lately been introduced into this honourable old corps. Even the bandsmen seem to have caught the colonial contagion; a few months ago no less than fifty musicians could be counted, whereas yesterday morning's parade mustered thirty. Surely something should be done to induce the men to remain with the colours."

ROYAL MARINES.

Capt. Cosmo Gordon has been granted leave of absence for two months.

53rd Shropshire Light Infantry. The Queen has approved of Lieut. Dawkins being appointed Aide-de-Camp to Sir Hercules Robinson, G.C.M.G., Governor and High Commissioner for South Africa.

59th East Lancashire Regiment. The 5 and 9 Lilywhites' Gazette has the following:—"We have again this month to chronicle the loss to the old corps of an officer whom all ranks will regret extremely. We allude to Capt. Lucas, who, having served in the battalion for 16 years, during which he has never made any enemy, while making many friends, has sent in his papers to retire, and is about to join a brother-officer (Lieut. Worgan) in the far, far West, whither we feel sure he carries with him the good wishes of all ranks for his own future welfare and that of Lieut. Worgan, with whom, we understand, he is going into partnership. A stern disciplinarian and good soldier, he has never sought popularity, but has succeeded in gaining it. A thorough Lilywhite, his loss will for some time at least be severely felt, both socially and otherwise. Capt. Lucas joined the 59th Regt. Dec. 25, 1867, was promoted lieut., Oct. 28, 1871, and appointed instructor of musketry in 1878, which appointment he held for over two years. He was promoted capt. on March 30, 1881. He served with the regiment throughout the two years' campaign in Afghanistan (medal and clasp), during which he acted as brigade baggage-master. By the appointment of Capt. Wright, 1st Batn., as D.A.A.G. for musketry in the Bengal Presidency, we presume that Lieut. Lake, 2nd Batn., now at the Staff College, will obtain his company, so that the battalion again temporarily loses one its most promising officers. By the retirement of Capt. Lucas, we understand Lieut. Leonard, now seconded as a D.A.C.G. in Egypt, will be promoted, and as this experienced young officer (Afghan and Egyptian Campaigns) is reported to be about to join the Egyptian Constabulary, under Mr. Clifford Lloyd, his brother-officers and friends will not see him back in the regiment as soon as they hoped. This will, however, we suppose, promote Lieut. Scott, 1st Batn."

60th King's Royal Rifles. Capt. Astell, 2nd Batn., has been selected to succeed Major Wyllie, as Adjt. of the 5th Volunteer Batn. Cheshire Regiment, on April 14.

65th York and Lancaster Regiment. Lieut.-Col. Elliott has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on medical certificate.

82nd South Lancashire Regiment. The Liverpool Courier has the following:—"The 2nd Batn. South Lancashire Regt. (late 82nd) have been at home for the unusually long period of 14 years, having arrived in England from Aden in Feb., 1870. There is, however, a battalion, the 1st of the Cheshire Regt. (22nd), which has been at home since 1869, and there are two or three others since 1870, but the great majority of battalions in the United Kingdom returned from foreign service within the last five years. The 'improved system' of organisation causes this inequality of home service, as under what was known as Tulloch's Roster each battalion had a pretty fair turn of home and foreign service. The 2nd South Lancashire have been several times named for foreign service, and fully expected to proceed to Egypt in 1882, as battalions of much shorter home service were sent. On the 5th of this month the 2nd South Lancashire were to embark for Malta, but the order has been countermanded. This corps has been for years in a very efficient state, and been frequently recruited up to its full establishment, but has been reduced again by furnishing drafts for the 1st Batn. in India. For the third time it has had the honour of being declared the best signalling battalion in the Army."

Rifle Brigade. Lieut. Loftus-Tottenham, 1st Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for twelve months, on medical certificate.

Commissariat and Transport Staff. "Esprit de Corps" writes:—"Turning over the Army List the other day, with that vague expectancy common to military men under the influence of the proverbial 'hopes deferred,' it suddenly struck me that since I entered the service (in 1862), an alteration had been made in the order of precedence of the Commissariat and Transport Staff. I find the 'Chaplains' Department' now standing before the Commissariat, whereas it had, for two centuries before my time, been below it. Taking down such Army Lists as lay within reach, I found that in 1817, 1821, and 1865 the order had remained unchanged by which the Commissariat stood always at the head of the Departmental Staffs of the Army. Can any of your readers point to the Queen's Warrant, without which such a supersession of a distinguished corps of the Army by the pen of some War-Office clerk is as illegal as it is insulting? The absurdity of thus placing a mere accessory of the Army before a necessary and integral part of the Army is the more glaring, now that the Commissariat and Transport forms a portion of the General Staff. Your kind insertion of this letter may produce rectification by the authorities."

Pay Department. "F. S. D." writes:—"Permit me to point out, through the medium of your columns, some reasons why candidates will not come forward for service in the Army Pay Department. 1. Probationers for other departments are, when gazetted, only seconded in their regiments for a term of years, and can rejoin; but on entering the Pay Department they sever for ever their connection with their old corps. 2. All departments of the Army, except the Pay Department, which happens to be, after the Medical, the strongest numerically, are represented at Head-quarters by one of their own body, but of the financial branch of the service there is not a single officer in Pall Mall. 3. The Queen's Regulations distinctly lay down that all officers unfavourably reported upon should be so informed. In the Pay Department the principle of selection is carried out in the most invidious manner, as officers superseded by the promotion of their juniors are not made acquainted with the reasons why they have been passed over. 4. Paymasters, with the honorary rank of major, who happen to be serving in India, are not paid according to their rank, although the Regulations declare that honorary rank in the Pay Department shall carry all precedence and advantages attaching to corresponding military rank. 5. Paymasters have great difficulty in obtaining leave of absence, as the allowance for an officer performing their duties is only granted when there is no other officer of the Pay Department at the station. 6. An officer is permitted to retire voluntarily after 25 years' service; but as he is only granted the pension attainable after 20 years' service, the concession is practically a dead-letter. 7. The treatment of the officers of the Department in last year's campaign in Egypt was not encouraging to would-be candidates. Out of 31 officers serving in the country, only one, the chief paymaster, was honoured, whereas the Commissariat and Ordnance, whose duties are somewhat analagous, had respectively 21 and 45 per cent. rewarded. 8. In all other Departments of the Army, clerical subordinates are under the complete control of their own officers. Not so in the Pay Department, where in regiments and in regimental districts, paymasters are constantly deprived of the services of their clerks, to attend parades, musketry, &c., often at the time when their services are most required in the pay office. 9. The system of inspection of pay officers by War-Office officials causes great offence, more from the modus operandi than the examination itself, as instances have occurred of paymasters walking into their offices in the morning and finding a gentleman (!) quietly seated at the table, examining the books, and interrogating the clerks. No paymaster worth his salt objects to have his accounts inspected, but the proper officer, as a rule, to do this is the Chief Paymaster of the district. It has been recently stated in your journal that the Pay Department is some 40 short of its establishment. If the grievances above enumerated were removed, I think the Secretary of State for War would very quickly find that probationers would come forward as they did when the Department was first formed, in 1878."

MILITIA.

The Buffs (East Kent Regiment). Capt. H. F. Forestier-Walker, returned as "missing" after the defeat of Baker Pasha's Army at the Wells of Teb, was appointed 2nd lieut. East Kent Militia, June 26, 1880; and lieut., June 18, 1881. He resigned last year on appointment to the command of the Nordenfelt battery of the Egyptian Army. Capt. Walker had a narrow escape of being included in the massacre of Hicks Pasha's Army, having been left behind in hospital at Cairo. He never served in either the Line battalions of the Buffs or English Artillery, as stated.

"Observer" says:—"Believing that it was the intention of the Horse Guards that the distinguishing mark 'M' should be worn by all officers of Militia battalions on the shoulders when in uniform, I beg to inform you that it was noticed at the Lord-Lieutenant's Levée at the Dublin Castle, on Tuesday Jan. 29, that many officers of Militia did not adhere to 'Army Dress Regulations,' and also neglected to take steps to ensure being announced to the Lord-Lieutenant as an officer of the 3rd, 4th, 5th, &c., Battalions. As this was very galling to officers of Line battalions, who dress according to regulation and take pride in their regiments, I trust you will bring the same to notice in some way in the columns of your paper, as thus, probably, this matter will be promptly remedied by the authorities concerned."

The new literary examination of lieutenants of Militia who are candidates for commissions in the Line will be held by the Civil Service Commissioners at the London University, Burlington Gardens, W., on April 25, and following days. Applications for permission to attend must be made in accordance with the instructions contained in the regulations issued with clause 15, Army Circulars, 1881, and are required to be forwarded by commanding officers not later than the 15th inst.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

22nd Middlesex (Central London Rangers). The annual theatrical performance of this regiment took place on Saturday evening at St. George's Hall. The curtain rose to the farce of "Bubbles," which was principally remarkable for the artistic representation of Mrs. Hogg by Mrs. J. P. Sadler. Of the other characters, we cannot write in terms of high approval. Lieut. Harding seemed to feel himself unhappy, and Capt. Lambert as Hogg was,—well, simply very bad indeed. The comedy of "Heroes," which followed, was marked by a display of considerable ability on the part of all concerned. To Miss Woodzell (Lilian), Mrs. Sadler (Miss Herries), and Mr. F. H. Gruggen (Sir Douglas Herries), may fairly be awarded the honours of the evening. The performances throughout were more commendable, and it is difficult to decide which of them was best from a dramatic stand-point. A word must be said in favour of Lieut. Harding, who, as young Mr. Ruggles, certainly did not appear youthful, but was, nevertheless, most effective both in speech and gesture. Capt. Sadler's Major Herries was a careful representation of a part which did not afford great scope for acting. Capt. Sadler is to be commended, however, for not having over-acted, as amateurs oftentimes do, when not, as they suppose, sufficiently employed. Serjt. Cavers made an effective Archie, and in the love-scenes was easy and gentlemanly. Miss Millett gave one the idea of being over-conscious; her movements and language were too studied, and the part lacked light and shade. The amateur orchestral band of the regiment played an admirable selection under the leadership of Capt. Leese, to whom great credit is due. The regiment has placed its two Nordenfelt machine guns, one officer, and 50 well-trained men, at the disposal of the military authorities for service in Egypt.

THE ARMY MEDICAL SCHOOL.

The winter session of the Army Medical School was brought to a close on Monday, when the prizes were distributed to the successful students in the lecture-room of the Royal Victoria Hospital at Netley. H.S.H. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, commanding the Southern District, attended from Portsmouth to distribute the awards. In a brief address before distributing the prizes, Prince Edward sketched the course of study laid down for the students and its advantages, remarking that great thanks were due to the several professors, especially to Surg.-Gen. Longmore who had occupied a most distinguished position from the beginning. Dr. Crawfurd also addressed a few words to the medical pupils, and said that as there was no special prize for pathology, he had great pleasure in following the example of Sir Joseph Fayrer by giving a copy of Quain's "Dictionary of Medicine" to Mr. Bradshaw, who stood highest on the list.

The following is a list of surgeons on probation in the Medical Department of the British Army who were successful at both the London and Netley examinations. The marks shown are those which were gained at the London examination; the order of position of these gentlemen is not affected by the marks gained at the Netley examination:—

	London Marks.
1. Bradshaw, O. G. D.*	2,410
2. Kelly, M.	2,375
3. Pinching, H. H.†	2,355
4. Geddes, R. J.	2,350
5. Kelly, W.	2,185
6. O'Connell, D. V.	2,170
7. Dodd, A.	2,140
8. Wilson, G.‡	2,121
9. Reid, J. M.	2,105
10. Winter, T. B.	2,105
11. Heuston, F. S.	2,100
12. Durant, R. J. A.	2,055
13. Gubbin, G. F.	2,030
14. Myles, J. P.	1,980
15. Lesly, R.	1,975
16. Birch, H. P.	1,975
17. Braddell, M. O'D.	1,880
18. Donnet, J. J. C.	1,870
19. Sloggett, H. M.	1,845
20. Robinson, C. S.	1,755

* Gained the Martin Memorial Gold Medal.
† Gained the Parkes Memorial Bronze Medal.
‡ Gained the Montefiore Second Prize.

The following is a list of surgeons on probation in her Majesty's Indian Medical service who were successful at both the London and Netley examinations. The final positions of these gentlemen are determined by the marks gained in London added to those gained at Netley, and the combined numbers are accordingly shown in the list which follows:—

	Combined Marks.
1. Pratt, J. J.*	5,284
2. Shore, R.	4,870
3. Bannerman, W. B.	4,705
4. Sarkies, C. J.	4,696
5. Thomson, H.	4,450

* Gained the Herbert Prize and the Montefiore Medal.

SIR LINTORN SIMMONS, a warm advocate of Short-service, addressed a letter to the Morning Post on Tuesday, commenting on the inaccuracy of the figures made use of by the Adjutant-General at the dinner of the Artists. Sir Lintorn Simmons sums up as follows :—"Although agreeing fully with Lord Wolseley that the strength of the Army should be increased, I am of opinion that it is rather by bringing the present establishments to a state of efficiency than by adding to their numbers, that its strength should be increased. The numbers now voted by Parliament cannot apparently be raised; it is useless, therefore, at present to vote more men. What we require is a sound organisation instead of a system of hand-to-mouth legislation." Lord Wolseley, speaking of the short-service system, said, "It got rid of that miserable system of bounty which previously offered a great inducement to fraudulent enlistment." But did it get rid of bounties? We think not. Men are now offered money to re-engage after three years, and in India they are presented with the large bribe of £12 to extend their service. For our part, we see no greater immorality in giving a recruit a sum of money to enlist than in giving him a greater sum to re-engage; and we imagine the tax-payer will be of our way of thinking. If our present system be the success Lord Wolseley says it is, what necessity can there be for any bounty, or for reducing the age for enlistment and the standard of height and chest measurement? But the point is not whether long service is better than short, but can we put an adequate number of efficient troops in the field for home defence. His lordship treats us to generalities; the country wants correct facts. There are grave doubts as to the efficiency of our Army. It is in Lord Wolseley's power to remove these doubts, by issuing a return the beginning of each year, showing precisely the strength of every regiment, and the age, service, height, and chest measurement of the men. If his lordship likes to publish a statement with this return, let him do so, but let it be with the impartiality with which a judge lays a case before a jury, and not with the partiality of an advocate. If he can, then, satisfactorily show that we can put 30,000 Infantry, with averages as he stated, in the field without calling upon our Reserves or upon India for a contingent, he may rest assured that the grumblers of the Army will be reduced to that small minority of unreasonable men who will always be found in every profession and in every section of society. His lordship is quite right in looking upon the Army from a national point of view. When he comes before the public, he should remember that every word that he utters, even in an after-dinner speech, is read by thousands the next morning. Nothing should be said in public that is likely to be misunderstood, no figures quoted that are not correct. It is natural that the country should be led by what his lordship says, for he has been successful to an eminent degree. Let him beware, however, lest he leads the nation astray. To say that all who differ from him are a pack of grumblers, whose stories are "doleful and melancholy," is not a very successful way of getting rid of opponents. Sir Lintorn Simmons's critical letter to the Morning Post, and that of Sir Patrick MacDougall, which we published last week, show that there are some grumblers even amongst the advocates of short-service. Should his lordship make use of the power which his high position gives him to mislead the nation, he will be guilty of a very grave offence, and should he ever be called upon to answer for himself before the bar of public opinion, his very greatness and his successes will stand in evidence against him.

Notice is given that the Queen will hold drawing-rooms at Buckingham Palace on Thursday, the 13th, and on Thursday, the 20th of March next, at 3 o'clock.

Notice is given that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will, by command of the Queen, hold a levée at St. James's Palace, on behalf of her Majesty, on Thursday, the 21st inst., at 2 o'clock. It is the Queen's pleasure that presentations to his Royal Highness at the levée shall be considered as equivalent to presentations to her Majesty.

To the list of officers killed in the disaster near Trinkitat must be added the name of Captain Barton, a former non-commissioned officer of the 1st Royal Dragoons. He had served in the Zulu and Egyptian campaigns, and had received the South-African and Egyptian medals, the 4th class of the Medjidie, and the bronze star.

In reference to our remarks on the death of Lieutenant-Colonel Manningham-Buller, it is well, perhaps, to point out that all for which he and his seniors of the Brigade of Guards paid their money,—viz., the position and emoluments attached to the command of a battalion,—has been taken away by the Warrant of 1882. Not only would this officer never have been promoted in the Coldstream Guards, but, by the working of the seven years' rule, every Purchase Major in that regiment will be removed from it compulsorily this year, and of course, should they die, their whole purchase-money will be lost to their families. A more unjust ruling it would be impossible to conceive. Of course, in civil life, an appeal would be made to the Courts of Law. Public servants have, however, no redress. They must simply grin, and bear the injustice.

The Pirbright Rifle ranges, near Aldershot, are destined, we believe, to be the future annual meeting-place of the National Rifle Association. The next meeting at Wimbledon will probably be the last to be held there.

War-Office organisation seems still of a strange kind. Last year, it was stated the authorities had miscalculated the number of men that were to pass into the Reserve. Now, it is stated, Lord Wolseley, in his celebrated after-dinner speech on the favourable character of our present recruits, spoke from wrong returns. We wonder what next may happen.

Mr. Tottenham will, on Tuesday, March 4, call attention to the present condition of the Army and the system of recruiting, and move a resolution.

Lord Stewart of Garlies will, in the House of Lords on Monday, move that there be laid on the table of the House a copy of the official return from which General Lord Wolseley, G.C.B., quoted in a recent speech at the Artists' Volunteers' dinner, in allusion to "the whole of the Army at the present moment comprising men of 91 per cent. over 20 years of age, and 20 per cent. over 30; 58 per cent. over 5 ft. 7 in. in height, and 83 per cent. over 35 in. round the chest; and 78 per cent. over two years' service."

We believe the increase in the Army will chiefly be devoted to placing on an increased establishment of rank and file certain Infantry battalions, in place of those serving in Egypt, which have hitherto been borne on the strength of the Army Corps available for service abroad.

In the criticisms that have appeared on Lord Wolseley's speech on the Army at the dinner of the "Artists" corps, it seems to have been generally overlooked that the figures he quotes are, on the face of them, incorrect. His lordship began by expressly stating that the 33,000 recruits of 1883 are included in the per-centages he gives, and lower down he stated that 78 per cent. of the Army are of over two years' service. Now, 33,000 on a total strength, at home and abroad, of, roughly, 190,000 men, is 17 per cent.; therefore 83 per cent. have over one year's service, and if 78 per cent. have more than two years' service, there can be only 5 per cent. or 9,500 men remaining with the colours, from the total number of recruits enlisted in 1882. This is not exactly the conclusion at which his lordship would wish to arrive.

The introduction of short service has very much changed the condition of regimental discipline. Soldiers are now but a very short time with the colours, and the number of recruits joining annually is very large, in comparison with what it used to be. The dearth of efficient non-commissioned officers is the cry from all regiments, and every officer of any standing will testify that the present men are, as a body, far inferior to those who wore the stripes in years gone by. An adequate supply of good serjeants and corporals is one of the first conditions of the efficiency of an army. Experience alone can help the man whose duties are onerous; he has much responsibility, his temper is constantly sorely tried, and it may be fairly said that in no other grade in the Army is tact in dealing with men more essential. The value of a small army like ours can only be estimated by its quality,—physical fitness, good character, and fair elementary education. The number of men in prison dismissed as bad characters and deserters do not testify to the good quality of recruits. The enlistment of poor boys from good schools was recommended by a War-Office committee, but has not been acted on. The supply of boys for the Royal Navy is in excess of the demand, and the Army might obtain many recruits from industrial, union, and other suitable schools. The few boys now allowed under the regulations turn out, as a rule, good soldiers, and have the advantage of education in the regimental schools and workshops. It seemc desirable that the War Office should extend the system of boy service.

It is rather a remarkable but nevertheless an indisputable fact that few of the 83 per cent. of 35 "inches-round-the-chesters," as they are now termed, spoken of with so much elation by the Adjutant-General of the Forces a fortnight ago, are ever to be seen at Aldershot, the Curragh, or any of the larger garrisons, among the newly-joined recruits. The question is,—Where are they picked up, and whither do they go when they have been finally attested?

Lord Strathnairn will, on an early day, move for returns of numbers of recruits monthly since the reduction by one inch of chest measurement, height, and reduction of age from 19 to 18, as well as of the height, chest measurement, and age of these recruits up to the present day. Also returns of desertion of soldiers and recruits from their regiments, as well as of soldiers from one regiment to another. Also of soldiers and recruits, with their respective length of service, from their regiments, and of deserters who have surrendered themselves or have been taken up.

To the anxious parents of young military aspirants, the Indian Staff Corps offers a good field for subalterns of limited means. There are objections against volunteering, and there are many compensating advantages Compulsory retirement in the grades of captain and major does not exist in the Indian Army, consequently officers who join the Staff Corps (provided their health permits) are assured an uninterrupted career for a longer period than in a Line regiment. They are certain to obtain a substantive majority on the completion of twenty and a lieutenant-colonelcy on the completion of twenty-six years' service from date of first commission. These are subject to no deduction on account of leave. Those who may be fortunate enough to attain the rank of General officer, can retire on pensions varying from £750 to £1,000 per annum. The ordinary retiring allowances respectively after 20, 24, 28, and 32 years' service for pension, irrespective of rank, are £250, £365, £500, and £700. The furlough rules of 1875, although avowedly less favourable than those of 1868, nevertheless allow a minimum pay of £250 per annum during all leave that has been earned, or that can be anticipated. The chief drawback to the Staff Corps in the eyes of young officers is the length of time before a company can be obtained. There has lately been rapid promotion, owing to enforced retirement in the Queen's service. After this is over, if the average time in which an officer becomes a Captain is less than twelve years, the Staff Corps Subalterns have valid grounds of complaint, and we believe the India-Office authorities would see the advisability of equalising the periods. The decision we come to, after examining the "pro's" and the "cons" is that the Staff Corps does offer a favourable field, and that a young officer who can bear the climate, and does not mind long service in India cannot do better than enter himself as a probationer.

Sir Herbert Maxwell will on Monday move an address for a return showing the relative cost and the duration in wear of the full-dress head-dresses of the following troops:—Household Cavalry, Dragoon Guards, Lancers, Hussars, Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, Foot Guards, Fusiliers, Highlanders, Rifles, and other Infantry of the Line.

But three shooting-galleries will be erected at Aldershot Camp, during the present year, for the use of the Infantry—one for each brigade—and these will be entirely under brigade control. The sites for the galleries have been already selected, but their construction will not be proceeded with until the Estimates for 1884-85 have been passed.

It is consolatory, at the present juncture, to know that at least one regiment at Aldershot will shortly be up to decent strength, though even then it will be below its regulation establishment. The 2nd Battalion, 18th Royal Irish Regiment, at the Camp, will be joined by 180 recruits from the Depôt at Clonmel about Monday next. It is true that these men have not yet been put through a musketry course, but as every Irishman is a born sportsman, and takes as naturally to a gun as a duck to water, this will not matter so much in case of a sudden call to arms. The two battalions next in strength are the 31st East Surrey, 950; and the 3rd Rifle Brigade, 750; for the rest, they are battalions merely in name, and many days must elapse before any of them could be put into shape for active service.

Owing to the recent disgraceful scenes near Waterloo Station in which soldiers have prominently figured, orders have been issued at Aldershot, on instructions from the Horse Guards, which it is hoped will be the means of bringing about a change for the better in this respect. Soldiers proceeding on leave from the Camp to London have been warned to avoid the many traps and snares laid for them in the vicinity of the Waterloo Road, and have been ordered not to resent the good advice which may be given to them by policemen on duty, which has lately been too often the case. Whether this will have the desired effect remains to be seen.

Brigade-Surgeon O'Leary, A.M.D., is to be congratulated on having fully vindicated his character from the imputations under which he has been suffering since the publication of the report of Lord Morley's Committee. The letters addressed to the Times and Globe show conclusively that Sir Drury Lowe's statement with regard to Dr. O'Leary's conduct, when employed as Principal Medical Officer of the Cavalry Division in Egypt, is not borne out by facts. Dr. O'Leary has collected documentary and other evidence in support of his case, and has succeeded in completely exonerating himself from the charges preferred against him, which were of a most serious nature, affecting, as they did, his reputation both as an officer and a gentleman. It is now made clear that Dr. O'Leary's inability to perform his duties was solely due to ill-health, and that, far from his having invalided himself, he proceeded to Ismailia by order of Sir James Hanbury, the Principal Medical Officer in Egypt; that a medical board invalided him to England; and that another medical board in London granted him four months' leave for the recovery of his health. With regard to the insinuation that Dr. O'Leary had neglected his duties in having refused to receive a number of men into hospital, or give them medicine, it may be pointed out that Dr. O'Leary, being Principal Medical Officer, had nothing whatever to do with such matters. His duties were purely administrative.

The Navy.

The following notice is substituted for that which appeared in the London Gazette of Tuesday, January 8, 1884.]

WHITEHALL, January 5, 1884.

Amethyst, Capt. Brent, senior officer on the South-east Coast of America, was at Monte Video up to Jan. 9; was about to leave for Maldonado and Bahia Blanca.

Boadicea, Capt. Church, flagship of Rear-Admiral Nowell Salmon, V.C., was at St. Helena, on Jan. 21. The Stork, at Simon's Bay, will leave for St. Helena about Feb. 20, to meet London mail of Feb. 21, and convey it to the Commander-in-Chief at St. Paul de Loando. Mails after that date to West Coast. The Opal to be at Simon's Bay about Jan. 25; will remain until return of Commander-in-Chief. The Frolic, Senior Officer, West Coast Division, at present on the south sub-division; will meet Commander-in-Chief at the mouth of the Congo. The Bullfrog and Starling will meet Commander-in-Chief at Cape Coast Castle. The Alecto will meet Commander-in-Chief at the Gambia. Letters from Senior Officer, Cape Division, dated Jan 16, at Simon's Bay. The Flora and Stork at Simon's Bay. The Swinger left Simon's Bay for Australia on Jan. 10.

Carysfort, Capt. Walter Stewart, has been ordered by telegraph to proceed from Alexandria to join the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., at Suakim, and left on Thursday.

Euryalus, Capt. Hastings, C.B., flagship of Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., was at Suakim on Feb. 8. The Commander-in-Chief had landed 150 seamen and marines to garrison Suakim, and was anxiously waiting the arrival of the reinforcements promised by the Admiralty. The Ranger was at Suakim.

Hecla, Capt. Wilson, has been ordered to leave Malta forthwith, and to join the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., at Suakim, without delay.

Himalaya, Capt. Palliser, arrived at Gibraltar on Feb. 6, and was to sail on Feb. 7 for Bermuda. Achilles, Capt. Buller, C.B., was to leave Gibraltar for Cagliari on Feb. 7 with supernumeraries for the Squadron.

Malabar, Capt. Harris, was at Bombay on Jan. 26. A telegram from Bombay announces the death there on that day of Fleet Surg. I. Hanbury, C.B. Dr. Hanbury served as principal medical officer to the Royal Marine Batn. during the campaign in Egypt, and was present at most of the engagements, being created a C.B. and awarded the Egyptian medal, Alexandria clasp, and Khedive's bronze tar.

Minotaur, Capt. Fellowes, flagship of Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, K.G., with the Channel Squadron in company, left Palmer's Bay, Sardinia, on Jan. 31, and arrived and anchored off Cagliari on Feb. 1.

Monarch, Capt. F. D. G. Bedford, has been ordered to leave Malta forthwith, after embarking the Marines of the Mediterranean Fleet, and to proceed to join the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., at Suakim.

Orontes, Capt. Andoe, entered the Suez Canal on Feb. 5, but has been ordered to await further instructions.

Sphinx, Com. Crawford Caffin, having arrived at Berber from Suakim, has been ordered, by telegraph, to return thither at once.

Swiftsure, Capt. Aitchison, flagship of Rear-Admiral Lyons, with the Squadron in company, arrived at Coquimbo on Feb. 3, and would sail for Valparaiso, in continuation of the programme already published.

Tyne, Com. Cochrane, arrived at Gibraltar on Feb. 5, and would leave the day following for England.

Valiant, Capt. Knowles. On Tuesday, the 5th inst., athletic sports were held by this ship's company in a field kindly lent by Mr. Payne, of Bantry, for the occasion. The captain and officers, who were the promoters of these sports, and who do all in their power to make this ship a happy one, contribute liberally towards the money prizes. A large number of visitors, mostly invited by the ship's officers, were present, and the frequent outbursts of laughter and applause showed that they fully appreciated the performances of our "tars." At the close of the sports, the captain addressed a few words to the ship's company, when he remarked that although the weather was very cold, still it was warmed by the presence of the ladies, which remarks were received with cheers. The prizes were kindly presented by Mrs. Payne, of Bantry. There were thirteen events in all, every one of them being well contested. At the conclusion of the sports, three hearty cheers were given for the ladies present, Capt. Knowles, Com. Marrack, and the committee, who worked hard in their endeavours to make these sports a perfect success, which they proved to be, to the enjoyment of every one present.

Wrangler, Lieut. and Com. Arbuthnot, was in the River Plate on Jan. 9.

Cagliari, Sardinia, Sunday, February 3.

Before leaving Majorca, we had an opportunity of visiting the very remarkable caves of Arta. It had been intended to engage a special train to take all the officers of the Squadron who wished to see them, but as the line did not go the whole way, and the supply of conveyances to complete the journey was limited, and was quite insufficient for the number who wanted to go, the idea had to be given up. Arta Bay is on the east side of the Island. We started from Palma on Thursday afternoon, the 24th, at 4 o'clock, and came to in Arta Bay, after general quarters, on Friday forenoon; we stood in in single column line ahead, and anchored pretty close in. Leave was given till 3 o'clock, and a large party from each ship availed themselves of it. The landing-place is within a few minutes' walk of the entrance to the caves; we found guides waiting ready for us, and one accompanied each party, they carried flare-up lamps at the end of long poles, and here and there, where there was a particular show place, they lit blue lights, which had a very pretty effect. The caves are certainly very fine, and well worth a visit; they are very extensive and lofty, and their formation is very wonderful. The sides, in some places, resemble the pipes of an organ, and in others appear as if a waterfall had suddenly been petrified, besides which there are numerous columns, standing, some singly and others in groups. There is a spring inside the caves; the water does not appear to have any particular points about it, but the guides appear to think that a drink from it is quite part of the visit, and you feel as if you were hurting their feelings if you refuse. There was a great gathering of village and country people about the landing-place, to see the ships and watch us landing and embarking; they seemed a fine, healthy, good-looking lot. We left at 3.30, and soon afterwards, the Achilles parted company, in order to proceed to Gibraltar; she goes there to meet Capt. Buller, appointed to succeed Capt. Morant, who is going to Hong Kong as commodore; she will also bring us a number of midshipmen and naval cadets who have been appointed to different ships of the Squadron. Saturday was a quiet day, jogging along under easy steam, going about four knots; in the forenoon, the signal departments were exercised at fog signals, both with guns and steam sirens; in the evening we made sail to a fair wind, and remained under sail for the night. On Sunday morning a strong south-westerly breeze was blowing; after church, being off the entrance of Palmas Bay, we furled sails and stood in, in columns of divisions line abreast, and came to a little before 1 o'clock; soon afterwards the wind freshened and it came on to rain hard, so we were all very glad to be snugly at anchor. We made sail at 8 o'clock on Monday, but very soon had to furl again, as there was too much wind; so we had "clear ship for action," otherwise "Ram-oh" for our forenoon drill. In the afternoon it blew very hard, and we struck lower yards and topmasts, and let go a second anchor; the next day, however, it cleared up and has been fine ever since. Palmas Bay is not at all an inviting looking place; you lie a long way off, and there does not appear to be much of interest. When one does get on shore, there is only a small village, and the surrounding country is not at all picturesque. There is however, something to be got,—some fair bags, principally partridges, were made. During our stay there we got through the harbour Whitehead torpedo exercise for the quarter, completed our boat firing, and got over "night quarters." We left Palmas at 4 p.m. on Thursday, had a fine night for coming round, and arrived here at 9.30, the next forenoon. We came in and anchored in our usual formation of "columns of divisions line ahead," the divisions having closed to 2½ cables before coming to. Directly after anchoring, we hoisted out our armed boats. There is very good snipe-shooting near here, and some decent bags were made yesterday. While at Palmas Bay, the Admiral informed us, by general signal, that the close season in Sardinia commenced on February 1, so we thought there would be no more shooting after leaving that place. But the authorities do not appear to be very particular about it, as since our arrival here, another signal has been made that the prohibition against shooting will not be enforced during the stay of the Squadron here. We are very well off for mails, papers, &c., as they only take 3½ days from England.

THE DEFENCE OF THE CLYDE.

Sir,—I observe that attention is to be paid to the protection of the Mersey and the Bristol Channel. I hope, while our defences are being cared for, the defence of the important River Clyde will not be longer overlooked, with all its great commercial interests, mercantile marine, ship-building yards, coal depôts, &c. The small fort "Matilda," at Greenock, has been long useless, being built round, whilst excellent sites (which I examined) can be found to command the navigation lower down, at the Cumbraes. I have been long much interested about this matter of national importance, as I was for years for the Forth, and it was a great pleasure to observe how well the Government had directed the execution of the works on Inchkeith and Kinghornness, and armed them with 18-ton guns, thus giving confidence and security. We trust now that our two principal Scottish rivers will receive equal attention, the Clyde like the Forth.—I am, &c.,

J. E. Alexander, General.

H.M.S. EXCELLENT.

Sir,—Will you allow me to draw attention through the medium of your paper to a point affecting the efficiency of our seamen gunners? A large number of our ironclads are armed with 10-in. guns mounted on the Scott-pattern carriages and slides. In the Excellent, they have no such thing, and the heaviest gun is a 9-in. The consequence is, that men joining these ships from the Excellent know very little about them, and probably have never seen such a thing as a bow-compressor before. Ships, too, like the Belleisle and Orion, with their 12-in. guns mounted thus, and fitted with hydraulics, require men who have had some instruction in their manipulation. This they cannot get in the Excellent. I should think if they had an establishment where they could impart some knowledge of these, instead of some of the obsolete old 7-in. and 8-in. guns treasured up on board the Excellent, it would be a benefit to the service.
—I am, &c., Lieutenant, R.N.

THE NAVAL GREAT-COAT.

Sir,—The new Naval great-coat (and a very good coat it is) affords no indication of its wearer's rank. So it leads to confusion, as officers of over twenty different ranks and grades all appear alike, when clad in this coat. I would suggest that shoulder-straps, with stars and crown, be attached to it; gold for the executive ranks; silver, with centres of the usual distinguishing colours, for officers of the civil branches; and that the number of stars, &c., should be the same as that of the relative military ranks.
—I am, &c., One Who is Often Puzzled.

PROMOTION IN THE NAVY.

A correspondent writes as follows on the question of promotion in the Navy:—"I am anxious to draw attention to a few facts in which Naval men in general have a close interest. In the first place, why should officers as soon as they are appointed to a ship set to work to find some one to exchange with them? For these reasons,—commissions nominally for three years extend to four or four and a half years; the pay is bad in most branches of the service; promotion is uncertain, and steady work is seldom appreciated. Such unwillingness for sea-service would not exist, if, for instance, an officer could look forward to promotion as a certainty in the future; and it would be a great advantage if within, say, six months of the appointed time an officer could feel sure that his promotion would fall due on a certain date. Under the present régime, officers look upon the profession as disheartening, for their services are seldom recognised in a proper degree. Also, officers should be able to ascertain, when paying off, the length of time likely to elapse before they will be required again for service, for many men who would gladly pursue a course of instruction at a college or a private branch of study, forbear, as they are liable to be called away at any moment, and thus a chance is thrown away of improving their qualifications. While the present system exists of little relaxation, small pay, and in some cases little or no chance of promotion, there is no cause for wonder if men simply enter the Navy from necessity, and afterwards take but slight interest in their work."

London Amusements.

Improved by repetition, Mr. Burnand's latest burlesque-drama of "Camaralzaman," the eighth of its series, is drawing excellent houses at the GAIETY; and Miss E. Farren as the vivacious Prince, Mr. E. Terry as the demon Danasch, and Mr. Elton as the Shah, amuse the audience vastly; while Miss Connie Gilchrist and Miss Phyllis Broughton, as Badoura and Maimoune, successfully exert their powers of fascination in song and dance. It may be interesting to note that the first extravaganza on this subject was produced at the Haymarket Theatre on Boxing Night, 1848, when Mr. and Mrs. Keeley, Miss P. Horton (now Mrs. German Reed), and Miss Reynolds played the prominent parts. How ephemeral these productions are would be shown by a perusal of the couplets so eagerly caught up by playgoers of the last generation. A running commentary would now be required to render the allusions at all intelligible.

At the HAYMARKET, the reproduction of "Peril" is fixed for Saturday, the 16th inst. The comedy has not been acted since its production at the Prince of Wales's in 1876. Mr. Bancroft and Mrs. Bernard Beere now represent the characters previously assigned to Mr. and Mrs. Kendal.

An English version of Millöcker's German opera of the "Bettel-student," prepared by Mr. Beatty Kingston, will be the Easter novelty at the Alhambra. An American adaptation has been very popular in the United States.

The AVENUE THEATRE has been closed for rehearsals during the early part of the week, and M. Planquette's new three-act opera, called "Nell Gwynne," written and produced by Mr. H. B. Farnie, was brought out on Thursday night. Miss Florence St. John represents the heroine, and Miss Giulia Warwick, Mr. Arthur Roberts, and Mr. H. Walsham are prominently included in the cast.

The eminent Italian tragedian, Signor Salvini, will reappear in London at the end of the present month, supported by his own Italian company. On Thursday night, Feb. 28, he will commence an engagement at COVENT GARDEN THEATRE, including in his repertory "Othello," "Macbeth," and "King Lear."

On Tuesday next, Miss Mary Anderson, at the LYCEUM, gives a special morning performance, inviting as her guests all the members of the dramatic profession. No money will be taken for private boxes, stalls, drsss-circle, or upper circle.

On Thursday afternoon, Mr. Augustus Harris invited several thousand poor children to witness the performance of "Cinderella" at DRURY LANE. An address was delivered by the Rev. Canon Shuttleworth, and Mr. Harris recited some graceful lines, written by Mr. Horace Lennard. The children were regaled with oranges and Bath-buns, three thousand of the latter having been generously given by Messrs. Buzzard, of Oxford Street.

The Vokes Family will take a benefit at HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE on Wednesday next. On this special occasion Miss Rosina Vokes will appear. The morning performance will commence with a favourite comedietta, to be followed by the laughable farce entitled, "Good for Nothing," in which Messrs. J. L. Toole, J. Billington, G. Grossmith, T. F. Nye, and Miss Rosina Vokes will appear, concluding with the grand pantomime "Little Red Riding Hood," terminating with the transformation scene. The evening performance will commence with a favourite comedietta, to be followed by the farcial absurdity "The Belles of the Kitchen," by the Vokes Family, and in which Miss Rosina Vokes will appear in her celebrated part of Barbara, concluding with the grand pantomime "Little Red Riding Hood." The popularity of this talented family ought to ensure a full house.

COLOUR-SERJEANTS.

"Novice" writes:—"I beg leave, through the columns of your valuable paper, to point out the anomalus position in relation to that of paymaster or orderly-room serjeants, that Colour-Serjeants of six or more years' standing occupy according to existing regulations. Take, for example, A and B. A is appointed colour-sergeant on April 1, 1876, and still retains that rank. B is appointed paymaster or orderly-room sergeant on April 1, 1878, and on April 1, 1884, receives the rank and pay of a quartermaster-sergeant, and thereby takes rank and precedence of A, who was B's senior for the previous six years; and this through no fault of A, who, I maintain, deserves at least the same recognition of his services as B. I hope this will meet the eye of some one more able to advocate the cause."

AIMING APPLIANCE.

SIR,—As numbers of the Morrison rifled tubes are used in the services, and considering the necessity of being able to hit moving objects, I send you the following for publication, as it might be of use to others. I discovered that with an ordinary fore-sight brazed on to a sight-protector (the base having been previously removed, and the metal coloured black), placed on a Martini-Henry rifle furnished with a Morrison tube, that at 20 or 25 yards, the aim being taken with the sliding-bar down and the back-sight lowered, the bullet will strike the object aimed at.—I am, &c.,

On Saturday evening a private meeting was held at the residence of Lord Archibald Campbell, 14 Beaufort Gardens, W., for the purpose of inaugurating opposition to the proposed abolition of the feather bonnet in the Highland regiments. Lord Archibald Campbell, who presided, said he had called the meeting not in order to create any annoyance at the War Office, but for the purpose of taking steps to induce the authorities to abandon the idea of abolishing the feather bonnet in the Highland regiments. Many officers of distinction were opposed to the abolition of the bonnet, and Lieut.-Col. Gordon Alexander, who recently wrote about his experiences in the East, stated that his regiment marched 500 miles under a burning sun in this bonnet. He concluded by moving, "That the Secretary of State for War be asked in the House of Commons whether it is really intended to abolish the Highland feather bonnet, and in the event of an unfavourable answer, that steps be taken to hold a public meeting on the subject." Col. Alexander seconded the motion which was unanimously agreed to. On the motion of the noble chairman it was further resolved, "That, in the absence abroad of the Duke of Sutherland, Cluny Macpherson be requested to assume the patronage of the movement; and, in the event of its being decided to hold a public meeting, that he be asked to preside on the occasion." A vote of thanks to Lord Archibald Campbell terminated the proceedings.

G. VARNEY.—The draft sailed in H.M. troopship Malabar. The regiment is quartered at Mhow, Bombay.

ERRATA.—We are requested by Messrs. Sir John Brown and Co. to state that they are the manufacturers of the armour-plates of the Warspite, and that those plates have been manufactured on the "Ellis" system, and not on the "Wilson," as stated in our report of the launch of the Warspite. Mr. Ellis also writes to assure us that the Italian and French papers are wrong in attributing the construction of the boilers of the Dandolo to the Messrs. Penn, who engined the Duilio, Italia, and Lepanto, Messrs. Maudslay having supplied the boilers and engines of the Dandolo.

Obituary.

Com. James Joseph Lawson Sisson, R.N., died at Pietermaritzburg, Natal, on Dec. 31, 1883. Com. Sisson had quite recently been appointed post captain by the Natal Harbour Board. He entered the service in 1860, obtained his sub-lieut.'s commission in 1866, and was promoted to lieut. in 1869, and to com. in 1882, after paying off the Firefly, in command of which vessel he served during the Zulu War.

Frederick Day, boatswain's mate, of the Excellent, has been awarded the medal for long service and good conduct.

By a decree recently published, the Czar has ordered the two corvettes about to be constructed at St. Petersburg by the Franco-Russian Company for the Baltic Fleet to be named respectively the Rinda and the Vitiaz. The two gunboats being constructed for the Pacific Fleet, one at Abo, in Finland, and the other in Sweden, are also to be designated the Bober and the Sivootch.

HEADACHES AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering for nearly two-and-a-half years from severe headache and disordered stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your Fruit Salt. Before I had finished one bottle, I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health. Others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford." CAUTION.—Legal rights are protected in every civilised country. Examine each bottle, and see the Capsule is marked "ENO'S FRUIT SALT." Without it, you have been imposed upon by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Directions in Sixteen Languages,—How to Prevent Disease. Prepared only at ENO'S FRUIT SALT WORKS, Hatcham, London, S.E., by J. C. ENO'S Patent.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA,
BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) discovered a remedy to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

Vice - Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See the Times, July 13th, 1864.

CHOLERA,
DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

The General Board of Health, London, report that it acts as a charm, one dose generally sufficient.

From SYMES and CO., Simla:
Dear Sir,—We congratulate you upon the wide-spread reputation this justly esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES and Co., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, his Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a Liquid Medicine which assuages Pain of every kind, affords a calm, refreshing sleep without Headache, and invigorates the Nervous System when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.
The immense sale of this remedy has given rise to many unscrupulous imitations. Of all Chemists, 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, and 4s 6d.

OF VYSE STREET, BIRMINGHAM.

Let every reader of this send for our beautiful, new, Illustrated Catalogue, containing 1,000 unsolicited Testimonials (from all parts of the world), and over 500 fine, copper-plate Engravings of Watches, Jewellery, and Electro-plate, sent gratis and post-free on application to any part of the World.

GENTLEMEN'S FINE SILVER, flat crystal glass, 25s.
LADIES' FINE SILVER, flat crystal glass, 25s.
YOUTH'S FINE SILVER, flat crystal glass, 25s.
LADIES' GOLD LEVERS, in exquisitely chased cases, 70s.
GENTLEMEN'S GOLD LEVERS, engine-turned cases, 80s.

The Rev. Robert Cass, Settle, Yorkshire, writes, February 19, 1880:—"The Lady's Gold Lever Watch received from you for 70s, in size, workmanship, and beautiful appearance, resembles a watch usually sold at £10. It gives entire satisfaction."

From Mr. J. J. Harris, Schoolmaster, 2-18 The Royal Irish Regiment, Aldershot, September 22, 1880:—"I am very much pleased with everything I have had from your Company. The watch (25s) has proved to be an excellent one, and is a marvel of cheapness. It is fully equal to, or indeed superior to, many I have seen purchased by Regimental Clubs for treble the money."

Mr. A. PERCY, VYSE STREET, BIRMINGHAM.

On receipt of which, any watch will be registered post free to any part of the United Kingdom, and for 2s 6d per watch extra to any part of the postal world.

Our Indian Agents are Messrs. King, King, and Co., Bombay, and Messrs. King, Hamilton, and Co., Calcutta, through whom remittances and orders may be sent, and catalogues obtained.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—COUGH, INFLUENZA.—The soothing properties of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the respiratory organs. In common colds and influenza, the Pills, taken internally, and the Ointment rubbed over the chest and throat, are exceedingly efficacious. When influenza is epidemic, this treatment is the easiest, safest, and surest. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, remove all obstacles to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the over-gorged air tubes, and render respirations free, without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves, or depressing the spirits; such are the ready means of saving suffering when any one is afflicted with cold, coughs, bronchitis, and other chest complaints, by which so many persons are seriously and permanently afflicted in most countries.

PREPARATION for the PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—DALMHOR, CRIEFF, PERTHSHIRE.—Mr. W. E. FROST, for ten years of Trin. Coll., Glenalmond (three as Sub-Warden, seven as Master of the Junior School), will OPEN a PREPARATORY SCHOOL in CRIEFF, in SEPTEMBER next. Crieff is a well-known health-resort, and Dalmhor has special advantages for delicate or Indian boys.—Prospectus, list of references, &c., on application to W. E. FROST, Trin. Coll., Glenalmond, Perth.

AN OFFICER in the ARMY WISHES to RECOMMEND strongly a PREPARATORY SCHOOL for YOUNG BOYS on the South Coast.—Apply to Colonel ABBOT ANDERSON, Professor of Military Topography, R.M.C., Yorktown, Farnborough.

MILITARY EDUCATION, GERMANY.—Colonel BERDOE WILKINSON, late R.E., formerly in charge of the Ordnance Survey in Ireland, and Lieutenant-Colonel WILKINSON SHAW, M.A. (Staff College), late Garrison-Instructor at Aldershot, prepare Candidates for Sandhurst and Woolwich, and for Line Commissions through the Militia.

At the five Militia Competitions which have taken place since September 1, 1881, Colonel WILKINSON and Lieutenant-Colonel SHAW have secured for their Pupils THIRTY-EIGHT COMMISSIONS, although they have only Prepared and sent up a very Limited Number of Candidates. A list of successful Pupils, showing the high places taken by them, will be furnished on application.

At the Militia Literary Examinations held during the same period, a Number of Pupils have also passed; in this Competition the FIRST PLACE was taken in April last by Lieutenant Lord Skelmersdale, and the SECOND PLACE in the recent October Examination by the only candidate sent up, Lieutenant the Honourable Victor A. Pelham.

The results of the last WOOLWICH and SANDHURST EXAMINATIONS have also added to the general score, which now amounts to SEVENTY-SEVEN SUCCESSES, obtained by Pupils since September 1, 1881.

Address, DARMSTADT, GERMANY.

LIEUTENANTS of MILITIA desirous of competing for Line Commissions can be received by the Rev. WALTER BAKER, M.A., at Batcombe Rectory, Evercreech, Bath. They will be thoroughly prepared in all Military Subjects by two Officers who for several years past have been engaged with distinguished success in this special work.

Great individual attention is secured, both Instructors are resident and give their whole time, very few Pupils are taken, and steady work is insisted on. Since the introduction of the Military Competitive, out of Forty-four Lieutenants of Militia sent up, Twenty-seven have been successful, several taking high places in the list.

A Large Staff of Experienced Tutors, all resident, assist in preparing for the Qualifying Examinations, and for the Sandhurst and Woolwich Competitions.

References to parents of pupils successful at all Examinations, INCLUDING SANDHURST and MILITIA COMPETITIVE in 1882 and 1883. All sent up for the last Militia Qualifying Examination passed.

THE MOUNTED SERVICE BOOT.—PATENT.

A COMPLETELY NEW and USEFUL INVENTION. By a CAVALRY OFFICER.

It is equally suitable for riding or walking, and consists of an upper and lower part, which, when adjusted by the peculiar arrangement of the spur, forms a complete riding boot, and at the same time the comfort of a boot and gaiter for walking is ensured. The lower part can be worn also as an ordinary walking boot. ECONOMY, COMFORT, and PORTABILITY.

OROIDE GOLD JEWELLERY (REGD.)

"Recommends itself not alone to those of limited means, but to the wealthy, who, when frequenting large gatherings, whether at racecourses, theatres, public meetings, or even on that sacred thoroughfare, the king's highway, have known what it is to be robbed of their valuables."

OROIDE GOLD WATCHES,

The "SERVICE" KEYLESS WATCH.
Open face, jewelled in eight holes, Two Guineas, post free.

"The watches of this patent are in no respect different from gold ones. The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose." OROIDE GOLD SCARF PINS, 2s 6d to 5s, post free.

"The author of this volume having been engaged for many years in preparing candidates for the different examinations into which navigation enters, has felt the want of a text-book, embracing all that the different examining boards embody under that head, and has endeavoured, and we think successfully, to supply that want by the present treatise. To the student this work will be found most useful; the chapters are well arranged, the exercises at the end of each chapter are pertinent to the preceding text, and require the student to digest the text in order to answer them satisfactorily."—Nature.

JOHANN HOFF'S MALT EXTRACT

HAS THE GREATEST REPUTATION IN THE WORLD, AND IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

JOHANN HOFF, of Berlin, is the first Inventor of Malt Extract, which is universally acknowledged to be a most valuable dietetic beverage. It invigorates and restores the aged, the weak, the ailing.

Beware of SPURIOUS IMITATIONS.

JOHANN HOFF, of Berlin, possesses 59 Titled Decorations and Awards for his famous Malt Extract, which has been used by their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales. He is Purveyor to nearly all the Courts of Europe.

Beware of Bogus Medals, Decorations.

JOHANN HOFF, of Berlin, has the most numerous testimonials of any article ever produced in the world, and no other Hoff's Malt Extract is genuine unless it has the name "JOHANN" before the "HOFF," nor has there been any other sold in this Country until recently.

Beware of False Testimonials.

JOHANN HOFF, of Berlin: his success has induced many imitations; the public are therefore requested to see they get the genuine. THE CRISIS IN THE SOUDAN.

The latest Telegrams are as follows :—

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

Berber, Feb. 8.—Intelligence received here by letter from Khartoum, dated the 5th inst., states that all was quiet at that place.

Cairo, Feb. 8.—Baker Pasha proclaimed a state of siege at Suakim, on account of the disaffection prevailing among his troops.

Sir E. Baring and Sir E. Wood had a conference this morning with Nubar Pasha, to concert measures for the defence of Suakim. It is believed that the greater part of Baker Pasha's remaining force will be recalled thence.

Malta, Feb. 8.—H.M.'s ironclad Monarch and the torpedo ship Hecla sailed to-day for Port Said, the Hecla having on board 300 marines for Suakim.

(EXCHANGE TELEGRAPH COMPANY'S TELEGRAM.)

Paris, Friday.—The Cairo correspondent of the Figaro states that Gen. Gordon was made prisoner by a Shmarieh tribe, at two hours' march from Korosko.

The same correspondent says that Baker Pasha has been recalled to Cairo, to take command of the gendarmerie at that place.

(FROM THE SECOND EDITION OF THE "TIMES.")

Cairo, Feb. 8.—Nubar Pasha, Sir C. Stephenson, and Sir E. Wood are now in consultation with Sir E. Baring at the Residency. It is considered advisable that a ship should be sent to Trinkitat, on the possibility of the recovery of survivors of the recent disaster, or to obtain tidings of them.

Our Woolwich correspondent, writing last night, says :— "An unusual stir was produced at Woolwich Dockyard yesterday morning by the arrival of a long train of Army Service waggons in charge of the Transport Corps, and loaded with casks and cases containing military accoutrements to the number of 10,000 sets, which are to be immediately exchanged for a new equipment to be supplied to the Household Guards and other troops in the Home District. The returned stores are, for the most part, still serviceable, and will, after examination and repair, be again brought forward for use ; but it is thought better to have the whole of the accoutrements passed through the inspection branch, and issue a new supply, than to make the selection of condemned articles through the regimental quartermasters. In the Commissariat stores there were also signs of special exertion, and although an official denial was given to a statement which has been published to the effect that £24,000 is devoted to supplies for Egypt, there is admitted to be a strain upon the Department, in consequence of the expected withdrawal of the British troops having been disappointed. A train of fifteen trucks arrived in the dockyard yesterday from Portsmouth laden with preserved horse-fodder condensed in bales, and very large quantities of the new moss-litter is being imported from Germany. The moss is found to be a convenient and economical substitute for straw in making beds for horses, and being closely compressed, takes up but little space on shipboard, which is an important consideration. A detachment of Royal Engineers has been sent from Chatham to Woolwich, to assist in removing a large collection of telegraph and torpedo cables from the inner docks to the new tanks and stores constructed near the electrical establishment at the other end of the dockyard, and the graving dock and basins will thus be set free for other purposes, if required. The manufacturing departments at the Royal Arsenal are fully employed in all their branches, and under a little pressure in some cases; while an expected discharge of a thousand hands from the Laboratory, which was considered imminent a week ago, has now been indefinitely postponed. In the carriage-store of the Ordnance Department, a train of dummy horses is being equipped, to represent a mule train conveying a battery of the 7-pounder screw-guns for mountain service, and many improvements have been introduced into this useful equipment since it was last exhibited before the Duke of Cambridge and his Staff. The battery consists of six powerful guns, each taking into three pieces, and there is one carriage to spare, with an ample reserve of all the stores and fittings required for the guns. The loads are so divided that about 90 mules are necessary for the conveyance of the battery, each mule-load bearing a burden of not more than 200 lbs. Every section of the equipment is adjusted with a view to the guns being put together and mounted ready for action in the shortest possible time, and the whole battery-train has a smart and business-like appearance, which is much commended by the officers who have seen it."

The Standard declares that the country is no longer in a submissive, or even in an indulgent mood ; and it will insist that the Ministry shall discard, once for all, its crude and childish notions concerning the capacity of the Egyptian people, whether for fighting or for self-government, and shall pursue, in a straightforward and consistent manner, those safer methods which public opinion has long indicated. To put the matter plainly and succinctly, the Government, if bent upon remaining in power, must retrace every step they have taken during the last 17 months, and must put things back in Egypt where they were on the morrow of Tel-el-Kebir. The sole source of order, the sole guarantee of stability in Egypt, is the English flag ; and, after the dismal disasters of the last few days, something more than a symbol is required to satisfy people that the English flag covers statesmanlike intentions. The Standard does not doubt the individual capacities of Ministers, but, collectively, they have committed blunders and invited disasters to which this generation has, happily, witnessed no precedent. Their staunchest apologists have given up defending them ; their more judicious friends having taken to admonition, instead of adulation. So long as they continue to administer the affairs of the nation, the nation will extend to them the requisite support ; but it will do so only on condition that they turn over an entirely new leaf, fling overboard their superfluous baggage of sentiment and abstract principles, and conduct the business of the Empire in business-like spirit.

The Times repeats that the first step to be taken ought to be the proclamation of a formal protectorate. This would secure an immense access of moral strength for any military measures which, in the circumstances of the case, the most competent advisers may suggest. It would then, at least, be understood at Paris, at Cairo, at Khartoum, and in the camp of the Mahdi, that our interference would no longer be governed by caprice and limited by supersubtle conditions, but that the dominant authority of England would be construed as having its duties as well as its rights. The Times can see no alternative policy that is not fraught with numberless possibilities of disgrace and danger.

The Daily Telegraph points out that we are already at war, and that the time has gone by for any more of those halting, half-hearted measures, a series of which has led us to the present confusion. A dose or two of English steel and bullets scientifically administered to these barbarians would clear the Eastern Soudan of them, save Gordon and Khartoum, and relieve Egypt from a danger which grows darker and more threatening with every hour of our present vacillation. Such action, which needs but a manly and wise resolve, would be the right and redeeming answer to the impeachment impending. If such a policy be not adopted, the Daily Telegraph foresees a series of evil events, inevitably leading to larger necessities and far costlier sacrifices.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR EGYPT.

The Marines of the Mediterranean Fleet have been ordered to garrison Suakim. Five companies of 100 men each, one Artillery and four Infantry, are under orders to embark this day at Portsmouth, in the Poonah, for the Mediterranean, presumably to take their places. The following officers are detailed for duty : — Captains Bridge, Polkinghorne, Robbins, Montgomery, and Gordon (in waiting). Subalterns : Lieutenants Roche, Darling, Money, and Hornilow. New Commissions : Lieutenants Hamper, Holman, Townhead, David, and Byrne. Royal Marine Artillery : Captain L. R. Connolly and Lieutenant Campbell. No Field Officer is at present to be sent. Major Colwell, serving on board H.M.S. Alexandra, is to command the Marines who are to be landed at Suakim.

THE COMMUTATION OF PENSIONS.

The following are the amended regulations for the commutation of pensions of officers of the Indian service :—1. These regulations shall be applicable only to officers retired on or after July 1, 1881. 2. An officer may be allowed to commute a portion, not exceeding one-third, of his pension, which commutation may take place on retirement, or at any time subsequent thereto. 3. An officer in Europe desirous of commuting must make application in writing to the Under-Secretary of State for India, stating his desire so to commute, and furnishing information as to his age, rank, and the amount of his pension. 4. If the Secretary of State for India in Council shall approve the commutation the officer will be so informed, and his application will be forwarded to the standing medical board at the India Office. 5. The board will require the officer to give such information as to his health and habits as is usual in the case of persons proposing to assure their lives in assurance companies, and he will be required to submit himself for personal examination by the board at the India Office. 6. An officer in India desirous of commuting, must address the authorities of his presidency. He will be required to go through similar forms; boards, which will when practicable be presided over by the chief civil medical administrative officer of the Government, being formed in the presidency towns of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, under orders of the respective Governments. 7. The basis of commutation, subject to an addition of years of age in the case of impaired lives, shall be the following table, the age of the officer being reckoned at the age he will attain on the birthday next succeeding the date upon which the capitalised sum will become payable :—

8. The commutation having been sanctioned, the applicant will be informed, and will have the option of withdrawing his application within thirty days after receiving notice. 9. If the applicant shall not withdraw his application within that period, the decision will be considered final, and the commutation of pension will take place absolutely. 10. In every case the capitalised sum will be payable in India, the sterling amount being converted at the official rate of exchange for the year in which the payment is made. 11. In the case of an officer in Europe, the capitalised sum will be payable at the expiration of two months, and in the case of an officer in India, at the expiration of one month, from the date of the commutation being sanctioned. In each case the officer's pension will be issued in full up to the date of payment, unless any delay has been caused by the officer's own fault or that of his agents. 12. In any case in which a pensioner shall accept public employment, involving the withholding of pension, a deduction will be made from the salary payable to him equal to the amount which would have been abated from the pension if it had not been commuted, and, in the event of his becoming entitled to a pension in respect of such employment, the amount of such pension granted to him shall not exceed the amount which he might have received had his pension not been so commuted.

THE NAVY IN PARLIAMENT.

The Viscount Lewisham will, on an early day, call attention to the condition of the Marine forces, and move a resolution.

Admiral Sir John Hay will, on Friday, February 15, call attention to the number and condition of our armour-clad Navy, and move for a committee thereon. No one can say this is premature.

Sir Henry Wolff will, on Monday, ask the Secretary to the Admiralty whether there is any truth in the statement made in the Army and Navy Gazette of January 22, that, in consequence of the large number of seamen suffering from venereal disease, orders have been given for men still diseased, but whose cases are not complicated, being sent to sea from hospital.

Sir Henry Wolff will, on Tuesday, ask the Secretary to the Admiralty whether the Admiralty have considered the sentences of courts-martial for breaches of Naval discipline, and whether they contemplate bringing forward any amendment of the Naval Discipline Act with the view of preventing the passing of sentences of penal servitude, except in very aggravated cases; and whether the Admiralty is willing to reconsider the case of the seaman Endenby, of her Majesty's troopship Assistance, who was sentenced to penal servitude for an assault on a ship's corporal; and of Quinn, in whose favour a memorial has been presented to the Admiralty.

Sir Henry Wolff will, on Tuesday, ask the Secretary to the Admiralty, whether her Majesty's Government will agree to the appointment of a Select Committee of this House to consider and report upon the pay and allowances of officers and seamen of the Royal Navy.

LORD WOLSELEY'S STATEMENT.

SIR,—It has been truly observed that if we are to judge from the speech delivered by Lord Wolseley on Saturday week, nothing could be more satisfactory than the present state of the Army; but let us recollect that he is speaking in defence of a system, for which he is, rightly or wrongly, supposed to be mainly responsible, and that he can hardly be expected to throw stones at the house he lives in. The statistics he quotes as to age, height, and chest measurement of the Army at the present moment are so startlingly identical with the figures in the General Annual Return for 1882, dated March 1, 1883, and signed by himself, as Adjutant-General of the Forces, that I invite his attention to what is, to say the least, a most extraordinary coincidence, more especially when it is remembered that on Jan. 1, 1883, there were 11,117 Reserve men in the ranks, which naturally raised all these figures to an abnormal height, and when it is also further recollected that there has been within the past year a reduction in each standard for recruits. Lord Wolseley states that at the present moment there are in the Army 91 per cent. of men over 20 years of age, 58 per cent. who stand 5 ft. 7 in. high, and 83 per cent. with 35 in. chest measurement. On Jan. 1, 1883 (quoting from the above-mentioned return), the number of men over 20 was 911 per 1,000, or 91·1 per cent.; those of 5 ft. 7 in. and upwards were 588 per 1,000, or 58·8 per cent.; and those with a chest measurement of 35 in. and upwards, 838 per 1,000, or 83·8 per cent. Leaving out the decimals, the figures are identical with those quoted by Lord Wolseley as those of present date, and he will find it difficult to persuade any one who has inquired into the subject, that after losing upwards of 11,000, restored to the Reserve, together with a largely-increased number transferred to Reserve in 1883, on completion of their colour-service, and an abnormally large number of recruits of reduced age and height taken on the strength, the figures can possibly remain the same as they were at a date specially favourable for his statistics. Averages and per-centages are at all times both misleading and perplexing to the general public, and instead of giving them in that shape, let me supply a few figures from Lord Wolseley's return (which he did not quote on Saturday), giving the actual numbers below the various figures he gave. Those soldiers under 5 ft. 7 in. were 75,796; under 35 in. chest measurement, 29,772; and under 20 years of age, 16,451. Of these latter, 2,367 were in Egypt or the colonies, and 1,403 in India, though the existing regulations ostensibly preclude soldiers under 20 being sent to India, or climates of a similar nature. Now as to the actual number of recruits out of the gross number recruited which are available for service at the expiration of three month from the date of enlistment. In the year 1882, 91 per thousand, and in 1881, 100 per thousand, had disappeared from the muster-rolls before the three months had expired. The great majority of these had purchased their discharges under Sec. 81 of the Army Act of 1881, and the remainder is made up by desertion, and discharges for fraudulent enlistment, being found medically unfit, &c. Taking the average of these two years, it is safe to assume that 95 per thousand, out of the 33,000 recruited in 1883, will not be available before the first three months of the present year expire; this will reduce the effective total for the year by over 3,000 men, and adding it to the deficit from the same causes for the years 1881 and 1882, it will be found that the country is 7,851 men short in those three years of the number returned as actually enlisted. In 1880, Lord Airey's Commission reported that at the rate of depletion then going on (and still maintained), 36,000 recruits would be annually required to fill up the ranks. This would give a total for the past three years of 108,000, whereas the numbers actually obtained and remaining in service at the end of three months were—in 1881, 23,295; in 1882, 21,247; and in 1883 (presumably), 29,865; total, 74,407; or about the number which should have been obtained in two years instead of three, and according to the opinion and report of the most competent authorities serving on the Royal Commission, 33,593 men short of the country's requirements. How long are we to live in this fool's paradise, listening to figures and averages which the facts belie; and are we to wait contentedly, like our neighbours across the Channel did, till the storm bursts, and we find there is no door to keep it out? One small illustration of the efficiency (?) and working of the present system may not be out of place here. In 1882 the 1st Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers embarked for Egypt, leaving behind 400 men not allowed to go with their battalion in consequence of their youth, and the ranks were filled up from the Reserve men, most of whom had not previously served in the regiment, and were strangers to both officers, non-commissioned officers, comrades, and to each other. The effect of this will be appreciated by those who have served with a battalion so constituted on active service. The battalion returned from Egypt in due course, and in September last was ordered to India. It was then found that owing to its being chiefly composed of recruits, and men with only one or two years to complete their service, there were only somewhere about 400 men available to embark, and it eventually sailed nearly 500 men short of its establishment, leaving behind, with only two officers and a sprinkling of non-commissioned officers, 450 men, who have now been attached for four months to another regiment, with what results to discipline and training can be better imagined than described. Still, we are told by those who ought to know better that the system is working admirably, and that the military machine is in the highest state of efficiency.—I am, &c., M. P.

GENERAL GORDON IN EGYPT.

A correspondent has sent us the remarks which follow this week, on which we have a few words to say afterwards:—"I have been struck by the knowledge of human nature displayed in your leading article of last Saturday, wherein you hint that those authorities who have been more or less superseded by the despatch of Gen. Gordon to the Soudan are likely to be unconsciously ill-disposed to assist him. This view has received forcible illustration. The Standard of the 26th ult., through its Cairo correspondent, tells us of the apparently cordial way in which that General was received by Sir Evelyn Wood, but adds that the latter, after the meeting, remarked that "he [Gordon] was too good for his time, and should have lived centuries ago; and compared him to the Chevalier Bayard." Now, people who "read between the lines" cannot but see that such words convey a covert sneer, and that they were intended to lower the high estimate formed of Gordon's character and capabilities, and imply that he was, in fact, too impracticable for success in the present day, and was but a Quixotic individual. In an Eastern country the natives are quick in discovering the hidden meaning in figurative speaking, and in this case it may be feared that the Egyptian authorities have not been slow to take their cue from the openly-expressed detraction of the new Governor-General of the Soudan. Gen. Gordon is not, though, the only officer against whom unseemly jealousy appears to be entertained. The Standard of the 4th inst., by its Trinkatat correspondent, utters an ominous warning from another quarter. We are told, 'The last detachment of troops to arrive came furnished with old muskets, and some with no arms at all; all this, too, in face of Baker Pasha's repeated requests for spare arms. The Cairo authorities, including their English advisers, are treating Baker Pasha shamefully. It seems as if they wished he should fail in attempting to relieve Tokar and Sinkat.'"

[We confess that our correspondent has somewhat startled us by directing a remark of a general character to a specific address, but we cannot admit the correctness of the innuendo that Sir Evelyn Wood's open expression of a very common opinion about General Gordon's character was dictated by unconscious envy or indisposition to assist him. Any one who knows Sir Evelyn Wood certainly would acquit him of any capacity for covert sneering, and the comparison of Major-General Gordon to the Chevalier Bayard, which was made in private and confidential communication to the Standard correspondent, was meant, no doubt, to convey the Sirdar's fear that Gordon would make too little of the practical difficulty of his desperate enterprise. Any way, it is not easy to see how a conversation with a London correspondent in English could influence the Egyptian authorities, but really, if Major-General Gordon, who had received carte blanche, and who was master of the situation, chose to go out on his prestige as a boucq émissaire into the wilderness without escort, or any solid basis to rest the hope of success upon, it cannot be wondered at if practical people on the spot did consider him "Quixotic." If it can be proved that the Sirdar, Sir Evelyn Wood, was in any way responsible for the way in which Baker Pasha's levies were armed, we shall not defend him; but it is only due to his services and his reputation to disbelieve that he was in any way concerned in their armament, till the contrary is proved. At all events, there were in 1882 instances nearer home recently of something remarkably similar.—ED. A. and N. G.]

REGIMENTAL DEPÔTS.

"Fair-play" writes:—"In looking over G.O. 3 of 1884, I was glad to find that the authorities had laid down instructions by which Regimental Depôts are to be considered as a portion of their Line battalions in something more than name; hitherto, with some regiments this has not been the case, particularly as regards the senior non-commissioned officers, who, when once sent to the depôt, were considered as non-effective, so far as regards further promotion in the Line battalions; while, on the other hand, it must be confessed that a turn of 'fortune's wheel' sometimes brought a junior at the depôt over the heads of his seniors in the Line battalions. There is, however, one part of the General Order in question that strikes me as not being quite right, and it is in the hope that you will use your influence towards its speedy remedy that I have ventured to address you on the subject. For instance, while arrangements have been made to ensure the senior non-commissioned officers of the Line battalions getting their fair share of promotion in the depôt, nothing is said about giving the senior non-commissioned officers of the depôt their turn of promotion to the higher grades in the Line battalions, as is the case with the junior non-commissioned officers. And now that I am upon this subject, I will point out another fact that will further show that the depôts are not fairly treated. It is this. When a vacancy exists for quartermaster in any of the Militia battalions in the Regimental District, the quartermasters of the Line battalions get the option of transferring their services to the Militia (this is as it should be), before the claim of any Warrant or non-commissioned officer to promotion is considered. Should they not wish to leave the battalions in which they are serving, the claims of such Warrant or non-commissioned officer serving with the depôt and Line battalions who may have been recommended for the vacancy are then considered; but if, on the other hand, a quartermaster serving in one of the Line battalions accepts the transfer, then (mark the difference) the only candidate whose recommendation can be considered is the one recommended by the officer commanding the Line battalion in which the vacancy then exists, notwithstanding the fact that there may be other candidates belonging to the other battalions or the depôt, whose claims may have been repeatedly brought forward by their respective commanding officers. This mode of procedure can be repeated over and over again, so long as vacancies occur in the Militia, by one or other of the Line battalions, thereby cutting off the depôt non-commissioned officers from all chance of attaining to that rank, for very few officers commanding battalions will go to the depôt to recommend a candidate that has been there some years, if they can find one in their own battalion. These are facts which I hope will meet the eye of some person who will be willing and has the ability to remedy them."

NON-EXECUTIVE PAY IN THE NAVY.

SIR,—Your correspondent "R. N.," in his concluding remarks, says, "recrimination will do no good, let all ranks pull together, &c.," a sentiment for which I thank him; but the errors into which he has fallen, and the severe language he has thought proper to use, impel me to correct him, which I hope to be able to do, without laying myself open to the charge of recrimination. I have gone thoroughly into the tables of comparative pay which "R. N." characterises as "incorrect, and deliberately misleading," and says he "cannot call them facts," and have come to the conclusion that they are eminently correct, for they have evidently been compiled with the utmost care; after saying which, I will point out the numerous errors into which "R. N." has fallen. "R. N." says it is misleading and incorrect to take the old paymasters and old engineers as the basis for such a statement. I fail to see the force of such an argument, for the simple reason that there would be no comparison, if only a part was reviewed; to arrive at the fact that the engineer is the worst paid officer in the service, it is necessary to compare him with some one, and when making the comparison it ought to be complete, hence the necessity of taking account of all paymasters and all chief engineers, and not those only who have been recently promoted. Now, what do we find? The senior chief engineer (1867) served 14 years of junior service before promotion, and this period of junior service increased in other cases every year till 1876, when it stood at 21 years. In 1877, a change for the better occurred, which has continued till the present time, the junior chief engineer having 18 years' junior service. But when we turn to the paymasters, what do we find? The senior paymaster (1850) served one year of junior service, and the junior paymaster, 15½ years. To be more definite, however, without being over tedious, the first 50 chief engineers served an average of 18 years' junior service, the second 50 served 18·6 years, the third 50 served 17·6 (caused by a number of special promotions), the fourth 50 served 17·8 years, and the remainder 18·6 years, or a mean of the whole of 18 years' junior service; while the paymasters stand thus,—the first 50 served an average of seven years' junior service, the second 50 served 8·9 years, the third 50 served 13·1 years, and the fourth 50 served 14·8 years, or a mean of the whole of 10·9 years. "R. N." states that "the latest promotions in the respective branches are an engineer 11¾ years' standing to chief engineer, and assistant-paymaster of 15½ years to paymaster." Such is not the case. The last promotion to chief engineer is after 18 years' junior service; "R. N." evidently forgets that engineers serve six or seven years as assistant-engineer, all time over the age of 21, so that it is not absurd, but it is quite correct to speak of engineers of 17 or 21 years' junior service. The case of engineers who have not qualified for promotion has evidently not been taken into account in the tables of comparative pay, as "R. N." supposes. "R. N." says the author of the tables has carefully suppressed the fact that chief engineers receive charge-pay. True, chief engineers do receive charge-pay, but it is no more part of their "pay" than the different allowances paymasters receive while serving in troopships, guardships, and other appointments is part of theirs. Chief engineers are being continually reminded of their charge-pay, which, after all, only amounts to an average of 1·32 shillings per day to each chief engineer employed. "R. N." accuses the author of the comparative tables of omitting the fact that chief engineers are retired at 55 and paymasters at 60, "which would deduct some £3,000 from the total of the paymaster's cash during service." Not at all; the table speaks for itself, and hides nothing; the age for retiring has nothing to do with it. At this present time, there are only seven chief engineers who receive 22s. per day (a number which is likely to be stationary for years), while there are 30 paymasters receiving 33s. per day. There are no chief engineers receiving rates of pay between 17s. and 22s. per day; but there are no less than 76 paymasters receiving rates of pay between 17s. and 33s. per day. To many chief engineers it has been a sad fact that they were retired at 55, having, even at that age, been unable to complete their 11 years. Engineers are not forgetful of the existence of inspectors and chief inspectors of machinery, but they do not happen to be heads of departments on board ships, as is the case with paymasters and chief engineers. But even when an inspector of machinery is attached to a squadron, his pay is 8s. per day less than the pay of the paymaster on board the same flag-ship (reckoning allowances, of which the inspector of machinery has none). Every paymaster may reach the pay of 33s. per day, but only one in 14 chief engineers can ever hope to be an inspector of machinery; and of the remainder, a very large proportion can never attain to more than 17s. per day, in consequence of being kept so long in the junior rank. I will conclude this inordinately long letter with another comparison of the smallness of chief engineer's pay, and one that tells against the chief engineer, in consequence of the ships having the maximum charge-pay. The case I select is the average pay of non-executive heads of departments in all the armour-clad ships in commission,—medical officers, 26s. 6d. per day; accountant officers, 25s. 7d. per day; engineer officers, 21s. 4d. per day. The allowances to paymasters has not been reckoned in this, but the charge-pay of chief engineers has. And yet not one of these chief engineers has ever cost the State one farthing for his education, and even those who are now educated at the dockyards can hardly be said to be educated at the expense of the State, seeing that £30 per annum is paid for two years and £20 per annum for the next two years, and his labour is surely worth something. And during that time he receives for the first year the sum of 1s. per week; for the second year, 2s. per week; the third year, 3s. per week; and in the fourth year, 5s. per week.—I am, &c.,

AN ENGINEER OFFICER.

EXTENDING THE FIELD OF NAVAL EMPLOYMENT.

One of the most important lessons we learnt during the war with Russia in 1855 and 1856 was the necessity for providing a permanent force of seamen, in order to be in a position to rapidly man the ships-of-war available for increasing our Naval force, as soon as hostilities become imminent. Amongst other provisions, the extension of the continuous-service system, and the transfer to Admiralty control of the Coastguard, were the two most important measures of those that have combined to place this country in such a position as regards the personnel of its Navy, that there would now be but little difficulty in manning all the men-of-war prepared for the pendant. It is generally admitted that the efficiency of the Coastguard for its civil duties during peace-time has also been greatly increased,—so much so, that the reflection arises whether this splendid force could not be still further utilised. Might not, for instance, the necessary provisions for saving life from the numerous wrecks that occur on our coast, and which has so long been left to private munificence, now become a national service, under the same organisation? It is to be hoped that these and other similar extensions of the field of Naval employment will receive the same earnest consideration in this country as appears to have been bestowed upon it by Mr. Chandler, the Secretary of the United States Navy, as shown in the able annual report just issued by him, from which we quote the parts devoted to the subject as published by the Army and Navy Journal, of New York:—

"In the report from this Department of last year, it was affirmed, as a broad and salutary principle of administration, that the officers and seamen of the Navy should be employed to perform all the work of the national Government upon or in direct connection with the ocean. It was shown that such an extension of the field of Naval employment would strengthen and invigorate the service without any detriment to existing interests, while the fusion of all branches of nautical administration would secure concentration of purpose, unity of action, and broader and more substantial results. This recommendation of last year is renewed, and with reference to it the Secretary says:—The recommendations made in the report of last year were followed by considerable discussion, of which a brief notice may fitly be taken. In some of the remonstrances presented by commercial and other organisations the various subjects were so confused and distorted, and the general purpose of the recommendations was so entirely ignored, that the objections failed to have a bearing upon the actual merits of the question. Other remonstrances were notoriously procured by persons who are supported and given undue importance by the existing system, and who were alarmed lest change should destroy their occupations. In many instances the representations were not full or deliberate expressions of the opinion of the bodies whose names were used. Notably was this the case with the resolutions of the Chamber of Commerce of New York, where the mover of an adverse resolution became himself the chairman of the committee to which the consideration of the measures was referred, and secured the adoption of a substantially similar resolution by a vote of only 17 out of 740 members of the Chamber. Few of the arguments adduced by interested parties seem to have force against the broad general proposition that the direction of these nautical subjects should be united, and that the Nautical Department of the Government should carry on the work. The greater portion of them were based upon harsh criticisms of the past management of the Navy Department, and of the conduct of officers and seamen of the Navy. To these no rejoinder will be here engaged in, for an obvious reason. The question whether, as a permanent assignment, any particular subject-matter most appropriately belongs to one department or to another must be settled on its merits, upon the assumption that both departments either are or will be ably and honestly conducted. Integrity and capacity in executive business are not the exclusive possession of any one branch of the Government, or of any one body of officials. To say that Naval officers cannot wisely be employed on board the cruising cutters, whose principal use has no relation to the appropriate business of the Treasury Department, because occasionally dutiable articles have been brought home in naval vessels, is as unreasonable as to argue that the supervising inspectors should not inspect steam-vessels, because, in spite of their honesty and ability, terrible explosions of boilers have taken place directly after their most rigid examinations and unqualified certificates of approval. The real point in the present question, from which Congress should not be diverted by interested clamour, is: Ought these kindred branches of the public service to be united; and under which of the two departments, when both are well managed, should they be most naturally and appropriately conducted? To stigmatise Naval officers as idlers who are seeking to obtain an undue share of the civil administration is as unjust as it is illogical. If Naval officers are idlers, it is because idleness is enforced upon them by a system which excludes them from the occupations for which they are peculiarly fitted. The remedy lies in giving them the employment which the Naval service proper, in time of peace, canno from its very nature fully afford. If they desire to obtain such employment, the desire is worthy and commendable. In the present case, the charge against them of encroachment is without foundation, since the recommendations in this report have been made, not at the instance or solicitation of officers of the Navy, but upon a careful consideration by the head of the Department of the principles that should govern their employment. If the Navy Department has not been wisely, economically, and energetically administered, and if Naval officers have their faults or their vices, thorough reforms should be instituted, and such have been and will be unsparingly recommended and carried out. If they cannot be effected under the present distribution of executive powers; and if, on the other hand, the management of nautical affairs is an appropriate attribute of fiscal administration, then the existence of a separate nautical department is an error, which should be rectified by placing the Navy under a bureau in the already comprehensive Department of the Treasury. But whether attached to one or to the other, all branches of nautical administration should be united. As well might the various parts of financial work be scattered among different departments, as the fragments of nautical work be separated into an ocean navy here and a coast navy there; a survey of foreign coasts under one department and a survey of our own, under another; a bureau and an engineer corps for the engines of Naval steamers, and another bureau and another engineer corps for those of merchant steamers. Wherever the direction of nautical affairs is placed, all its branches should be under a common head, and should work with a common purpose. One general argument has been presented against the transfer, in the form of an objection to employing military officers in civil duties. This is wholly out of place, when applied to the Army or Navy of a popular Government in a law-abiding community. In a despotism, where a Standing Army is maintained without the consent of the people, and may be used for the repression of liberty, it would be wise to resist the extension of military employment to civil labours, even though the saving of expense should partly balance the evils resulting from an increase of despotic control. But in the United States the Army and Navy are the creation of the popular will. They are organised and supported only because the people deem them necessary for national existence and safety, and they can be disbanded at the pleasure of the people. They are equally with all other officials under the direction of a civil administration. They can, therefore, be wisely and safely employed in any work that will not impair their efficiency or discipline, and where their employment would save money that would otherwise be paid to maintain an unnecessary civil establishment. They should by all means be so employed when the service will not only relieve and benefit the people, but will add to the professional experience and to the fitness for war duties of the officers and men. Their exclusion can only be justified on the theory that to render them harmless they must be rendered inefficient; a theory which, if carried out, would result in the immediate abolition of the service. The argument in favour of the full use of the Navy in all appropriate labours of peace becomes stronger as the nation seems more unlikely to engage in actual warfare. Our international policy tends to peace with all the world; our conflicts will be infrequent; and therefore more than all other nations we should utilise our officers, seamen, and ships in the nautical works which peace times require. Such are their appropriate sphere, not for their private benefit, but for the greater good of the Government, to which they desire to give the fullest possible service. In presenting its recommendations last year, the Department made every effort to mature its opinion by the fullest and most exhaustive examination of the subject. Had it done otherwise, it would have fallen short of its duty. The question has a vital bearing upon the improvement of the Navy, and is in no way dependent upon the character of administration for the time being in this or that department. It is a broad question of permanent policy and statesmanship. In such a spirit it has been dealt with here. It is not, perhaps, to be expected that such an extensive change will commend itself, at the first inspection, to the community and to Congress, while those who live upon the existing system are seeking, by denunciatory methods, to create an unfavourable public sentiment. But it is believed that the advantages of the change, when impartially examined, will be recognised, and that it must ultimately be made. In such a confident belief the Department renews its recommendations, basing them, not upon an appeal to popular prejudice, or upon recriminations, as odious as they are irrelevant, respecting the conduct of other branches of the public service, but upon a calm and candid consideration of the whole question, in the interests of a sound administrative policy, and of the efficiency of the Naval arm of the Government, as closely connected therewith."

SIR,—With regard to the rumoured appointment of Mr. Penfold, paymaster, to the Dædalus, mentioned by a correspondent in your issue of Jan. 19, I can hardly believe that the Naval Lord who has the gift thereof would be so unjust to other accountant officers who have far greater claims and are much more deserving than the individual in question.—I am, &c.,

REAR-ADMIRAL SIR WILLIAM HEWETT, V.C., has been placed in supreme Naval and Military command, and has been appointed Governor-General of Suakim. Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay has sent the Marines serving on board the ships of the Mediterranean Fleet, to the number of 300, with five officers, to Suakim, in the Monarch and Hecla, and the Carysfort has also been ordered to the same place; while the Orontes, Jumna, and Malabar have been stopped in their trooping career, and ordered to carry their living freights to the same port in the Red Sea, to reinforce Sir William Hewett's small band of 150 seamen and Marines, landed from the Euryalus, Ranger, and Coquette, to man the fortifications the moment it became known that the bands of Osman Digna had routed the relieving column under Baker Pasha. At the same time, 500 Marines and fifteen officers have been sent to the Mediterranean from their various divisions at home, to take the place of their comrades drafted to Suakim from the Mediterranean ships. Simultaneously with these movements of seamen and Marines, orders were telegraphed to the Naval Commander-in-Chief of the East Indies station to hold Suakim at all costs, and the Ministry of this country, content with what they had done, sat down and waited, hoping that General Gordon would soon inform them of the success of the mission they had entrusted to his charge. Indeed, we can assert, on very high authority, that, from the first, the Government of this country made up its mind not to interfere in extricating the Egyptian garrisons beleaguered by the forces of the Mahdi in the Soudan. Ministers argued that, having vindicated British interests in Egypt by the bombardment of Alexandria, the seizure of the Suez Canal, the storming of the lines of Tel-el-Kebir, and the capture, trial, and banishment of Arabi, England had no more need to remain in Egypt. They claim to have organised an Egyptian Army, officered it, and also lent a General of ability to the Khedive. Furthermore, they assisted in forming the military expedition at the head of which the Khedive placed Colonel Hicks. The force under Hicks Pasha was annihilated by the fanatic Moslem followers of the Mahdi. The Egyptian garrisons, scattered broadcast over that immense territory, north, south, east, and west of the confluence of the White and Blue Niles, were soon besieged in their fortified places by the Mahdi. At length, news reached England that Tewfik Bey, at Sinkat, with some 600 men under his command, must soon surrender, and that the fall of Sinkat would inevitably lead to the storming of Tokar by Osman Digna's Arab followers. It was then determined to send a force to relieve these garrisons. General Gordon, who had accepted service under the King of the Belgians, for work on the Congo, to relieve Mr. H. M. Stanley, was invited to undertake a mission to the Soudan, as soon as it became known that the force, led by Baker Pasha, had been routed, and well-nigh exterminated. But not a man did the British Government send out until the absolute necessity of reinforcements reaching him at once was made clear by Sir William Hewett. Even then the Government continued in their policy of non-intervention. They staked everything, and are staking everything, on the supposed influence of General Gordon over the Arab tribes in general, and his power to alienate them from the Mahdi. It was General Gordon who, when Governor-General of the Soudan, taught the Soudanees to value liberty, to despise Turks and Egyptians, and to govern themselves. It was General Gordon's successors who endeavoured to reintroduce the Government of terror he had taught the Soudanees to hate, and no longer to fear. Hence they rebelled, and gladly hailed the Mahdi as a leader. They crushed Hicks, routed Baker, and established a form of government at El Obeid. The Mahdi then laid siege to every Egyptian garrison in the Soudan, even threatening Khartoum and Berber. In a word, the Soudan was in the hands of the Mahdi, when the British Ministry invited General Gordon to test his own personal popularity and prestige in the Soudan on their behalf. The fall of Sinkat and the massacre of Tewfik and his heroic band, has, however, forced the Ministerial hand, and necessitated an immediate attempt being made to relieve the garrison of Tokar. For this purpose the seamen and Marines at the disposal of Sir William Hewett in the Red Sea are insufficient, and troops of the Line quartered in Egypt have to be sent to Suakim; but so confident are the Government in the success of General Gordon, that orders have been telegraphed to Suakim for only a flying column to be formed, with light baggage, and carrying but 320 rounds of ball cartridge per man, it being believed that the expedition will accomplish its object and return to its base on the Red Sea shore in less than three weeks. The three hundred Marines sent from the Mediterranean have taken but five officers with them to Suakim. Nothing, indeed, could prove more clearly the inability of the Government to follow any other than a make-shift policy in Egypt than the perpetration of this gross injustice on the officers of the Royal Marines. It was hoped that additional Marine officers would have been sent out from home. But the Admiralty have not considered it necessary to do so. They have sent fifteen officers out in the Poonah, with the five companies destined to replace the Marines drawn from the Mediterranean Fleet, and it is to be hoped that, should these men not be landed, a sufficient number of officers will be sent on to Suakim, and thus avoid giving grave cause of discontent to the finest corps of soldiers possessed by any nation in the world. The conditions under which the Marines were sent to the Red Sea by the Admiralty, to support Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, has given the greatest dissatisfaction throughout the corps. It is generally believed that a compromise has been arrived at between the Deputy-Adjutant-General, Royal Marines, and the First Sea Lord, which cannot be otherwise than disastrous to the corps, whilst tending to postpone that entente cordiale which all ranks and ratings have been endeavouring so assiduously to bring about. We feel convinced, however, that the Admiralty have not in any way consulted General Williams, as promised for them in the House of Commons last session. The Admiralty will do well to remember that the interests of so large a force as the Royal Marines are not to be ignored or treated with indifference, and although we are sensible of the deep interest taken in the corps by Lord Northbrook, there are times when he may be guided in the wrong path by those whose antagonism to our sea soldiers is so well known. The battalion recently despatched to the East left the country without any Staff whatever, and dependent entirely upon their own resources. It is a well-known fact that General Sir Charles Adair, during his term of office as Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General, protested in the most emphatic manner against any large force of Marines being sent out of the country without the battalion organisation peculiar to the Marines, and it is to be hoped that General Williams will recognise the necessity of adopting the same course. Such a state of affairs is eminently unsatisfactory, and only tends to bring out in stronger relief than ever the fact that it is more than ever necessary for a General of Marines to have a seat at the Board of Admiralty. Should General Gordon fail in his mission, the Government will have to depend for the first reinforcement of a thousand or fifteen hundred seasoned troops on the Marines. Then, indeed, will come the crisis, when it will need the whole Naval and Military resources of England, in men, money, and matériel, to arrest the barbaric hordes which will descend, like the locusts of old, over the civilisation of Egypt.

SIR EDWARD REED'S new views regarding the Russian Navy, as expressed by him in the columns of the Newcastle Daily Chronicle, will provoke some amusement in professional circles. How persistently the ex-Chief Constructor of the Navy posed for years as the admirer of the Russian Fleet in general, and Admiral Popoff's productions in particular, is a matter so well known to the public, that it seems almost superfluous to call attention to it. The Livadia fiasco is still fresh in every man's memory. Yet we find Sir Edward Reed, who should have had a better memory of his old opinions than the general public, gravely putting on record the following conviction, as one held by him for years:—"Russia had no Fleet of twenty-nine ironclads (in 1877) which excited any anticipations of mine. She had a larger number of the most valueless monitors and other abnormal vessels which probably was ever possessed by any Power whatever; and the only anticipation that I should have felt, had they been brought into action, would have been their speedy descent to the bottom. They had scarcely any freeboard, they were excessively slow, they were very weakly armoured, and Mr. Marvin's connection of my name with them, and his imputation to me of confidence in them, is perfectly imaginary." This statement is taken from a controversy which has been going on for some days past between Sir Edward Reed and Mr. Charles Marvin. The views of the latter with regard to the Russian Navy were expressed in a series of articles in the Army and Navy Magazine two years ago, and while attracting great attention in England and Russia, were left unanswered by Sir Edward Reed. In the interval, Mr. Marvin has developed into a more widely-recognised writer on Russia, and Sir Edward Reed has paid a tribute to his influence by entering the arena with him in the columns of Mr. Joseph Cowen's paper, in which Mr. Marvin had occasion to describe Sebastopol and the Black Sea Fleet, in one of a series of articles he is now contributing on his journey, a few months ago, to the petroleum region of the Caspian. Mr. Marvin's account of recent Russian Naval progress is too long to quote, but we may give the passage that appears to have excited the ire of Sir Edward Reed:—"It is impossible to quit the subject of the Naval progress of Sebastopol without saying a few words about the Black Sea Fleet. We all remember the wolf-cry Sir Edward Reed raised in 1873, and again in 1875, respecting the Peter the Great and the popoffkas, which created such a panic at home, and led to the waste of a deal of money in unnecessary counter-preparations against Russia. Thanks to this stir, which enriched certain individuals at the country's expense, Russia embarked in the Turkish war with considerable prestige as the possessor of 29 ironclads, and it was confidently anticipated by Sir Edward Reed that they would achieve something. When matters came to the test, however, the Russian Fleet did nothing at all, the Baltic ironclads remaining in harbour all the time, and the two wretched popoffkas in the Black Sea only venturing outside Sebastopol when no enemies were near." Replying to this, Sir Edward Reed admits it to be "perfectly true that I called attention in a serious manner, and, as it turned out, with very great advantage (!), to the remarkable character of the Peter the Great," and he then asserts that "not one single statement that I made about the ship has ever been controverted." In his rejoinder, Mr. Marvin experiences no difficulty in pointing out that "the essence of the scare in 1873 was that the Peter the Great would be ready to fight us, before we could construct a ship to beat her. To a lesser extent, this was the essence of the scare of 1875. Two years later (vide war number of the Illustrated London News), Sir Edward Reed stated, and stated wrongly, that "the Peter the Great is ready for sea," and entered into calculations as to the vessels that would accompany her to the Mediterranean. Now, throughout the whole of this period, and for a considerable time after he wrote his article for the Illustrated London News, the Peter the Great was not ready for sea; she was never at any time complete enough to leave Cronstadt. Yet, although the Peter the Great throughout the Turkish war did nothing, and was unable from structural defects to do anything, and although at the close of the war the vessel had to go to Glasgow to have new engines put in, rendering her thus, from the time Sir Edward Reed began to advertise her until 1882—a period of more than ten years—never fit to confront an enemy, he has the hardihood to assert, "Let me repeat that the Peter the Great was a most advanced and formidable ship at the time at which I wrote of her"! Referring to the popoffkas, Sir E. J. Reed lays himself open to a sharp retort, when he affirms that "these circular vessels have all the significance which I ever attributed to them, and most effectually did during the late war precisely what they were expected to do"! The Naval profession in England and Russia expected them to do nothing, and Sir Edward Reed is thus right in what he says, but not in the sense he intended, for he continues, "They were essentially shallow-draught, coast-defence ships, and it will be in the recollection of most of your readers that the powerful Navy of Turkey was effectually kept at bay by these vessels. They were eminently successful in guarding the coast of Russia, which would have been devastated in many parts, but for their presence"! All this Mr. Marvin rightly characterises as "sheer nonsense." "During the whole war," he says, "the two popoffkas skulked behind the harbour forts. Theodosia they left to be laid in ruins, Anapa to be battered, and Soukhum Kaleh to be occupied by the Turks. The popoffkas, as every Russian naval officer will readily admit, and as every Russian newspaper and non-official Russian historian of the war has always with indignation confessed, the two popoffkas did absolutely nothing. What Russia achieved in the Black Sea was done by a few hastily-improvised armed merchant steamers and enterprising torpedo-boats. It was only when the war was over that the Novgorod and Vice-Admiral Popoff left the shelter of the fort's guns and ventured out to sea." As to their still "possessing all the significance" Sir E. J. Reed ever "attributed to them," we can only say that the first-named vessel is now lying useless, out of commission, and unfit for service, on the shore at Sebastopol; and that a Naval Commission has been sent thither to examine the second, the hull of which is so cracked that doubts are entertained whether she will ever again be able to float or carry a crew. No one can read the correspondence without coming to a conclusion that Sir Edward Reed was very unwise to enter the lists with an antagonist better acquainted with the Russian Navy than himself, and having fewer personal considerations to warp his opinions. Admiral Popoff's days are over; his official career is at an end in Russia, and it was a mistake for Sir Edward to attempt to patch up the reputation of the shattered humpty-dumpty, that can never be mended again. Mr. Marvin correctly defines the relations between the English and Russian Constructors: "For years Sir Edward Reed posed as a Naval Mr. Holloway; Admiral Popoff was his patent pill." All the productions of the Russian Constructor that were advertised proved to be failures. Nothing that Sir Edward Reed has designed has ever been a success; and as the fact is well established, nothing that Sir Edward Reed can say or write will remove the prejudice that this has produced in the public mind against him. With regard to Russia, the new High Admiral, Prince Alexis, and the Minister of Marine, Admiral Shestakoff, have been doing their best to repair the ravages occasioned by Admiral Popoff's extravagance, and in this task they have the sympathy not only of their own Fleet, but of Naval men in this country also. To all right-minded men, it is as annoying to see incompetence and quackery mounted on a pinnacle abroad as at home, and for this reason no one will feel much sympathy for Admiral Popoff on being informed that Sir Edward Reed considers that Russia possessed in 1877 "more abnormal vessels than were probably possessed by any Power whatever, and that the only anticipation" he would have felt, "had they been brought into action, would have been their speedy descent to the bottom." It is, however, not the first time Sir E. J. Reed has changed his opinion, even regarding the value of his own designs, as we have repeatedly proved in these columns. When in office, variety was charming; when out of office, "endless variety of types" could only lead to disaster, according to Sir E. J. Reed.

FRESH proofs that all the late radical changes in our military system have failed to give us an army fit to replace that which we have lost, are continually reaching us from all quarters of the empire, and from every branch of the service. And fresh arguments against giving those unfortunate experiments a longer trial, are found in abundance, in the writings and speeches of their advocates. One of the most candid and moderate of these advocates, Lieutenant-Colonel G. A. Furse, has lately produced an elaborate work on the "Mobilisation and Embarkation of an Army Corps." The first chapter, going beyond the limits implied by the title of the book, treats of a general and simultaneous "mobilisation" of all our forces that may be supposed to be available for home defence. The author is "far from counselling a blind adoption of every German measure, even were it possible;" and he says, "We show too little originality, and do not pay sufficient attention to our peculiar circumstances, on which our measures and system should be principally based, and rest satisfied with adopting some bastard measure quite unsuited to our real requirements; this is often found not to answer, or to require constant modifications." It would not be easy to describe more clearly and concisely the course which has been pursued for the last dozen years by the pseudo-military administration of this country. We think that Colonel Furse's criticism is fairly applicable to himself, and that he has erred in copying, or trying to copy, the German system, in those features which are most unsuited to our insular position, and to our Indian and Colonial requirements. For us, there is not, there cannot be, any magic power in the word "mobilization," unless it be combined with conscription. Germany has an extensive frontier, liable to be invaded at nearly every point; and is surrounded by at least possible enemies. She therefore requires an enormous army in constant readiness for war. But Germany has no distant possessions to be guarded, nor are her troops liable to be exposed to vicissitudes of climate, or to prolonged expatriation. The circumstances of our enormous empire are totally different. We require an army of comparatively moderate numbers, but consisting mainly, if not altogether, of fully grown men, with constitutions sufficiently matured to be able to withstand the debilitating effects of tropical climates; and with its discipline so confirmed by long training that it may fairly be expected to bear the strain of being broken up into small detachments, of enduring fatigue and privations, and of encountering enemies of every kind, from the most civilized Europeans to the wildest savages. History amply testifies that we had such an army. Will any one be so rash or so foolish as to assert that we have it now?

Colonel Furse evidently regrets the disappearance from the Army List of that mobilisation scheme, the only result of which was to call attention to the deficiencies and irregularities in our organisation. That scheme was quite visionary; its general officers and staff had not been selected (as Col. F. informs us); its artillery, engineers, and administrative corps consisted in a great measure of asterisks, and an attempt to carry it into effect, by moving nearly all the regular troops and all the militia, would have taxed the resources of our railway system to their utmost limit. With reference to this general mobilisation, Colonel Furse says,—"In an invasion of England it has been computed that the length of time which must elapse between a declaration of war and the actual invasion cannot be much less than six weeks. During this period, short as it is, we must do more than mobilising." This opinion is quite at variance with the teachings of history, from which we learn that all countries, our own included, have been ready, in all ages, to secure the advantages of a surprise, by commencing hostilities without any previous declaration of war. Indeed, Colonel Maurice has collected in his book lately published, more than a hundred such instances in modern times. With so many and such significant warnings, it would be fatuous to wait, in fancied security, for a declaration of war, or to count on any interval after it, in which to prepare for invasion at home or aggression abroad. In the second chapter, Colonel Furse briefly sketches the measures requisite for putting two or more Army Corps into a state of readiness for active service. But in the present lamentable condition of the army, this may be at once dismissed, as being beyond the limits of possibility. The author soon passes on to the preparation of a single "Corps"; and here he shows himself thoroughly competent to make all the necessary arrangements, if only the men were available. In the third chapter, which is devoted to a very awkward subject, the "Provision in Men," the difficulties and disadvantages of the existing organisation are exposed with commendable candour and plainness. We regret that we cannot afford space to review, as fully as their importance deserves, the latter portions of the book, in which the subjects of equipment and embarkation, and the formation of special corps and services, are treated with an accuracy and minuteness which evince long and careful study.

While differing from Colonel Furse as to his very qualified approval of that system as a whole, which he shows to have failed in all its parts; we recognise the eminently practical and useful character of many of his suggestions and observations: and, while regretting that he has taken a somewhat microscopic view of large subjects, we hail the appearance of his book as a very valuable contribution to the cause we have long and steadfastly advocated—the restoration of the efficiency of the British Army.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh left Cagliari on Wednesday for Palermo with the Minotaur, Northumberland, Neptune, and Achilles. The Agincourt, Sultan, and Forward remained at Cagliari, to fill up with coal.

The Royal Navy is about to lose an officer of great practical experience, in the person of Mr. A. Morcom, chief engineer of Sheerness Dockyard. This officer, who, since his appointment at Sheerness, has rendered valuable services to the Admiralty, especially in connection with the defects in the Caroline, has accepted an appointment in a private engineering firm at Birmingham. Mr. Morcom will carry with him from the service the well-wishes of his many friends in this locality. By this gentleman's resignation the Government has lost a tried and efficient officer, and private enterprise has added to the roll of meritorious officers who have been induced to leave her Majesty's service to better their prospects in life.

We understand that Lieutenant-Colonel Allnutt, R.M.L.I., of the Portsmouth Division, has been medically surveyed, with a view to his immediate retirement from the service, which urgent private family affairs prevent his remaining in any longer.

Members of Parliament who really take an interest in the welfare of that gallant corps, the Marines, would do well to inquire who is responsible for sending Major Colwell and only four other officers of the Corps to Suakim with a body of 300 privates, from Malta. To these, on arrival at Suakim, were added 150 Marines on passage home in the Orontes, who had no commissioned officers with them. Thus there were five officers sent to command 450 men, a proportion of officers to men totally inadequate to the requirements of the Service, which demands that at least three officers should be appointed for every hundred men, exclusive of staff. We hear that, in the Superb, two Subalterns of the Marine Artillery were left behind to take charge of the wardroom officers' servants, who could not number, at the most, more than a dozen Marines. If it thus required two Lieutenants to command twelve men when not in the face of the enemy, how can the Admiralty account for only sending five officers to command 450 men on active service? Who is responsible for this great slight, gratuitously offered to the Corps? This should be cleared up. As a matter of fact, what the Admiralty have done to the Marines is this. Their Lordships have sent a body of soldiers, as strong in point of numbers as an ordinary Line battalion, to Suakim, on active service, to face an enemy in the field, under-officered, and without a Paymaster, Quartermaster, Transport Officer, or signalling staff. We ask Military men in the House of Commons whether such an arrangement can be expected to work? The Staff officer, Captain Morgan, instead of being sent out overland, has been ordered out in the Poonah with the companies for the Mediterranean. By no possibility, therefore, will he be able to overtake the officers ordered out overland, neither will he get to the front. Why?

Admiral Sir John Hay has given notice in Parliament of his intention to move for a Committee to inquire into the state and condition of the Navy.

An order has been issued from the Admiralty through the Deputy Adjutant-General that in future, when a battalion of the Royal Marines is formed for service abroad, a quartermaster from one of the divisions will be included in the staff of such battalion. This is a move in the right direction, and should ensure efficiency, as the conduct of the quartermaster's department of the battalion will be carried out by an officer trained in the duties, instead of being in the hands of a temporarily appointed lieutenant, who has had no experience in that particular and important branch of his profession.

The Orontes, Captain Andoe, on passage to England from China, had been detailed to convey to Malta the new crew for the Téméraire in March next, but it now appears doubtful when she may return to England.

We have received a letter from Retired Navigating-Lieutenant George E. Gresley Jackson, R.N., late of H.M.S. Virago, at present serving as Hydrographic Assistant to Professor W. D. Alexander, in Honolulu. Mr. Jackson objects to the remarks made by the correspondent who last year favoured us with contributions from the Pacific, and he requests us to correct the mistake made in our issue of June 30, 1883. This we willingly do. Mr. Jackson was a witness for the prosecution at a court-martial which assembled on board H.M.S. Galatea, Captain H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, near Wellington, New Zealand, in May, 1869. That court ordered Mr. Jackson to be tried, which he was within the week, on board H.M.S. Challenger, when he was sentenced to be dismissed his ship, and to be severely reprimanded, losing time. The Admiralty had, in the meantime, dealt summarily with a previous charge preferred against this officer, and reported upon by a Court of Inquiry, and the two sentences conflicting, Mr. Jackson is perfectly justified in saying that:—"By the direction of the Admiralty, I was retained on full pay some time after I had ceased to belong to H.M.S. Virago, and I did not retire from active service until more than two years after I had left her; and by reference to the Navy Lists '69, '70, '71, and Admiralty records, this fact can be easily proven."

The prospect of promotion for the senior Assistant-Paymasters this year is more gloomy than ever, as there is not one compulsory retirement from age in 1884.

The report, received by the Admiralty, from the committee appointed some time since to inquire into the system of nursing at the hospitals and on board ships, is to be adopted, and the suggestions contained therein will shortly be carried into effect. Briefly, the principal points are these:—The present staff of nurses at the hospitals will be abolished, their places being taken by the men from the Fleet, who, for the future, will be trained at the hospitals, and from there drafted to sea, returning on paying off, instead of, as now, remaining on board the Depôt ships. The pay for all grades will be increased, and there will be a limited number of chief petty officers' ratings as head nurses at the hospitals.

"Ready, aye, ready!" should be added to the motto, "Per Mare, per Terram" of the Royal Marine Corps, for no sooner is action to be taken in any part of the world than they are first in the field, and, with their Naval brethren, well to the fore. Directly the cry for help arose from Suakim, Marines and Blue-jackets were landed to defend it, and the Marine detachments from the ships in the Mediterranean were hastily pushed on to the Red Sea to join their comrades in the defence, while a further contingent of 515 stalwart men is embarked at a moment's notice from the head-quarters in England, with a thousand more ready and willing to follow, if required. It is this mobility that renders the Marine Corps so valuable, and one that can always be relied upon to move without delay. The present contingency also points to the desirability, if not the absolute necessity, of what we have repeatedly advocated in our columns,—that the Marines should be of such a strength that they could always have a battalion of 1,000 men at Malta and another at Hong Kong, to be quartered on shore, but at the disposal of the Admiral commanding the station, whenever urgent necessity should arise for their embarkation or transfer to a particular point. In this instance many of the ships in the Mediterranean have been denuded of their detachments of Marines, and others have to be sent for from England to meet the sudden call at Suakim; whereas, had there been a strong battalion at Malta, it could have been sent on this service, and placed under Admiral Sir William Hewett, without disturbing the interior economy of the ships of the Mediterranean Fleet; added to which there would have been a regimental Lieutenant-Colonel on the spot, to assume the command of so large a body of men as will be landed. We are convinced that the time will come when this policy will have to be carried out, at least for the Mediterranean, if not for China; as such a course would strengthen the hands of the Naval Commander-in-Chief, and often enable him to act with promptitude, instead of being compelled to ask and wait for reinforcements from England. The cost to the country need not be greater, as the battalion proposed could occupy the place now held by a Line regiment, and do garrison duty until required by the Naval authorities.

In the forthcoming Navy Estimates provision is made for increasing the pay of Lieutenants of twelve years' service by 2s. a day, a very doubtful boon, as it seems to point to promotion for this class of officer being further off than ever, or possibly this concession would never have been made.

Captain H. H. Morgan (p.s.c.), of the Plymouth Division of the Royal Marines, has been selected by the Admiralty to proceed to the Red Sea to act as Staff Officer to Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., and embarked on Saturday last in the transport Poonah, which conveyed the Marines. Captain Morgan was for some time on the Staff of Sir John Glover, G.C.M.G., Governor of Newfoundland, and was afterwards employed with the Marines performing police duties in Dublin.

The death is announced at Nicolaeff of Admiral Losoff, of the Russian Black Sea Fleet, who commanded the man-of-war Three Saints at the battle of Sinope, and afterwards had charge of the Naval battery on the Malakoff heights. Recently he occupied the post of Director of Ordnance at Nicolaeff.

A report reaches us from St. Petersburg that the Grand Duke Alexis, High Admiral of the Russian Fleet, will pay a visit to this country next summer. During his stay he will take advantage of the opportunity to make himself personally acquainted with recent improvements in Naval warfare in England.

The news which we receive from France on the subject of Tonquin show that the greatest uncertainty reigns in Paris as to the true position of the expeditionary force, and also with regard to the strength of Bacninh in the way of fortifications and garrison. As concerns the first question, it is observed that at the very moment the French Government was declaring the country occupied by its troops to be perfectly tranquil, came the news of the wholesale massacre of Christians, clearly proving the contrary, and perhaps indicating something worse still. The slaughter of the Christians, in fact, seems to indicate an idea on the part of the Annamites and the people of Tonquin that they will eventually be able to drive the French out of the country. Whence this conviction? With regard to Bacninh itself, we learn that the place is to be attacked in the course of the month by 8,000 men, marching upon it in three columns from three different directions. We are not yet sure, however, whether General Millot will attempt to carry the place by assault, or whether he will have to sit down before it, and lay siege to it in a regular manner. General Millot can hardly have made up his mind as yet which mode of attack will be most expedient, and a good deal will, no doubt, depend upon his ability to get up artillery, and the amount of assistance he will be able to get from the gunboats. Admiral Courbet, who was very reluctant to go to Tonquin in the first instance, and who must now have handed over the command of the land forces to General Millot, appears to have complained bitterly to the Government of having been superseded after the capture of Sontay. Had he failed to take that place, he could have understood his removal. He has also informed the authorities at home that if they had sent out reinforcements sooner, there would have been no difficulty about capturing Bacninh directly after the fall of Sontay, and before the enemy could recover from their surprise and alarm; now, he considers it very doubtful whether the force placed at the disposal of General Millot will be found sufficient to do all that is required of it. At present, considerable activity is being displayed with the view of ensuring the success of the expedition, but much valuable time has been lost, as well as many valuable lives, by pursuing that same economical and half-hearted system which has been so fatal to us in Egypt.

This year's Prussian Army List, which has now been published rather later than usual, covers 966 pages, or one more than last year's. The changes in the higher posts of command have been numerous. Amongst the new promotions are those of 12 Lieutenant-Generals, of whom 11 are Commanders of Divisions; 39 Major-Generals, 28 Colonels of Infantry, 20 of Cavalry, five of Field Artillery, three of Foot Artillery, and two of Engineers. The proportion of the various arms in the higher and highest posts of command is in favour of the Cavalry, no fewer than seven of the 14 Generals commanding Army Corps belonging to that branch of the service, the remainder proceeding from the Infantry. Of Divisional Commanders, 18 proceed from the Infantry and 12 from the Cavalry. The Army List contains the names of the following Honorary Commanders of regiments of princely rank, appointed during the past year:—The Prince of Wales, who was appointed "First" Chef—a designation but rarely given—of the Blücher Hussars, with the rank of Prussian Field-Marshal General, on the occasion of the Silver Wedding of the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Germany; the King of Spain, whose appointment to the Honorary Colonelcy of the 15th Uhlans gave rise to so much ill-feeling in the French capital, and led to a display of bad manners on the part of the Paris populace; the Grand Duke Franz II. of Mecklenburg, Prince Alexander of Hesse, and the Comte de Flandres, who were appointed Honorary Colonels of the 24th Regiment of Infantry, the 13th Dragoons, and the 16th Dragoons respectively. There is a fresh feature in the new Army List which deserves mention. The Military Cabinet, hitherto a subdivision of the Prussian War Office, and of which General von Albedyll is the head, is for the first time given as an independent department, owing to that officer's seniority as Lieutenant-General over the present War Minister, General Bronsart von Schellendorff.

The proposition to extend the law of conscription now in force in France to Algeria is being seriously debated on the other side of the Channel. The advocates of this measure say that it would greatly increase the forces of France. Their opponents say that at Tonquin the Algerian troops, "whose bravery was transformed into wild impetuosity, paid no heed to their chiefs at the capture of Sontay; they were powerless to restrain the ardour of the native contingents. These rushed, head down, upon certain death, and without utility. It would be easy to show that this attitude, meritorious as it may be in some respects, would be very inconvenient on a European battlefield." It also appears to be very difficult to maintain discipline among the native troops in Algeria, where they constantly indulge in the most sanguinary squabbles. Only a few days ago a desperate fight took place between Turcos and Spahis, because one of the former was sentenced to a fortnight's imprisonment for having stolen a burnous from one of the latter. Several free-fights between the rival corps occurred, during which swords and firearms came into play. In the colony the idea of a conscription replacing the present limited volunteer system does not seem to be favourably received, and is regarded as a dangerous utopia. Looking at the frequency of insurrections in Algeria, and the present excitement which reigns throughout all the Moslem countries, we are decidedly of the same opinion as the colonists.

At a parade of the Commissionaires in Westminster Hall last Sunday, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the formation of the Corps, Captain Walter, the founder, delivered an excellent and suitable address. Exigencies of space prevent us from giving more than the following brief extract:—

"I have always attributed our success to the influence which the regimental system has exercised over officers and men, and increasing experience only serves to confirm my opinion. I only wish that the kindly feelings and acts which have ever characterised the various ranks of the English Army in their relations with each other, were more generally felt elsewhere. You cannot over-estimate the advantages which this training has secured. Nor can you too carefully maintain those old traditions and habits which are the foundation of true esprit de corps. I cannot conclude without thanking you all for the long-continued and implicit confidence you have placed in my desire to serve you. The ten years I passed as a regimental officer was not only a very happy, but, I hope, a not altogether unprofitable period of my life. I had the good fortune to serve with officers who were fond of their profession and devoted to their men. I have tried to practise what I was taught, and if my endeavours have met with any success, I owe it to those who, in their turn, received their education from some of the best soldiers in English history. I will only ask you to maintain those principles which have been handed down to you; they cannot be altered without your consent, and I feel satisfied that they will not be changed, except to your injury. Your present officers, to whom I now offer my grateful thanks for the assistance they have cordially rendered me for so many years, concur, I know, in the opinions I have expressed, and will join you heartily in transmitting to their successors those traditions in which we are all so deeply interested.—EDWARD WALTER, Founder and Commanding Officer, Corps of Commissionaires."

The French War Minister has made his dispositions for this year's autumn manœuvres. Only two Army Corps, the 4th and 7th (Mans and Toulouse), will carry out operations on a large scale, under Generals Berckheim and Lewal. The manœuvres are to last twenty days.

It appears that in September last, a young Frenchman, called Thomas Ferry, was killed by the inhabitants of New Caledonia and eaten. It is not said whether the victim is a relative of the French Prime Minister. If he is, strong steps will, no doubt, be taken to put down cannibalism in this penal settlement. A good many years ago, we met a French Admiral who gave a description of a visit he paid to the island, and one he received from a converted chief. He added,—"From the way the fellow eyed my silk stockings, I had little confidence in his conversion being even skin-deep."

L'Armée Française is highly indignant at the manner in which military men are being caricatured in France, both in the Press and in novels, and complains that a certain Colonel Ramollot is about to be placed on the stage. Of what use to spend millions on the Army, if ridicule is to be cast on the uniform? The French editor growls out,—"Our ears are still tingling with the cry which echoed along the Boulevards in 1870, 'À Berlin!' When, before the end of the year, the Prussians saw our prisoners defile before them, they pointed out with pride and sarcasm the road indicated by the rabble of Paris. Nothing has been changed. The severe chastisement has been forgotten." And L'Armée Française cannot refrain from drawing attention to the privileges enjoyed by the Prussian officers, to the respect with which they are treated, and to the amount of discipline which is the result. It quite agrees with the German Military author, who says that these privileges, &c., are amply repaid on the field of battle.

The company "military training" of Infantry regiments will be completed by March 1 next, when the annual course of musketry will be commenced. The new musketry regulations, which are being anxiously looked for, will be issued by that date.

The troops are still being exercised in outpost duty and route-marching, varied at times with minor operations. On Tuesday, the 3rd Brigade, under the command of Major-General Feilding, was exercised as opposing forces, when some interesting operations were carried out in the vicinity of Cocked-hat Wood and Tweseldown Hill. Lieutenant-General Sir Archibald Alison, Bart., was present, accompanied by the Head-quarters Staff.

The Divisional steeplechases will take place on May 2 and 3 this year, rather later than usual. Fifteen races are on the programme, two of which, the "Aldershot Steeplechase" and the "United Service Selling Steeplechase," are open to officers of the Army and Navy on full pay or Staff employ. The "Cavalry Chargers' Steeplechase" is open to officers of cavalry regiments of the Army.

A numerously-attended meeting was held yesterday in the Divisional Court-martial Room, South Camp, with reference to the Royal Military Tournament to be held in the Agricultural Hall on June 16-21. Representatives of all corps were present. Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick FitzWygram, Bart., presided. Arrangements were made to hold a district tournament, from which men will be selected to compete at the Royal Tournament in London.

SHOOTING IN THE ARMY.

SIR,—In a late issue of the Times, I notice, in an article entitled, "Progress in Musketry Training," the same tone of depreciation of the firing of the British Army which has been the gist of various leading articles, and even Parliamentary debates, for some time past. As an old Musketry Instructor and an officer belonging to one of the regiments alluded to in the article above named, may I be permitted to offer an explanation, which, I think, is only due to some of our troops, with reference to their so-called bad shooting in the Transvaal war of 1881, including the disastrous affair on the Majuba. To my mind, there is but one way of gauging the efficacy of such shooting, whether it be good or bad, viz., by the objects shot at, whether they be of metal or flesh. But where no such targets exist, how is the efficacy to be tested? In the one instance of the fight on and at the foot of the Majuba, I can assert that our shooting was not in fault, but that by the admirable system of the Boers' skirmishing tactics, no mark was ever presented to our men, and they were thus obliged to fire, as it were, in the dark. As a wary sportsman stalks the stag, so did the Boers stalk us on that fatal day, baffling all detection, and the nearest thing presented as a target to our men was the occasional puff of smoke which from time to time rose, as it were, out of the earth, among the grass and boulders. Was such a test of our efficacy in shooting a fair one? I say, decidedly not. Our soldiers who were firing that day had among them men whom I had seen in Afghanistan but a few months before pick off Afghans at a distance of 1,000 and 1,200 yards, and who, I stoutly affirm, could have done the same thing again at Majuba, had they had any object to aim at. My Highlanders stood up fearlessly that day to look for their enemies, one man saying to me, bitterly, "Oh, sir, if we could only see them, we could soon stop them!" Perhaps that little speech will explain their difficulty better than I can describe it. In the Afghan War, at the battle of Candahar, and in other engagements, the loss inflicted by our fire on the Afghans was very severe. That the shooting at the engagement at Tel-el-Kebir was (as Mr. Bulwer, M.P., stated in the House) "infamous," might perhaps be explained by the fact that the men who shot that day were almost all either young soldiers who had had insufficient training from shortness of service, or Reserve men, whose eyes and hands had doubtless lost some of their cunning from disuse. Should we not also bear in mind that the firing on that occasion was under circumstances of unusual crowding and excitement, and more with the object of hastening the flight of a totally defeated army than actually accomplishing its slaughter? The fact that the Egyptians were never able to rally proves that the firing was at all events good enough to effect its object. Our weakness does not lie in our inaccuracy of shooting, but in our lamentable deficiency in the art of skirmishing tactics, but this is a subject so expansive that I will not venture to enlarge upon it here. Trusting that even the few words of explanation that I have offered may go far towards refuting the imputation that our soldiers cannot shoot, I am, &c.,

THE LATE MORICE BEY.

SIR,—"They directed the working of the guns to the last. Their quiet demeanour was a ray of light and divine hope in that hell of fierce triumph and clinging despair." And again, "Morice Bey, after he had received a spear-thrust through the side, killed three of his assailants. Dr. Leslie despatched two with his sword." So wrote an eye-witness. Vide Daily News, February 6 and 7. I feel sure that many like myself have read this account of our lost friend with mingled feelings of admiration and sorrow. In the early days of the recent Egyptian Expedition, the officers of the Brigade of Guards, of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, and of Sir Evelyn Wood's Brigade, &c., had good cause to remember the practical kindness and unbounded hospitality of the Bey. His house at Ramleh was ever open, and he was never happier than when it was well filled; this, too, at a time when good and wholesome food and drink were scarce elsewhere. Sir, our charming and genial host, our kind and courteous friend is no more; and whether we recall his memory as one who fed the hungry for weeks at Ramleh, or think of him as one of the little group of heroes, shining out amid disgrace and shame in the perishing Egyptian square, it seems to me that an effort ought to be made to perpetuate his memory. After funds are raised other necessary steps can easily be taken, and Messrs. Ridgway and Sons, Army Agents, 2 Waterloo Place, have kindly consented to receive subscriptions to "the Morice Bey Memorial Fund."—I am, &c.,

YORKSHIRE REGIMENTS.

SIR,—It is to be hoped that your remarks of last week anent the designations of certain regiments connected under the present system with Yorkshire may be noted by the authorities, and given the attention they deserve. There are cases where the new Territorial organisation scheme is very difficult of fulfilment. But as it happens that in Yorkshire it can be carried out, not only on paper, but in the spirit, it would surely be advantageous to do so in the manner most complete and least open to criticism. Apart from your very forcible arguments, it should be remembered that the seniority of the old 14th Regt., together with its long and loyal service in all quarters of the globe, gives it a decided claim to a county, and not merely district title.—I am, &c.,

R. S. DE S.

SIR,—I have read with much regret the announcement of the death of my old first lieutenant, David Miller. Many years ago, long before I donned the red coat of a soldier, I served as a naval cadet in a frigate, of which Rear-Admiral David Miller was first lieutenant. My remembrance of him is that he was the beau idéal of a naval officer, a first-rate seaman, and kind and courteous to his inferiors. He was also a remarkably plucky fellow, as I am able to testify. The following little incident may not be unacceptable to his relatives and friends. Whilst the old Vestal was lying at anchor in Cork Harbour, a child of a sailor's wife fell from the gangway into the water. I was cadet of the watch, and the men were at dinner, and David Miller was on the quarter-deck. I naturally made for the gangway, and was in the act of going down the steps, when I was roared at by Mr. Miller to get out of the way, and I had only just time to flatten myself against the ship's side when a dark body flew past me, and soused into the water. This was David Miller. He seized the sinking child in his arms, and succeeded in keeping it and himself afloat until I, having recovered from my sudden fear, managed to lower from the main chains the lead-line. In my nervous haste I nearly did for the dear old fellow, for I all but dropped the lead upon his head; and, although David's mouth was partially under water, he sent forth such a roar at me, with threats of mast-heading, that my wits returned immediately. However, by my feeble aid he reached the gangway, child in arms, and handed the dripping urchin to its mother, whilst he coolly went below and changed his clothes, and again appeared upon deck, as if nothing had happened. Very few in the ship knew anything of the matter, and he was not the man to trumpet his own doings. A strong tide was running, and he was dressed in a long pilot-cloth coat, so that to keep himself afloat whilst I was bungling with the lead-line was an effort of strength indeed. I doubt much if there are a dozen persons alive who remember this incident. I remember it almost as well as if it was yesterday. Peace be to dear old David Miller's manes!—I am, &c.,

AN OLD SHIPMATE.

"Retired Officer" writes:—"Now that the feather bonnet is to be abolished, I think the bearskin should be abolished too. Every argument that holds good against the bonnet holds against the bearskin. Let us have no sentiment! Away with colours!—long service!—esprit de corps!—the statue of a real general, the Duke of Wellington!—and every cherished military remembrance and feeling! Then, perhaps, the utilitarians will be satisfied."

The number of conscripts drawn this year to make up the complement of the Baltic Fleet is 2,994 men. Up to the present moment, 1,838 have arrived at Cronstadt, consisting of 1,408 peasants, 51 bootmakers, 34 tailors, 34 carpenters, 17 joiners, 19 writers, 3 bandsmen, 8 painters, &c. The regular naval element is only represented by 2 skippers and 16 pilots, who have been unlucky enough to be drawn to serve as common seamen, but the Fleet benefits by the addition of 93 stokers, 19 mechanics, 16 boilermakers, and 13 smiths.

ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY.

The Duke of Cambridge visited the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, on Thursday, and awarded commissions to the successful cadets. Gen. Browne, R.E., Governor of the Academy, certified as to the conduct and soldierly bearing of the gentlemen now presented for commissions, all of whom, 38 in number, had passed the examination. He stated that the discipline of the whole establishment was admirable, and his only regret was the loss of Mr. Morgan W. Crofton, F.R.S., who had been for 20 years Professor of Mathematics at the Academy, and was now compelled by the regulations of the service to retire at the age of 57 years. The successful cadets were then, by direction of the Duke, called from the ranks by Col. Marsh, R.E., Secretary of the Institution, to receive her Majesty's commission, in the following order:—

ROYAL ENGINEERS.—J. H. L'E. Johnstone, 41,605 marks; J. A. Gibbon, 40,686; P. Ashworth, 40,216; E. D. Pullen, 39,295; T. Harrison, 38,108; G. Palmer, 36,690; A. G. Hunter-Weston, 36,070; A. R. Reynolds, 35,750; H. F. Gaynor, 35,426; R. T. R. Lawrence, 35,052; H. C. I. Birdwood, 34,721; J. A. Dealy, 33,719; C. C. J. Perry, 33,429; H. B. H. Wright, 31,746; G. H. Fowke, 31,509; J. C. Rimington, 31,157; H. G. Lyons, 30,572; W. S. Hunter, 29,899.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—H. G. Smith, 29,531 marks; G. Tyacke, 29,065; H. G. Sandilands, 28,757; W. A. Robinson, 27,585; S. Lushington, 27,437; J. C. Burnett, 27,349; E. D. C. Cameron, 27,296; R. M'Gildowney, 25,822; R. C. Warden, 25,816; D. Bremner, 25,534; C. H. Ford, 25,302; H. N. Schofield, 24,709; H. M. Campbell, 24,055; W. H. O. Kemmis, 23,947; P. H. Flower, 23,240; H. E. Bampfylde, 21,945; R. Casement, 21,188; J. D. Anderson, 21,082; G. E. Hamner, 20,317; J. N. Salmon, 19,555.

The following prizes were also presented:—To Mr. J. H. L'E. Johnstone, the Pollock gold medal for distinguished proficiency and prizes for artillery and military history; Mr. J. A. Gibbon, fortification and geometrical drawing; Mr. P. Ashworth, classics; Mr. T. Harrison, the regulation sword for exemplary conduct; Mr. A. G. Hunter-Weston, prizes for chemistry and physics; Mr. H. F. Gaynor, for riding; Mr. R. T. R. Lawrence, for military topography; Mr. J. H. Dealy, for mathematics and mechanics; Mr. H. B. H. Wright, for landscape drawing; Mr. G. H. Fowke, for drills and exercises; Mr. H. G. Smith, the Tombs Scholarship, as senior cadet for the Royal Artillery; Mr. W. Sporanza, prize for Spanish; Mr. W. MacAdam, for French, ordinary and advanced; Mr. F. L. Playfair, for gymnastics; Mr. H. J. Crofton, Italian; and Mr. M. B. Roberts, for ordinary and advanced German.

The Duke of Cambridge addressed the cadets, and congratulated them upon the favourable circumstances under which he met them. Their conduct had been so exemplary that not one complaint had been made to the Governor during the past term, which in such a large assemblage of young gentlemen was exceedingly creditable. In the matter of education, also, the reports left nothing to be desired, and it was especially satisfactory to find that, instead of one or two being highly distinguished, there was a general all-round proficiency, which reflected favourably upon the course of study pursued at this important academy. Talent was a providential gift, and those who possessed it were fortunate, but for the good of the service and the good of the greatest number, he preferred to see the attainments to be acquired at this institution spread over the widest possible area. The level to which the gentlemen now before him had risen in their examination was a high one, and he trusted that they would maintain it in the Army. After speaking in eulogistic terms of Professor Crofton, and wishing him a successful future, the Duke referred briefly to the operations in Egypt and the Soudan. He advised the young gentlemen before him always to keep their wits sharp, and be thinking what they would do under awkward circumstances, and he who was cleverest at ready expedients would do best both for himself and the public service. In after days they would bless the Academy, although they doubtless had often wished themselves out of it. He did not himself like study when he was young, but if he had not been taught something, he would not have been addressing them then. He exhorted them by the deeds of those who had gone the path they were to tread, some of whom now surrounded him, to pursue the advantages offered both to the young officers who were now about to join the Army, and those who remained yet a little longer in the institution so admirably conducted by Gen. Browne.

Gen. H.S.H. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, K.C.B., has consented to become a trustee of the Army and Navy Pensioners' Employment Society, in place of Gen. the Marquis of Hertford, G.C.B., deceased.

The Russian Minister of Marine has issued an order of the day, censuring severely the dockyard authorities at Cronstadt for the defects which have been reported to him by Admiral Kopitoff, Commander of the Pacific Fleet, as existing on board the new corvette Skobeleff, which arrived at Vladivostock a short time ago. Among the principal defects enumerated, we find that the spread of canvas of the vessel proved to be 7,892 square feet less than the design, the port-holes leaked, the round-houses were badly constructed and always clogging, the boats were heavy and leaked, and the yards were so weak that they were continually being sprung or carried away, even during light breezes.

Com. Burges Watson, who lately returned from the Australian station, where he had command of the Miranda, is likely to shortly have command of one of the boys' training ships.

THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the Glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d, tins, 1s 1½d, labelled "JAMES EPPS and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, M.D., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

GENERAL GORDON'S INSTRUCTIONS.

Important documents with regard to the Soudan have been presented to Parliament. The earliest of these is dated Jan. 9, 1884, being instructions from Sir Evelyn Wood to Baker Pasha stating that the Khedive had determined to abandon the Soudan provinces, and has appointed Nubar Pasha his Prime Minister, by whose directions these instructions are written. His former instructions to open the Suakim-Berber route by force are cancelled, but he is allowed, if necessary, to use force to extricate the garrisons of Sinkat and Tokar, provided his force is sufficient. The instructions state that the enforced submission of the men holding these places would be very painful to the Khedive, but even such a sacrifice would be better than that Baker Pasha and his troops should attempt a task beyond their power.

"I understand that her Majesty's Government have come to the irrevocable decision not to incur the very onerous duty of securing to the peoples of the Soudan a just future government. That, as a consequence, her Majesty's Government have determined to restore to these peoples their independence, and will no longer suffer the Egyptian Government to interfere with their affairs.

"2. For this purpose, her Majesty's Government have decided to send me to the Soudan, to arrange for the evacuation of these countries and the safe removal of the Egyptian employés and troops.

"3. Keeping paragraph No. 1 in view—viz., that the evacuation of the Soudan is irrevocably decided on, it will depend on circumstances in what way this is to be accomplished.

"My idea is that the restoration of the country should be made to the different petty Sultans who existed at the time of Mehemet Ali's conquest, and whose families still exist; that the Mahdi should be left altogether out of the calculation as regards the handing over the country; and that it should be optional with the Sultans to accept his supremacy or not. As these Sultans would probably not be likely to gain by accepting the Mahdi as their sovereign, it is probable that they will hold to their independent positions. Thus we should have two factors to deal with,—namely, the petty Sultans asserting their several independence, and the Mahdi's party aiming at supremacy over them. To hand, therefore, over to the Mahdi the arsenals, &c., would, I consider, be a mistake. They should be handed over to the Sultans of the States in which they are placed.

"The most difficult question is how and to whom to hand over the arsenals of Khartoum, Dongola, and Kassala, which towns have, so to say, no old-standing families, Khartoum and Kassala having sprung up since Mehemet Ali's conquest. Probably it would be advisable to postpone any decision as to these towns till such time as the inhabitants have made known their opinion.

"4. I have in Paragraph 3 proposed the transfer of the lands to the local Sultans, and stated my opinion that these will not accept the supremacy of the Mahdi. If this is agreed to, and my supposition correct as to their action, there can be but little doubt that as far as he is able the Mahdi will endeavour to assert his rule over them, and will be opposed to any evacuation of the Government employés and troops. My opinion of the Mahdi's forces is, that the bulk of those who were with him at Obeid will refuse to cross the Nile, and that those who do so will not exceed 3,000 or 4,000 men, and also that these will be composed principally of black troops who have deserted, and who, if offered fair terms, would come over to the Government side. In such a case—viz., 'Sultans accepting transfer of territory and refusing the supremacy of the Mahdi, and Mahdi's black troops coming over to the Government,' resulting weakness of the Mahdi, what should be done should the Mahdi's adherents attack the evacuating columns? It cannot be supposed that these are to offer no resistance, and if in resisting they should obtain a success, it would be but reasonable to allow them to follow up the Mahdi to such a position as would insure their future safe march. This is one of those difficult questions which our Government can hardly be expected to answer, but which may arise, and to which I would call attention. Paragraph 1 fixes irrevocably the decision of the Government, viz., to evacuate the territory, and of course, as far as possible, involves the avoidance of any fighting. I can, therefore, only say that having in view Paragraph 1, and seeing the difficulty of asking her Majesty's Government to give a decision or direction as to what should be done in certain cases, that I will carry out the evacuation as far as possible according to their wish to the best of my ability, and with avoidance, as far as possible, of all fighting. I would, however hope that her Majesty's Government will give me their support and consideration, should I be unable to fulfil all their expectations.

"5. Though it is out of my province to give any opinion as to the action of her Majesty's Government in leaving the Soudan, still, I must say, it would be an iniquity to reconquer these peoples, and then hand them back to the Egyptians without guarantee of future good government. It is evident that this we cannot secure them without an inordinate expenditure of men and money. The Soudan is a useless possession, ever was so, and ever will be so. Larger than Germany, France, and Spain together, and mostly barren, it cannot be governed except by a dictator who may be good or bad. If bad, he will cause constant revolts. No one who has ever lived in the Soudan can escape the reflection, 'What a useless possession is this land!' Few men, also, can stand its fearful monotony and deadly climate.

"6. Said Pasha, the Viceroy before Ismael, went up to the Soudan with Count F. de Lesseps. He was so discouraged and horrified at the misery of the people that at Berber, Count de Lesseps saw him throw his guns into the river, declaring that he would be no party to such oppression. It was only after the urgent solicitations of European consuls and others that he reconsidered his decision. Therefore I think her Majesty's Government are fully justified in recommending the evacuation, inasmuch as the sacrifices necessary towards securing a good government would be far too onerous to admit of such an attempt being made. Indeed, one may say it is impracticable at any cost. Her Majesty's Government will now leave them as God has placed them; they are not forced to fight among themselves, and they will no longer be oppressed by men coming from lands so remote as Circassia, Kurdistan, and Anatolia.

"7. I have requested Lieut.-Col. Stewart to write his views independent of mine on this subject. I append them to this report.

(Signed) C. G. Gordon, Major-General.

"Steamship Tanjore, at Sea, Jan. 22, 1884."

Colonel Stewart, in the memorandum of observations enclosed, cordially agreed with the above, but suggested that, as far as possible, all munitions of war be destroyed on evacuation. He quite agrees with General Gordon that the Soudan is an expensive and useless possession. He adds :—

"No one who has visited it can escape the reflection, 'What a useless possession is this land, and what a huge encumbrance on Egypt!' Handing back the territories to the families of the dispossessed Sultans is an act of justice both towards them and their people. The latter, at any rate, will no longer be at the mercy of foreign mercenaries, and if they are tyrannised over, it will be more or less their own fault. Handing back the districts to the old reigning families is also a politic act, as raising up a rival power to that of the Mahdi. As it is impossible for her Majesty's Government to foresee all the eventualities that may arise during the evacuation, it seems to me as the most judicious course to rely on Gen. Gordon and his knowledge of the country. I, of course, understand that Gen. Gordon is going to the Soudan with full powers to make all arrangements as to its evacuation, and that he is in no way to be interfered with by the Cairo Ministers. Also that any suggestions or remarks that the Cairo Government would wish to make are to be made directly to him and her Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary, and that no intrigues are to be permitted against his authority. Any other course would, I am persuaded, make his mission a failure."

REINFORCEMENTS FOR EGYPT.

"The Admiralty have engaged the following ships to convey stores from Woolwich for the Soudan expedition :—The Justitia, 1,000 tons; the Dunluce, 1,200 tons; the Myrtle Branch, 1,800 tons; and the Loch Ard, 1,400 tons. All four are fast steamers and of commodious build, being required especially for bulky cargos. The Justitia has already arrived at the Royal Arsenal, and is alongside the T Pier loading with ordnance stores, conspicuous amongst which are the first portions of a heavy siege train. The guns and carriages requisite to form a light as well as a heavy siege train are all ready for embarkation, and the carriages are fitted with elevated trunnions on top-carriages for over-bank fire. All the guns will be breechloaders, except the howitzers, which will be of the two kinds most approved, the 8-in. and 6½-in. The first shipload will start about Tuesday next, and its destination, as at present ordered, is Alexandria. An order for clothing is in hand at the Pimlico factory, and will be completed by Monday, on which day the Loch Ard will arrive at Woolwich to take the bales on board, together with shot and shell, and a battery of Artillery. This ship is ordered to proceed direct to Suakim. On Monday, also, the Dunluce will be at the Royal Arsenal, and be loaded with a freight chiefly consisting of preserved meats and other provisions. She will sail for Alexandria, and there receive further orders. The remainder of the stores ordered for the expedition will be taken in the Myrtle Branch, and is also consigned to Alexandria. Wheels of a broad pattern are being taken on board the Justitia, for use with the transport vehicles of the expedition. Carriages provided with such wheels were found to travel over the sands much more easily than those of the ordinary description in the last campaign, and all the waggons now to be sent will be furnished in the same way. The whole of the small-arm ammunition ordered has been sent from the Royal Arsenal to Liverpool and shipped for Egypt. It is expected that when these stores reach Alexandria, they will be sent on to Admiral Hewett at Suakim. The Army Medical Department is preparing a field hospital to supplement the provision to be made by the medical officers in Egypt, and a "bearer" company is to be organised, probably in charge of Surg.-Major Evatts, who is at present surgeon at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich. He has been directed to prepare for embarkation at one hour's notice, and a similar order has been sent to Surg.-Major Godwin, of the Royal Arsenal Medical Establishment, at Woolwich Arsenal."

The arrangements for the despatch of the expeditionary force to Suakim have been so rapidly carried out, that it is now believed that Gen. Graham's force will reach Trinkitat on Tuesday, Feb. 19. A party of marines and Blue-jackets, with howitzers and Nordenfelt guns, will be sent on in advance of the main force, to take possession of the landing-place which Baker Pasha selected for the disembarkation of his ill-fated army. No delay is expected to arise in disembarking the troops, and by Feb. 20 an attempt will probably be made to cross the lagoon to the fortified position which Gen. Baker raised for his first night's bivouac. This is at a point commanding the Sinkat and Tokar roads, about three miles from the coast, and only 11 miles intervene between this and Tokar. The distance could be easily covered in four hours; and as a field telegraph company will be attached to the force, the earliest information of the result of Gen. Graham's operations will be sent by it to the coast, and thence brought by the Ranger to Suakim, whence it will be transmitted to England by the newly-laid cable. As Trinkitat is only a few hours' steaming from Suakim, the result of the operations should be known in this country on Thursday next.

It is not contemplated by the Government to send any more troops to Egypt, as the force already on its way, coupled with that which is at the command of Gen. Stephenson and Rear-Admiral Sir W. Hewett, will, it is thought, be sufficient. Should, however, there arise a necessity for more men, 600 Marines could be obtained in a very short time from the Channel Squadron, which, under the command of Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, has been ordered to Palermo. Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, commanding the Mediterranean Squadron, was directed on Wednesday to at once send to Suakim all the Marine officers left behind in the first instance at Suakim, and they are already on their way. The following officers of the Marines may, therefore, be said to be at Suakim :—Major Colwell, R.M.L.I., and Lieuts. Aston, R.M.A., and Kysh, R.M.L.I., of the Alexandra; Capts. Woods, R.M.L.I., stationed at Malta; Wheeler, R.M.A., of the Inflexible; Craigie, R.M.L.I., of the Invincible; Schomberg, R.M.L.I., and Lieut. Brittain, R.M.A., of the Monarch; Capt. Tucker, R.M.A.; Lieuts. Prendergast, R.M.L.I., and Rodgers, R.M.L.I., of the Superb; and Capt. A. Allen, R.M.A., and Lieut. White, R.M.L.I., of the Temeraire. This gives a total of one major, three captains, and four lieutenants of the Royal Marine Light Infantry, and three captains and two lieutenants of the Royal Marine Artillery, or four subalterns short of the number required for the five companies sent to Suakim from the Mediterranean. Besides these officers, the Adjutant-General at the Horse Guards has selected a large number of others from regiments in England, two going from the Guards.

The arrangements for the embarkation at Suez of the troops from Cairo are as follows :—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Bokhara will at Suez embark a battalion numbering over 700 men, the regiment forming this to be named by Gen. Stephenson. She will, on arrival at Suakim, await further orders. The same company's steamer Thibet will at Suez embark a second battalion, and will also proceed to Suakim. The Osiris and Neæra will convey the 19th Hussars and artillery. H.M.'s troopship Orontes, which left Suez four days ago for Suakim, will probably also be able to embark the third battalion of infantry this day, and to proceed forthwith. H.M.'s troopship Jumna, with a battalion, is now in the Red Sea on her way from India, and will await at Suakim the other ships; but the steamship Poonah, with 515 marines from Chatham, Portsmouth, and Plymouth, cannot arrive in Egypt before the 19th inst. The marines at Suakim, intended to augment Gen. Graham's command, will be conveyed to Trinkitat in the chartered steamer Rinaldo.

The Admiralty have chartered four vessels to take out stores for the troops at Suakim, and these will be brought up to Chatham to be examined prior to loading. The cargo will mainly consist of biscuits, flour, rice, sugar, tea, oatmeal, salt pork and beef, preserved potatoes, and a large consignment of tinned and preserved meat and soups. One of the ships is to leave to-day or Sunday morning direct for Suakim, the other three following to Alexandria, there to await further orders. A quantity of stores has already been sent from Malta sufficient to sustain 60,000 men for a short period.

H.M.S. Temeraire left Malta on Thursday for Alexandria, having on board Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Squadron. H.M.S. Monarch, which conveyed to Suakim a large number of Marines from the Mediterranean Squadron and ammunition from Malta, left Port Said on Thursday for Alexandria, where she will remain for further orders. H.M.S. Myrmidon is making satisfactory progress, and the dockyard officials are sanguine of being able to dispatch her from Sheerness to the Red Sea by Sunday. It is reported that the Comus, which arrived at Sheerness on Thursday from the Pacific, will shortly be dispatched to the Red Sea. The D Baty. 1st Brig. Royal Artillery, at Chatham, has been placed upon a full war footing. It is one of the first batteries on the roster for foreign service, and in the event of artillery reinforcements being sent to Egypt it will go out. The battery has just been supplied with 16-pounder field-guns, in place of the 9-pounders. Lieut. W. A. Scott, of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders, will act as aide-de-camp to Major-Gen. Sir G. Graham, appointed to the command of the expeditionary force to relieve Tokar. The vacancies on Gen. Stephenson's Staff at Cairo, created by the transference of Cols. Clery and Ardagh to Suakim, will be temporarily filled by the commanding officers of the regiments now stationed at Cairo. Lieut. P. S. Merling, of the 3rd Batn. King's Royal Rifle Corps, who has been appointed to the mounted infantry in Egypt, will proceed to Suakim; while Major C. Barrow, of the Scottish Rifles, Capt. Fenwick, of the Dorsetshire Regt., and Lieut. Rhodes, of the 1st Dragoons, will remain at Cairo. The half-battalion of the Royal West Kent Regt., now at Cyprus, has been held in readiness to proceed to Alexandria to rejoin head-quarters, should their services be required. Applications are daily received at the Horse Guards from large numbers of officers desiring to take part in the expedition, the offers of service being greatly in excess of requirements.

The following officers of the Chatham garrison have volunteered for special service with the Army in Egypt :—Lieut.-Col. D. R. Cameron, C.M.G.; Lieut. E. H. S. Calder, Lieut. T. F. Chamberlain, and Lieut. Mackenzie, R.A.; Capt. W. W. B. Whiteford, Lieut. H. E. Tyler, Lieut. H. J. W. Brownrigg, Lieut. W. S. Vidal, Lieut. E. W. Walbon, Lieut. W. J. D. Dundee, Lieut. A. W. Roper, Lieut. C. N. Beevor, Lieut. L. Jones, Lieut. J. E. O. Hamilton, and Lieut. G. M. Heath, R.E.; Capt. N. F. A. Maunsell, 1st Batn. Royal Warwickshire Regt.; Lieut. S. Harrison and Lieut. Bray, 2nd Batn. Berkshire Regt.; and Surg. W. W. Pope, A.M.D.

It would be difficult to over-estimate the amount of public interest which has marked the publication of the Queen's new book since it was first announced. If we are informed rightly, the circulation has already reached 10,000, and new editions are urgently called for. There can be little difficulty in accounting for this, when it is remembered that on no other occasion has a Queen of England so completely shared her confidence with her subjects. We may also venture to conceive what a grateful though mournful task it must have been to her Majesty, now that her bitter sorrow has been somewhat alleviated by lapse of time, to recall to recollection the scenes of her early life, and the memories of many gifted men who shared in them, but have since passed away. Faithful to the mountaineers of Scotland, her Majesty dedicates her book to her "Loyal Highlanders," and more especially to the memory of her devoted personal attendant and faithful friend, Mr. John Brown. This sturdy Highlander and faithful attendant fills a most important place in her Journal, and at his death is eulogised in the following impressive words:—"His loss to me, ill and helpless as I was at the time from an accident, is irreparable, for he deservedly possessed my entire confidence, and to say that he is daily, nay, hourly, missed by me, whose life-long gratitude he won by his constant care, attention, and devotion, is but a feeble expression of the truth. A truer, nobler, trustier heart, more loyal and more loving, never beat within human breast." These Royal volumes are full of descriptions of Highland scenery, Highland character, and Highland customs. All political matters have been most carefully eschewed, so that her Majesty might not be debarred from the full enjoyment of her Highland home, and the many recollections attached to it. We learn from her Majesty, in the preface to "Our Life in the Highlands," that the publication of that book was based upon a suggestion of Sir Arthur Helps. At first her Majesty felt reluctant to publish what was merely a brief record of excursions near home, and also, she did not like the idea of publishing anything written by herself. However, owing to the persuasion of her "literary adviser," she finally consented, and in doing so conferred upon her subjects a boon of lasting value. These pages abound with interesting although homely scenes connected with her Highland home and her Highland retainers. We may quote one sketch of homely life in the Highlands which will serve to show how her Majesty and her children were wont to pass their lives in Scotland. Let the reader turn to the passages in the book which appear under the heading of the "Widow Grant, 1869," and read the record of her Majesty's visit to an old woman of 89, who lay upon her death-bed:—

"On Aug. 26, I again saw her, and gave her a shawl and a pair of socks, and found the poor old soul in bed looking very weak and very ill, but bowing her head and thanking me in her usual way. I took her hand and held it. On the 27th she died. On the 28th, I stopped at the cottage, and went in, with Louise and Leopold. We found all so clean and tidy, but all so silent. Mrs. Gordon, her daughter, was there, having arrived just in time to spend the last evening and night with her; and then she lifted the sheet, and there the poor old woman, whom we had known and seen from the first here these twenty-one years, lay on a bier in her shroud, but with her usual cap on, peaceful and little altered, her dark skin taking away from the usual terrible pallor of death. She had on the socks I gave her the day before yesterday."

Visits similar, more or less, to those were of constant occurrence, but the world heard or knew little of them, while the Queen of England was constantly engaged in alleviating the sorrows of others. This unpretending work abounds in homely sketches, such as that quoted above. A perusal of them, coupled with by-words, oftentimes so expressive of true feeling, plainly mark the entire absence of any desire on her Majesty's part to assume the rôle of author and enter the list of combatants. Several of the entries referring to matters of moment in the Queen's book are recorded in the journal with severe simplicity on October 3, 1870. It tells of the "eventful day," that on which the Princess became engaged to the Marquis of Lorne. The event took place during a walk from the Glassalt Shiel to the Dhu Loch. The Queen's account is this:—"Louise, who returned some time after we did, told me that Lorne had spoken of his devotion to her, and proposed to her, and that she had accepted him, knowing I would approve. Though I was not unprepared for such a result, I felt painfully the thought of losing her. But I naturally gave my consent, and could only pray that she might be happy." Then we read the entry of how the Queen paid a visit in September, 1872, to the Duke of Sutherland, made remarkable by the fact that no British Sovereign has ever been so far north. Then came a visit to the late Duke of Roxburghe at Floors Castle, in the autumn of 1867. The same unobtrusive, gentle manner, in which many joyful experiences are described, accompanies the journalist in her visits to the houses of death and mourning. We can easily conceive what a powerful restraint she must have put upon her womanly feelings during a visit to Blair, in the autumn of 1863, when the Duke of Athol lay dying under an incurable disease. The Queen writes:—

"Oh, it was so dreadfully sad! To think of the contrast to the time two years ago, when my darling was so well and I so happy with him, and just beginning to recover from my great sorrow for dearest mamma's death—looking forward to many more such delightful expeditions; and the poor Duke then so full of health and strength. . . . . . Oh, how little we know what is before us! How uncertain is life! I felt very sad, but was so much occupied with the poor Duke, for whom I truly grieve, that I did not feel the trial of returning to Blair in such terribly altered circumstances as I should otherwise have done."

"At 20 minutes to 10 we went into the little dining-room, which had been cleared, and where all the servants were assembled. . . . . . We made 19 altogether. Five animated reels were danced, in which all but myself joined. After the first reel, whisky toddy was brought round for every one, and Brown begged I would drink to the 'fire kindling.' Then Grant made a little speech, with an allusion to the wild place we were in, and concluding in a wish 'that our Royal Mistress, our good Queen, should live long.' This was followed by cheers given out by Ross in regular Highland style, and all drank my health. The merry, pretty little ball ended at a quarter past 11. The men, however, went on singing in the steward's room for some time, and all were very happy."

Then follows these sad reflections:—

"Sad thoughts filled my heart both before dinner and when I was alone and retired to rest. I thought of the happy past, and my darling husband, whom I fancied I must see, and who always wished to build here, in this favourite wild spot, quite in amidst the hills. At Altnaginthasach I could not have lived again, now, alone. It is far better to have built a totally new house; but then the sad thought struck me that it was the first widow's house, not built by him, or hallowed by his memory. But I am sure his blessing does rest on it, and those who live in it."

It is easy to account for the great interest with which these books are received, when we mark the manner in which her Majesty expresses her ideas and reflections, whether, it may be, in the strongholds of the Lochiel, or in the humblest cot on the mountain-side. The Queen makes her presence a joyful event. Probably no journal hss ever been kept so completely devoid of any selfish considerations. Her womanly disposition stands out prominently wherever she may be present, and wherever she may go she meets with blessings. Can it be wondered, then, that the mountaineers of "Bonnie Scotland" set full price on the graceful act her Majesty performed when dedicating her book to them?

Sell's Dictionary.—This remarkable work has increased its dimensions considerably, thereby affording to the purchaser or subscriber a vast quantity of useful matter. In fact, it is a book that every merchant or member of a profession should be intimately acquainted with. The Newspaper Libel Act, a provision of great importance, is carefully prepared. In every respect it is a work of practical utility.

THE HIGHLAND BONNET.

SIR,—The defenders of the plumed Highland bonnet understate their case, and under-estimate its antiquity. It is certain that it was worn by the Highland troops in the great sortie from Gibraltar on Nov. 27, 1781, and as the blockade had then lasted for considerably more than two years, it is safe to conclude that it must have been worn at least as early as 1779. But both a higher antiquity, and a more distinctly national character, may be claimed for it. If any one will consult Sir Sibbald Scott's beautifully illustrated work on "The British Army," he will find, at page 160, Vol. I., a portrait of a gentleman of the Royal Archer Guard of Scotland, said to be a Lord Elcho, and dated circa 1713, in which it is impossible not to recognise the origin and prototype of the plumed bonnet. The head-dress is a full and rather high cap, something of the Lowland type, and on the border on the left is a badge, strikingly similar to that worn by some of our kilted regiments, bearing the St. Andrew's Cross, surmounted by the crown, and supporting a plume of three heavy, drooping, ostrich feathers. When it is remembered that the first regular Highland regiments were raised shortly after the suppression of the rebellion of 1745, it seems a natural conclusion that, to provide for them a head-dress which should be both national and historical, the authorities of the day adopted a modification of the cap worn by the Royal Body Guard of Scotland.—I am, &c.,

GEORGE G. WALKER,
Colonel, 3rd Batn., Royal Scots Fusiliers.

SIR,—Allow me to demolish Mr. Clifford Walton, who writes to the Standard under date Feb. 11. He prefaces his remarks as follows:—"In all discussions, historical accuracy is most desirable." Quite so, Mr. Clifford Walton. He proceeds to say it is immaterial what Prince Charlie wore at Palace entertainments at Holyrood. This is a remarkable statement, but not worth remark, save that Charlie would have been "accurate" in what he wore. He then says that "the philibeg, also, was a good, useful article of plain leather." I am not aware of ever having seen or heard of a "philibeg" made of leather. What can the learned gentleman mean? The sporran-pouch or "spleuchan" is and was made of leather! Is that what he alludes to? Of what value is his "accuracy," when we read such remarks? We live in queer days, when we are told this is "accuracy."—I am, &c.,

ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL.

The Army.

3RD DRAGOON GUARDS. The serjeants gave a ball in Hulme Town Hall on Monday. Dancing began at 9.15 p.m., and was continued until 3.45 a.m. The regt. is under orders to move from Manchester to Aldershot.

4TH DRAGOON GUARDS. The regt. is about to be moved from Brighton to the North of England.

10TH HUSSARS. When the mail left India, Lieut.-Col. Combe, of the Adjt.-Gen.'s Department, had been moved from Simla to Calcutta to take charge of the current duties of the Adjt.-Gen.'s and Qrmr.-Gen.'s Department during the absence of the Commander-in-Chief and Staff at Bangalore. The head-quarters and service troops are to be landed in Egypt, on their way from India.

15TH HUSSARS. The regt. is under orders of readiness to leave Aldershot for Brighton.

18TH HUSSARS. The non-commissioned officers of this regiment assembled on Friday, the 1st inst., for the purpose of presenting Capt. and Rdgmr. Hodgins, on his leaving the regiment for duty at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, with a beautiful timepiece, as a mark of their respect. Capt. Hodgins was appointed to the regiment April 22, 1871, since which time he has been unremitting in his labours to make the riding of the 18th Hussars of the highest character, in which he has been successful, and has on more than one occasion been complimented by General Officers at their inspections of the regiment since his appointment as ridingmaster. Capt. Hodgins on leaving the regiment is regretted by all ranks.

19TH HUSSARS. The regiment is ordered to proceed from Cairo with the force detailed for the relief of Tokar.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The artillery command at Kirkee has been conferred on Col. T. N. Holberton, whose five years' tenure of office as Assist. Adjt.-Gen. of Artillery has terminated. Lieut.-Col. G. W. Borradaile, C.B., who is at present second-in-command of the artillery at Umballa, will succeed Col. Holberton on the General Staff.

Lient.-Cols. Hume and Richardson, R.A., Majors Browell and Auchinleck, R.A., Capt. Brock, 17th Regt., Majors Ducat, 28th Regt., and Gaulter, 37th Regt., have been selected by Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, commanding the Southern Military District, to form a permanent Board of Examiners.

The death is announced, at the age of 55, of Lieut.-Gen. N. O. S. Turner, C.B. He was gazetted in the Royal Artillery in May, 1847, receiving his lieutenant's commission in June, 1848. Receiving his captaincy in Nov. 1854, he served with that rank in the Crimean campaign, from March to Sept. 1855. He saw also much active service during the Indian Mutiny campaign, being three times mentioned in despatches, and receiving the brevet of lieut.-col. (April, 1859), the medal and clasp, C.B. He became col. in April, 1867, and major-gen. in May, 1880, and from March, 1877, till March, 1882, was inspector of the Auxiliary Artillery in the Southern District, reaching the rank of lieut.-gen. in 1883.

6TH ROYAL WARWICKSHIRE REGIMENT. The draft of the 1st Batn., which is under orders to proceed to India to join the 2nd Batn., will consist of Capt. Longbourne and Lieut. Smythe, one colour-serjeant, two serjeants, two corporals, and 160 privates. The draft will embark about the end of this month.

15TH EAST YORKSHIRE REGIMENT. Capt. Roupell, 2nd Batn., will succeed Capt. Benson, 17th Lancers, as Brigade-Major at Poona, on the departure of that officer to take up his new appointment of Garrison Instructor at Lucknow. The appointment of Capt. Roupell to the Brigade majority at Poona will bring up the number of officers of the regiment serving on the Staff to five, which is a very much larger number than that supplied by any other regiment in the Presidency. The 4th only supplies two, the 20th none, the 61st none, the 29th none, the 94th none, the 65th one, the 87th one, the Rifle Brigade two. From this it will be seen that the 15th holds five out of the 11 Staff appointments held by officers of British infantry regiments in the Presidency, or very nearly half, and out of these, four are at Poona and one in Bombay.

21ST ROYAL SCOTS FUSILIERS. Sheldrake's Aldershot Military Gazette has the following:—"The following appeared in the London Gazette of the 1st inst:—'Royal Scots Fusiliers: Serjt.-Major John Clisham, from the School of Gymnastics, to be Qrmr., vice R. Browne, posted to the 3rd Battalion.' We are sure that the appointment of this well-known and popular warrant officer will be hailed with satisfaction by every one of his many military and civil friends. Mr. Clisham has 21 years and 5 months' service, and formerly belonged and served with the 27th (Inniskilling) Foot in India, and during the whole of that time, with the exception of the first three months, has been a non-commissioned and latterly a warrant officer. He joined the Gymnastic Staff 14 years ago, and on the retirement of Serjt.-Major Tarbotton, although the junior first-class instructor on the staff, was selected on the recommendation of Gen. Hammersley and Col. Gildea for the important office of Serjt.-Major, which position he has held for the past seven years. He was a principal assistant of Col. G. F. Gildea, A.D.C., when Inspector of Gymnasia, in organising the first Grand Army Athletic Meeting, and is well known as clerk of the course to numbers of battalions whose annual sports he has officiated at with the greatest urbanity and courtesy. With Col. Gildea, Mr. Clisham acted in the getting up and arrangement of the assaults-at-arms given at the Royal Albert Hall, in aid of the Zulu Relief Fund, when the profits handed over to the promoters were no less a sum than £790. Since that time he has been invariably on duty on similar occasions in London, Aldershot, and elsewhere. In 1881, Col. Cleather, the present Inspector of Gymnasia, offered a very valuable silver cup for competition for the best 'all round man' on the Gymnastic Staff, and this was secured by Serjt.-Major Clisham. With Lieut.-Col. Walker, R.A., he was one of the promoters of the Church of England Soldiers' Institute, and worked most earnestly in this way to benefit the service. He may also be said to be one of the founders of the fine building, the result of the exertions of a few generous-hearted men with the welfare of the soldier at heart, which was opened in Victoria Road last autumn for the use of the military. Mr. Clisham, by his hearty unpretending manner, geniality, and constant presence, has no doubt considerably contributed to the success which has hitherto attended the Institute. Col. Walker, we venture to think, will lose an able worker and coadjutor when Mr. Clisham's regiment, the Royal Scots Fusiliers, leaves Aldershot. Mr. Clisham held the office of sidesman at the Iron Church, and was known there as a constant attendant. He is also a member of the Aldershot Camp Lodge of Freemasons, of which he is at present the secretary; he holds the medal for long service and good conduct. We have no doubt that his promotion will be a source of genuine pleasure to those of his old regiment and the Gymnastic Staff who know him. Serjt.-Major Noakes, late 16th Lancers, from Canterbury, is Mr. Clisham's successor at the Aldershot Gymnasium."

27th Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. Capt. Knapp Barrow, C.M.G., late of the regiment, has been selected for the Secretaryship of the Gold Coast Colony. Capt. Barrow has seen much active service on the West Coast of Africa, and formerly served in the Gold Coast Artillery.

28th Gloucester Regiment. The command of the Regimental District is vacant by the death of Col. C. A. S. Dickins, lately commanding the regiment, which occurred at Bonehill House, Tamworth, on the 11th inst., at the age of 51 years. Col. Dickins served in the Crimean and Indian Mutiny campaigns. He joined the Army Dec. 13, 1850; became lieut., May 20, 1853; capt., June 17, 1853; major, Dec. 7, 1870; brevet lieut.-col., Feb. 28, 1871; obtained command of the regt., Sept. 22, 1875; became col., Oct. 1877; and retired upon half-pay, Sept. 22, 1880.

ROYAL MARINES.

The following officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Royal Marines have embarked in the ss. Poonah (which sailed from Plymouth on Sunday, the 10th inst.), for service in the Mediterranean:—Capts. Montgomery, Bridge, Robbins, and Gordon, R.M.L.I.; and Connolly, R.M.A. Lieuts. Roche, Horniblow, Darling, Money, Stamper, Holman, Townsend, and David, R.M.L.I.; Eastman and Campbell, R.M.A.

Col. Tuson, C.B., R.M.A., who has been appointed to command the Royal Marines at Suakim, and Capt. Morgan, R.M.L.I., Staff officer, and Capt. Poë, R.M.L.I., adjt., proceeded overland, viâ Brindisi, to Suakim on Wednesday last.

Lieut. Daniell, Chatham Division, R.M.L.I., has been ordered to be detached from head-quarters to depôt, Deal.

60th King's Royal Rifle Corps. The 3rd Batn. is included in the force detailed to proceed from Cairo for the relief of Tokar.

65th York and Lancaster Regiment. The regiment has been placed under orders of readiness to leave Aden for service in Egypt at Suakim.

90th Cameronians (Scottish Rifles). The residents of Cawnpore were treated to a most entertaining programme by the amateurs on Jan. 12, under the patronage of Col. Rogers, V.C., and the officers. The only drawback was an insufficiency in the accommodation. Some excellent instrumental music was provided, under the direction of Mr. Fitzgerald, bandmaster, and the choruses and dances, laughable personations and sketches, were supplied under the management and conductorship of Mr. Townley, schoolmaster.

The Auxiliary Forces.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

A deputation, consisting of representatives of Volunteer surgeons, the medical profession, teachers in the London medical schools, members of the various ambulance aid associations throughout the country, and others interested in ambulance work, waited on the Marquis of Hartington at the War Office, on Wednesday, for the purpose of presenting a memorial on the further development of ambulance work in connectionwith the Volunteer Force. Sir T. Lawrence, M.P., introduced the deputation. The Marquis of Hartington was accompanied by Major-Gen. Elkington, Dr. Crawford, and Lord Morley. Sir Trevor Lawrence briefly introduced the deputation, and said it was desired to have for the Volunteer Force a Medical force very much of the same nature as the Army Service. Surg.-Gen. Hunter said the Medical and Transport Corps which it was hoped his lordship would call into existence, would be of great service in the case of a foreign war. It was also hoped that the munitions for drill would be supplied. Lord Hartington asked for a little fuller explanation of what the organisation wanted, and Surg.-Gen. Hunter replied that there was no desire to interfere with the present Army Medical Department, but it was hoped that the new service would be en rapport with it. In answer to further questions from the noble Marquis and the officers and gentlemen with him, it was stated that although it was intended in the initiative to form the "bearers" from amongst medical students, yet it was proposed to call in extraneous aid from those who had qualified. Lord Hartington thanked the deputation for the information they had given him, and said their scheme seemed to have in it a very great possibility of advantage to the country and the Volunteer Force, but there was a great deal yet to be thought out. Although he thought there would probably be great advantage from the elaboration of the scheme, he would not like to commit himself at present without further confidential communication. It would give him very much satisfaction if the details could be satisfactorily worked out, and in that case the deputation might rely on the assistance of the War Department.

22nd Middlesex (Central London Rangers). The prizes were distributed on Saturday evening at Gray's Inn Hall by Mrs. Howard Vincent, who was accompanied by Mr. Howard Vincent, formerly commandant of the corps. Lieut.-Col. Alt stated that the corps participated in the general progress of the Volunteer force, and like it also had improved in its discipline. In the last year the highest strength ever reached had been attained, also the highest number of efficients and highest per-centage of efficients; and for comparison, the colonel mentioned that while in 1877 the regiment returned 528 efficients, or 88 per cent. of the enrolled strength, and earned £885 of capitation grant, in the last year they had 803 efficients, or 98·38 per cent. of the enrolled, and the capitation grant amounted to £1,368.

Army & Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1884.

THE reply given by Lord Morley to Lord Galloway's motion in the House of Lords on Monday must be considered eminently unsatisfactory. The only thing, indeed, which can be said in favour of his lordship's explanation is that it bore throughout the impress of truth, no desire being manifested on the part of the War Office to gloss over the matter, or in any way to excuse Lord Wolseley for an act of great indiscretion—for such we must consider it—into which he was led by a too earnest desire to uphold the principles which he has for years steadfastly advocated. It is, of course, greatly to be regretted that the Adjutant-General should have placed himself in such an awkward dilemma. Lord Wolseley is a soldier of undoubted ability, who has risen by his own exertions to high rank and position in the Army and the State. He has been honoured and rewarded for the valuable services he has performed. It is, to say the least of it, disappointing to find that he should have been content to jeopardise his professional reputation —as he certainly has done—in trying to bolster up a system which is an evident failure. It is at all times an ungenerous act to trample on a fallen adversary. Let us hope that he will learn a lesson, and, profiting by experience, strive in future to identify himself with the true interests of the Army, of which he is a bright ornament, and the character of which he should uphold in a legitimate way,—not by claptrap appeals to the mob to support changes introduced for political purposes, but by addressing only the educated and thoughtful classes, who know what an army should be, and what our military position is. It cannot be a consoling reflection to the British taxpayer to feel that he is paying £16,000,000 a year for the maintenance of an army, which is so lamentably inefficient that all manner of subterfuges are resorted to in order to hide its imperfections. It is indeed unfortunate that the Adjutant-General, after volunteering a plausible statement in support of the policy of those at the helm, is obliged to admit through his Parliamentary superior that his statement was entirely erroneous. Lord Wolseley must feel keenly the position in which he has placed himself, for the effect of this last unpleasant episode will be to cause all his public utterances in future, on any question on which he ought to speak with authority, to be regarded with doubt and uncertainty. The speech to the Artists was viewed at the time as a desperate bid for the confidence of the public. The collapse of the short-service "fad" has been so plainly admitted of late by some of its earliest and most ardent admirers, that Lord Wolseley felt it incumbent on him to say something. Even had his figures and data been trustworthy, they would not have disposed of the arguments of those who are agitating for the establishment of a genuine Military System. The whole tone of the speech was so impolitic, and it displayed such an amount of personal feeling, that those who took the trouble to read between the lines were not slow in discovering the causes of his irritation. As a Government, in what it feels may be the last hours of its existence, clutches at any straw in order to save itself from its impending fate, so, we suppose, must it be with those who are vested with the administration of armies. The "reformers" are on their last legs; they have tried every device in order to secure the success of their schemes, but each has taken them farther and farther from the goal to which they have aspired. The Adjutant-General, relying upon his popularity and the strength of his position, came forward on what promises to be to him a memorable date—January 26—and played the last card. But the cruel fate which has attended the party of demolition all through attends them still. Lord Wolseley played a bold game, but it did not succeed. He was just a little too, what the schoolboy would call, "cocksure." Figures are nasty things to deal with at times, and as Lord Wolseley has shown more than once, he is not an adept in the art of utilising them. He therefore has suffered the mortification of finding himself exposed in every independent journal throughout the kingdom. It remains to be seen what course his lordship will now adopt. His experience of the last fortnight must convince him, if anything will, that he is not destined to shine as an orator. Then let him set aside oratory, and devote himself to more congenial work, in which he can employ his time to much greater advantage than by disseminating throughout the length and breadth of her Majesty's dominions views with regard to the state of our defences which he of all men ought to know would be ridiculous, were they not actually damaging to the interests of the Empire. We have no desire to be unduly hard on Lord Wolseley. He is, as we say, a man who deserves well of his country. But the fact of his having earned the gratitude of his fellow-countrymen by his services in the field, ought to make him jealous of the reputation and character of the Army which has elevated him to his present proud position. Let him set to work to repair the injury that has been done, and he will not look in vain for willing hands to help him in the task. So long as we have an Adjutant-General at the Horse Guards following the course which Lord Wolseley is following to-day, and expressing on every occasion the views at variance to those held by the Service at large, to hope for a properly organised and efficient Army is to hope for the impossible. If the recent rebuff he has received only induces his lordship to change his tactics, it will not have been suffered in vain, and we doubt not but that he will live to look back upon January 26, 1884, as marking an epoch in a most useful life.

We published last week, under the initials "F. S. D.," a temperate and concise statement of the grievances of the Pay Department, and the reasons why they are so severely felt. These grievances are admitted, by all who have studied the question, to be real, and to stand in urgent need of redress. We are, therefore, the more sorry to inform all those who already belong to that Department, or who may be thinking of entering it, that so far as we can learn, the War Office have no present intention of remedying any of them, but mean to rely entirely on a reduction in the qualifying service from ten to seven years as a sufficient inducement to candidates to enter its ranks. In other words, young officers are to be bribed by the offer of having their pay raised at one bound from 6s. 6d. to 15s. a day to undertake duties of the nature of which they will in most cases be ignorant, and which it is to be feared they will subsequently find themselves unable satisfactorily to discharge. The dearth of candidates for the Department has apparently forced the Secretary of State for War to reconsider the conditions of entry, and it is much to be regretted that the opportunity should not have been seized to remedy some at least of the grounds which those who already belong to it have for complaint. As it is, we much fear that this last specimen of War-Office tinkering will hardly work more satisfactorily than its predecessors.

The Military authorities of Aldershot have communicated officially with the civil authorities concerning the unsanitary condition of certain portions of the town, to which may be attributed the recent increase of various diseases among the soldiery, especially in the Permanent Barracks close to the town. The sanitary officer, Deputy-Surgeon-General Thompson, reports that since the suspension of the restrictions imposed by the Contagious Diseases Acts in May last, the influx of vagrant prostitutes has immensely increased, bringing in their train infection, disease, and dirt, and many other unsanitary influences, thus, no doubt, affecting the health of the troops in the vicinity. The admissions to the military hospitals had increased 50 per cent., while the admissions to the Lock Hospital were nil; the fact is, that women will not now go to this institution until their cases are hopeless. The number of prostitutes had increased 20 per cent., while youthful depravity was most deplorable. Such is the shocking state of affairs disclosed at Aldershot, and the local board of health have decided to memorialise the Government on the subject.

We believe it is the intention of the authorities to proceed shortly with the reconstruction of Aldershot Camp more rapidly than has hitherto been the case. It is hoped that the whole of the wooden huts will be replaced by brick buildings within the present decade. This reconstruction has been going on so slowly during the past two years, that the buildings erected during this period in the North Camp are insufficient for the housing of one weak infantry battalion. There is barely accommodation in these new huts for the detachment of Foot Guards now quartered there, while going through a course of musketry. When the whole of the reconstruction has been completed in accordance with the present plans, there will then be ample accommodation for the whole of the troops of all arms composing the 1st Army Corps.

At the examination of officers for promotion, held at the commencement of last month, we believe that the number of Captains who presented themselves was larger than at any previous examination. And we gather that not only has the number of failures increased but that there has been a great increase in the proportion of failures. We hear that in several cases the senior Captains of regiments have been up and failed, and, moreover, that there will be some cases of "provisional" Majors having their promotions cancelled. Thus regimental promotion becomes more and more a lottery every year. Senior Captains are superseded, Majors have their majorities cancelled, and promotion goes only to the man who "knows his book."

We hear that the opinion of medical experts on the modified valise equipment proposed by the Aldershot Equipment Committee is far from favourable. Its principle is said to be unsound, and it is no improvement on the present regulation valise,—a pretty result, indeed, after years of trials, experiments, and reports! Since Dr. Oliver's magazine accoutrements were reported on unfavourably by the Committee of 1880, after a few brief trials, carried out in a perfunctory manner, no advance seems to have been made in this business, and no equipment has yet been brought forward equal in any respect to the Doctor's invention. In this equipment, at least the point of carriage is the strongest part of the body; all the articles carried are located as near its centre of gravity as it is possible to place them, and the front of the chest is free from all constriction of cross straps. It systematises a means by which the carriage of the kit can be dispensed with in peace and war, and a large amount of ammunition, rations, intrenching tools, or blanket, &c., substituted for articles not actually needed for the special service on which the soldier may be engaged. In war, in fact, it enables each soldier to be his own "magazine," self-supporting and independent of his base of supply; and during peace it renders him capable of performing all his various duties with ease, and freedom from all useless weights and bodily encumbrances. It is not yet too late to give this equipment a fair trial at Aldershot. The belief is universal thoughout the service that, for certain reasons, it did not get a fair trial there in 1879-80. We may point out that we take up and have always taken up this matter on public grounds, and on public grounds only.

It may not be generally known that any officer recommended for the appointment of Aide-de-Camp, who has not passed the final examination at the Staff College, must have passed the examination for promotion to Captain, and after July 1 of this year, will be required to exhibit proficeincy both in speaking and writing French.

We understand the highest authorities of the Royal Artillery at the Horse Guards have definitely refused to take action on the question of breaking-up the Artillery into different regiments, or in any way dealing with its defective organisation. It may, therefore, be expected that each year will witness this branch of the Scientific Corps materially reduced, from the inability to obtain recruits, but no doubt which will be officially termed "an improved organisation."

We notice there are to be in future five courses of musketry instruction at Hythe each year, beginning on March 1, April 22, June 13, August 18, and October 9, instead of four, as hitherto.

Last week during some experiments with projectiles at the proof butts, Woolwich Arsenal, Lieutenant Darley, Royal Artillery, was severely wounded by the explosion of a carcase shell. This shell was filled with a slow-burning composition, calculated to make a dense smoke, but not intended to burst, and the explosion was, therefore, accidental and unaccountable. This is not, however, the first time such an accident has occurred. In the year 1853, when the late General Sir James Simpson, K.C.B., who commanded the district, was witnessing some experiments in the Fire Barn, on Southsea Common, at his inspection of the Royal Marine Artillery, a similar accident took place. The General and Staff, the Commandant of Marines, and a dozen other officers were standing in a ring round a smoke-ball, at which knelt the master-gunner and a bombardier in the act of lighting the fuze, when, instead of burning slowly, it suddenly burst, the pieces of shell fortunately not spreading laterally, but flying upwards, clearing the heads of the surrounding group, and falling a long distance outside the enclosure on to the Common. The two non-commissioned officers were, however, so severely wounded that one of them died on the following day. As it appears that such accidents may at any time occur again, the composition of these carcases cannot be too carefully looked to.

The command of the 28th Regimental District, Bristol is vacant, by the death of Colonel C. A. S. Dickens.

We are told by Lord Morley that the statistical information which Lord Wolseley imagined he was giving, when he made his last unfortunate speech, will be found in the next Annual Report of the Inspector-General of Recruiting. Should the forthcoming report bear much resemblance in style to that of last year, it will afford more amusement than information. Perhaps it will tell us that when the Adjutant-General of the Army fondly supposed he was reading from a document which, as he ought to have known, has not yet been compiled, his mistake was "abnormal."

Major T. S. Gildea, 72nd Highlanders, Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General for Musketry at Gibraltar, will succeed Major F. Salmond in that appointment at Edinburgh.

We hear that some little time ago, the Office of Works was highly scandalised by the discovery that certain gentlemen of its staff had been accepting douceurs from contractors. Enquiries were set on foot, which resulted in one contractor offering to return to the Government a very large sum of money, improperly received, and about a dozen of the gentlemen under Mr. Shaw Lefevre being implicated in the transactions, received their passports. No doubt enquiries instituted in other departments, especially under a Liberal régime, would lead to strange disclosures.

It appears from the Army Annual Return for 1882 that the numbers wanted to complete the Establishment of the Militia on January 1, 1883, were 23,638, a greater deficiency than has existed since 1876, when the deficiency was 27,968. The enrolled strength in January, 1883, seems to have dropped to 104,431, from which a large deduction must be made for men absent without leave, sick, &c.

The French papers in general take a very fair view of English policy in Egypt, and naturally express the greatest admiration at the heroic conduct of Tewfik Pasha and his unfortunate garrison. They also speak with respect of the intrepidity of Chinese Gordon, and have followed his adventurous journey with considerable interest. One French journal which we have just received mentions the arrival in Paris of the officers recently ordered to Egypt, and among them figures the name of "Sir Bull." Why not John?

We see that the trials made at the Isle of Aix with two vessels belonging to what the French call the "Auxiliary Fleet" have been highly satisfactory. The steamers in question are the Château Margaux and the Château Yquem, which, belonging to a Bordeaux navigation company, are not badly named. These vessels, which will be turned into cruisers should necessity require it, were tried—or rather the Château Margaux was tried—on the 7th inst., in the presence of a committee appointed by the Maritime Prefect. The speed required by the authorities was $13\frac{1}{2}$ knots, and the speed realised was over 14 knots. The machinery, we are told, came from the famous Creuzot Works.

Achilles, Capt. Buller, C.B., arrived at Cagliari from Gibraltar on Feb. 11.

Albacore, Lieut. and Com. Palmer K. Smythies, was commissioned on February 14, at Devonport, for service in the Mediterranean.

Alexandra, Capt. Rawson, C.B., flagship of Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay, was at Malta up to Feb. 4, with the Temeraire, Inflexible, Superb, Iris, Hecla, Falcon, Condor, Cockatrice, Helicon, and Woodlark. The Hecla has since left for Port Said with 300 marines on board for Suakim.

Amethyst, Capt. Brent, senior officer on the South-east Coast of America, would leave Monte Video on Feb. 15 for Falkland Island, returning at the end of March.

Audacious, Capt. Tracey, flagship of Vice-Admiral G. O. Willes, was at Hong Kong up to Jan. 8. The Sapphire was at Nagasaki on Jan. 2, and remains; the Kestrel was at Tientsin on Dec. 5, and remains during the winter; the Cockchafer was at Chefoo on Dec. 27, and remains; the Albatross was at Hankow on Dec. 31, and remains; the Espoir was at Chinkiang on Dec. 27, and will be relieved at Chinkiang by the Curaçoa, and will then be stationed at one of the Treaty ports; the Curaçoa was at Shanghai on Dec. 31, and will be relieved at Shanghai by the Champion, and will then proceed to Chinkiang; the Champion left Hong Kong on Dec. 29 for Shanghai, and will be stationed there; the Midge left Hong Kong on Jan. 4 for Amoy, Tamsui, and Ningpo; the Foxhound was at Foo Chow on Dec. 16, and remains; the Cleopatra was at Amoy on Jan. 3, and remains; the Esk was at Swatow on Jan. 6, and remains; the Swift was at Hong Kong on Jan. 8, and remains; the Linnet was at Hong Kong on Jan. 8, and remains; the Fly was at Canton on Jan. 7, and remains; the Daring was at Hong Kong on Jan. 8, and will be stationed between Pakhoi and Hoi How; the Zephyr left Hong Kong on Dec. 27 for Singapore, calling at Pakhoi and Hoi How; the Vigilant was at Hong Kong on Jan. 8, and remains; the Pegasus was at Penang on Jan. 4; the Merlin was at Singapore on Dec. 18, and would proceed to Hong Kong early in January; the Flying Fish was at Hong Kong on Jan. 8 refitting; the Magpie left Singapore on Dec. 13 to commence surveying near Penang. The Audacious was reported to be at Hong Kong on Feb. 9.

Comus, Capt. East, left Devonport for Sheerness on Feb. 12, to pay off, and arrived there on Thursday morning. She was inspected on Friday morning by Vice-Admiral Rice, who pronounced himself thoroughly pleased with the clean and orderly condition of the ship, and also upon the efficiency of the officers and crew. She was placed in the steam basin at Sheerness Dockyard on Friday afternoon, where she is to be dismantled and paid out of commission. The Comus has been a very comfortable ship, and the health of the crew has been unusually good. She was commissioned at Sheerness on October 23, 1879.

Express, Lieut. and Com. Vesey Knox, was commissioned at Devonport on February 14, for the Mediterranean.

Flirt, Com. Hammick, arrived at Plymouth on Feb. 10, from the West Coast of Africa, her timbers being defective, and will pay off.

Helicon, Lieut.-Com. Winsloe, was to leave Malta for Brindisi on Feb. 12, to convey Staff officers of military expedition to Suakim.

Myrmidon, Com. Carpenter, was taken out of dock at Sheerness on Feb. 11. Has since been in collision with the Dockyard tug Locust, but has been repaired. She is expected to leave Sheerness on Sunday for the Red Sea, having gone through her steam trials on Friday.

Northampton, Capt. Digby, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir John Commerell, V.C., was at Barbadoes on Jan. 29, cruising with Squadron in the West Indies; she will leave the West Indies about March 10 for Bermuda, visiting certain ports on the passage. The Canada will part company about March 4 next, and proceed to the Barbadoes Division as senior officer, where she will remain till the middle of May; she will then proceed to Bermuda and Halifax, being relieved by the Garnet. The Garnet was at Barbadoes; she will remain on the Jamaica Division after the Commander-in-Chief leaves for Bermuda, until the beginning of May, when she relieves the Canada as senior officer on the Barbadoes Division. The Dido was at Barbadoes; after the Commander-in-Chief leaves Trinidad, about Feb. 18, the Dido will remain on the Barbadoes Division as senior officer; after being relieved by the Canada, she will proceed to Bermuda to refit. The Griffon was at Barbadoes; she will return to the Barbadoes Division after the Commander-in-Chief leaves West Indies for Bermuda. The Flamingo was at Barbadoes. The Fantôme, after her West Indian cruise with the flag, will proceed to Bermuda to refit for the Newfoundland Fisheries. The Mallard was at Jamaica on Jan. 25, as senior officer on the coast of Haiti, and will proceed to Bermuda about March 10 to refit for the Newfoundland Fisheries. The Foam was at Jamaica on Jan. 25, for general service on division. Letters from the Commodore at Port Royal, dated Jan. 25, report that the Mallard was at Port Royal awaiting orders, and that the Foam proceeded on Jan. 20 to Port-au-Prince, to resume duties as senior Naval officer in Haitian waters, and would return to Port Royal about Feb. 5.

Orontes, Capt. Andoe, left Port Said for Suakim on Feb. 12.

Stork, Lieut. and Com. Blennerhasset, was at Simon's Bay on Jan. 23, and would remain for the present.

NAVAL PRIZE-MONEY.

Notice is given by the Department of the Accountant-General of the Navy and Comptroller of Navy Pay, that preparations are being made for the intended distribution of the slave-dhow Muchiro, slave-dhow, name unknown, one slave, slave-dhow Mabruki, slave-dhow, name unknown, slave-dhow Mandumbwa and five slaves, a vessel and 13 slaves, slave-dhow Futch-el-Kheir, native vessel Jow-hari and one slave, slave-dhow Mambokongo, slave-dhow Tangulia, slave-dhow, name unknown, and the Boro Kupata, captured on August 3, 6, and 21, September 15, 18, and 30, October 2, 8, 23, 24, and 30, November 21 and 23, 1882, respectively, by her Majesty's ship London. Due notice will be given of the date proposed for the commencement of distribution; and, at the same time, the amount of an individual's share in the respective classes will be announced.

John Prendergast, captain of the foretop, James Keeling, second captain of the quarterdeck, and Peter Jones, gunner's mate, of the Comus, have been awarded the medal for long service and good conduct.

Com. Arthur Barrow, now borne in the Excellent for special duties, has been selected for appointment to the Temeraire, on that ship recommissioning at Malta in March next. Com. Barrow is one of the juniors on the list, his seniority being June 29, 1883.

Rear-Admiral Sir A. H. Hoskins, K.C.B., Superintendent of Naval Reserves, left Spring Gardens on the 6th inst., on a tour of inspection, and visited the Penelope, Lord Warden, and Repulse.

Rowland's Macassar Oil is universally in high repute for its unprecedented success during the last eighty years, in promoting the growth, restoring, improving, and beautifying the human hair. It may now also be had in a golden colour, and is especially suited for fair-haired children. Ask anywhere for Rowland's Macassar Oil, and avoid spurious imitations. Sizes, 3s 6d, 7s, 10s 6d, and 21s; sent by post for 3d above these prices, to A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20 Hatton Garden, London.

RUSSIAN PREPARATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

The recent journey of the Russian Minister of Marine to Sebastopol, in order to be present at the ceremony of laying down the keel for a new ironclad of the type of the Inflexible, marks the beginning of a new era in the fleet of the Black Sea. Since the retirement of the Grand Duke Constantine and the Popoff party from the control of the Russian Navy, the new Grand Admiral, Prince Alexis, and the new Minister of Marine, Admiral Shestiakoff, have had their hands full with the reform and increase of the maritime means of defence in the Baltic. After the satisfactory completion of this task, the reorganisation of the Black Sea fleet could be taken in hand, the last Russo-Turkish war having shown that, as in the Russian Army, corruption and irregularities were the order of the day in the Navy. Admiral Petchuroff was the man who first after that war introduced order and morality into the matter. The Minister of Marine has probably found, on his arrival at Nicolajeff, that all the necessary preparations have been made there for the construction of two powerful ironclads, and he will no doubt pay attention to the advice of Admiral Petchuroff, not to neglect the Nicolajeff shipbuilding yards in favour of those at Sebastopol. The latter place, as has been apparent for some time, is to be restored to its former position as the principal stronghold of Russia in the Black Sea. For two years the construction of barracks for 4,000 sailors has been in progress, and is approaching its completion. The Black Sea Navigation Company, which since 1859 has been receiving subsidies to the amount of nearly two and a half million roubles, has been called upon to increase its arsenals, and has just received orders for the construction of two ironclads, like those at Nicolajeff. The steel for the first of those vessels arrived lately from Bridnsk (Central Russia), and Admiral Shestiakoff journeyed on purpose to Sebastopol to lay down the keel. Close to the yards of the Company there is the new stone dock, which has been built in place of that destroyed during the Crimean War, at an outlay of 250,000 roubles. It was to have been completed by the end of last year. Russia will then have at Sebastopol two docks suitable for the reception of the largest ironclads, the one of stone mentioned, and an iron floating dock, which had been built expressly for the large popoffkas during 1877 in England. Regular shipyards are also to be built, and the journey of the Minister of Marine was in connection with choosing the sites for them. This undertaking will be carried out with the same degree of activity as has been observable at Sebastopol for the last few years. Five years ago there were at that place still 70 per cent. of ruins, and only 30 per cent. of houses; now, the proportion is the reverse, for fully 70 per cent. of houses have been constructed along broad and well-paved streets. The growth of the city is to be ascribed, on the one hand, to the increase of the garrison and the naval establishments, as well as to the wintering of the war-vessels at Sebastopol, instead of Nicolajeff, but principally to the rapid development of trade in the port, since the completion of the railways connecting it with the interior. The state of matters may be summed briefly thus. In two or three years Russia will possess in Sebastopol an important shipping port and centre of commerce, with a subsidised private shipbuilding yard and an Imperial dockyard, which will be able to turn out the largest ironclads. She will have there by the end of 1885 four more powerful ironclads than are to be found in the Turkish Navy, which, in conjunction with the projected six new gunboats and twelve sea-going torpedo-boats, will be able to bar the entry into the Black Sea to any Turkish Squadron. By the end of the same period, the reorganisation of the Black Sea Fleet will be completed.

THE LATE MR. GUSTAVUS DITTMAN, R.N.

Sir,—I venture to ask you to insert this letter, in order to draw the attention of any officers who may have formerly served in the Rodney or Excellent with the late Mr. Gustavus Dittman to the present deep distress of his widow. She has hitherto managed to gain a bare livelihood by letting lodgings at Southsea, but owing to the bad season of 1883 has been ruined, her goods seized, and herself ejected. The Admiralty rules preclude a pension in her case. Amongst many extraordinary testimonials to Mr. Dittman's merits, I will only give the following:—"I was three years in H.M.S. Rodney with Mr. Dittman. He was the best Naval instructor I ever saw. I have repeatedly heard the late Admiral Hyde Parker express the same opinion."—Francis Scott, Captain, H.M.S. Victory, August 29, 1863. Messrs. Grant, bankers, of Portsmouth, have kindly consented to receive any sums which may be sent to them for the relief of this poor lady.—I am, &c.,

J. B. H.

It is understood that Vice-Admiral Sir William M'Dowell, K.C.B., the new Commander-in-Chief in China, is only to hold that appointment for two years.

We hear that when the Euphrates took the ground near Gibraltar, on the attempted overland route to Malta, the navigating lieutenant was sick, and the ship was being navigated by the junior lieutenant, which, in view of the pending court-martial, does not look promising for that young officer, who has hitherto been most fortunate, having gained his promotion by taking three first-class certificates, besides the Goodenough Medal for 1883.

Her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales have presented their portraits to the officers' messes of the Victoria and the Albert, gunboats, belonging to the Colony of Victoria.

STIMULANTS and insufficient amount of exercise frequently derange the liver. Eno's Fruit Salt is peculiarly adapted for any constitutional weakness of the liver. A world of woes is avoided by those who keep and use Eno's Fruit Salt.—"All our customers for Eno's Fruit Salt would not be without it upon any consideration, they having received so much benefit from it.—Wood Brothers, Chemists, Jersey, 1878." CAUTION.—Legal Rights are protected in every Civilised Country. Examine each bottle, and see the capsule is marked "Eno's Fruit Salt." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. "Nell Gwynne," at the AVENUE THEATRE, is a lively comic opera founded on Moncrieff's once very popular three-act drama of "Rochester," produced in 1818 at the Olympic, under the management of Robert William Elliston, who played the prominent male part. The piece is now recommended by some sprightly acting, pretty scenery, tasteful dresses, and tuneful music. The air of "Only an Orange Girl," a rondo charmingly sung by Miss Florence St. John, is certain to catch the popular ear; and M. Planquette, the composer, has undoubtedly sustained the reputation he won by the melodious "Cloches de Corneville" and the harmonious "Rip van Winkle." Excellent vocal and humorous aid is rendered by the members of the Avenue company, and the efficient orchestra, ably conducted by M. Jacobi, helped to secure a very favourable reception for the novelty, in which Mr. Arthur Roberts, Mr. Lionel Brough, Mr. H. Walsham, and Miss Julia Warwick prominently appear. The "Song of the Clock," by Miss Warwick, is nightly encored, and "Nell Gwynne" seems to be assured of a lengthy career.

At TOOLE'S THEATRE on Thursday night was produced Mr. Bernand's cleverly-written travesty of the Princess's drama of "Claudian," the burlesque bearing the title of "Paw Clawdian," and the deprecation of any offence being pleasantly conveyed in a couplet setting forth,— > Hurt Barrett! Bah! who'd think of such Bah Barretty?"

The dialogue teems with neatly-turned puns and verbal jests, and the programme is full of humorous allusions. Mr. Toole is doomed to go on playing Claudian through several centuries, and that nothing may be left to the imagination, a "whole sentry" is continually passing before the sight of the audience. Miss Marie Linden gives a ludicrous imitation of Miss Eastlake.

On Ash Wednesday, Feb. 27, the 28th annual dinner of that useful institution, the Dramatic and Musical Sick Fund, will take place at Willis's Rooms, under the presidency of Mr. Wilson Barrett. The guests will be afterwards entertained at a smoking concert, at which several popular actors and vocalists will assist.

A grand International Peasant Festival and Musical and Dramatic Fête was given at the ROYAL ALBERT HALL on Thursday and Friday, and will be continued this day (Saturday), in aid of the funds of the West-end Hospital for the Cure of Diseases of the Nervous System. This fashionable festival was under the special patronage of the Princess of Wales.

On Tuesday, Mr. Samuel Brandram, the accomplished elocutionist, commenced his annual series of recitals at WILLIS'S ROOMS. These remarkable recitations, which are given entirely from memory, commenced with Dickens's "Christmas Carol," and will be continued weekly through the present and ensuing month. Several plays of Shakespeare will be, as usual, included in Mr. Brandram's copious repertory.

On Wednesday afternoon, M. Marius appeared at the GAIETY THEATRE as the representative of Ruy Blas in an adaptation of Victor Hugo's play of that name, and gave indications of filling very satisfactorily the position on the stage formerly occupied by Mr. Fechter.

A very large number of the most prominent members of the theatrical profession responded to Miss Mary Anderson's courteous invitation to witness the performance of "Pygmalion and Galatea" and "Comedy and Tragedy," at the LYCEUM, on Tuesday afternoon. A deep regret was expressed that the theatre was not sufficiently large to accommodate all the professional applicants for admission.

It is now decided to call the new building on the north side of Leicester Square the QUEEN'S THEATRE, and this capacious establishment will be opened at Easter, with an elaborate musical and spectacular entertainment.

"Falka" will be performed this evening for the 100th time, at the Comedy Theatre.

On Monday next, Mr. Corney Grain will give a new edition of an old sketch, entitled "Spring's Delights," at Mr. and Mrs. German Reed's entertainment at St. GEORGE'S HALL; and on the same evening a new second part will be produced, entitled "A Double Event," from the joint pen of Arthur Law and Alfred Reed. Music by Corney Grain. "A Moss Rose Rent" will still retain its place in the programme.

The St. James's Gazette says:—"Although the statement made by the Times in its obituary notice of Cetewayo, to the effect that Lord Chelmsford invaded Zululand 'at the head of 13,000 British troops,' is an obvious exaggeration, it may be well to recall the facts of the case. The English General had at his disposal five Line battalions and a battery of artillery. Under his own personal command at Isandula and its vicinity there were two incomplete battalions—incomplete because weakened by detachments; the remainder of his column was composed of colonial volunteers and native levies. It will be remembered that our forces were divided into three columns, separated by intervals so wide as to render mutual assistance impracticable. This arrangement brought about the disaster which ensued, for an extremely mobile army such as the Zulu King possessed was able to throw itself en masse on whichever isolated hostile column it might select for attack. It fell upon the central one under Lord Chelmsford, with the result which we all know. Jomini himself could not have desired a more apt illustration than that afforded by our faulty strategy. For the credit of the British arms, however, let us not magnify the calamity which befell them by representing five weak battalions as a force of 13,000 strong."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The sudden changes, frequent fogs, and pervading dampness sorely impede the vital functions, and conduce to ill-health. The remedy for these disasters lies in some purifying medicine, like these Pills, which is competent to grapple with the mischief at its source, and stamp it out, without fretting the nerves or weakening the system. Holloway's Pills extract from the blood all noxious matters, regulate the action of every disordered organ, stimulate the liver and kidneys, and relax the bowels. In curing chest complaints, these Pills are remarkably effective, especially when aided by friction of the Ointment on its walls. This double treatment will ensure a certain, steady, and beneficent progress, and sound health will soon be re-established.

THE MANOR HOUSE,
LEE, S.E.

viz.: Twelve into Sandhurst, one into the Marine Infantry as Marine Cadet, and two made their marks as Militia officers. In July, 1883, THIRTEEN were successful.

At the Sandhurst Preliminary Examinations, held in 1883, TWENTY-THREE out of TWENTY-FIVE sent up from the Manor House were successful.

The following is a complete biennial list of the Names of Mr. Wolffram's Pupils who passed into Sandhurst, Woolwich, and the Sandhurst Preliminary in the years 1882 and 1883.

OROIDE GOLD JEWELLERY (REGD.)

"Recommends itself not alone to those of limited means, but to the wealthy, who, when frequenting large gatherings, whether at racecourses, theatres, public meetings, or even on that sacred thoroughfare, the king's highway, have known what it is to be robbed of their valuables."

OROIDE GOLD WATCHES,
The "SERVICE" KEYLESS WATCH,
Open face, jewelled in eight holes, Two Guineas, post free.

"The watches of this patent are in no respect different from gold ones. The degree of finish, of course, regulates the price, but the cheapest class is capable of performing with accuracy for from fifteen to twenty-five years. As to strength and solidity, the Oroide cases are undoubtedly superior to those of gold watches. No other form of amalgam can rival Mr. Rowe's in the general essentials of a substitute for gold."

"Thousands of persons who, though not wishing to impose on their friends by a display of what is but a semblance of the real metal, have not been indisposed to find an equally good-looking metal, which, reproduced in a watch, a chain, or article of jewellery, would not be a costly thing to buy, nor a dear thing to lose." A TREATISE on NAVIGATION, for

"The author of this volume, having been engaged for many years in preparing candidates for the different examinations into which navigation enters, has felt the want of a text-book embracing all that the different Examining Boards embody under that head, and has endeavoured, and we think successfully, to supply that want by the present treatise. To the student this work will be found most useful; the chapters are well arranged, the exercises at the end of each chapter are pertinent to the preceding text, and require the student to digest the text in order to answer them satisfactorily."—Nature.

THE PARCELS POST and the DELIVERY of TEA.

THE PARCELS POST and the DISTRIBUTION of TEA to every place where there is a Post-Office in the United Kingdom.

THE PARCELS POST.—TEA of the highest excellence (as supplied to Dukes, Earls, Barons, and the County Families of England), sent free by Parcels Post in quantities of 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb., to any postal address in the United Kingdom, on receipt of a remittance for the price of the Tea and 3d.

THUS 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be sent to any address free, by post, on receipt of 8s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Half-Crown Tea can be sent free of post on receipt of 15s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea can be sent free of post on receipt of 15s 3d.

THE POSTAL LIMIT of 7 lb. will only really cover 6 lb. of Tea, as the weight of paper and twine has to be deducted, so that COOPER COOPER and CO. will send 6 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea free of post for 18s 3d, or 6 lb. of Two-and-Sixpenny Tea free of post for 15s 3d, or 6 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea free of post for 12s 3d.

PACKAGES containing 12 lb., 20 lb., 60 lb., or 100 lb. of TEA will be sent to any railway station in the United Kingdom absolutely free of carriage on receipt of remittance for the value of the Tea.

THE PARCELS POST.—4 lb., 5 lb., or 6 lb. of TEA will be delivered free of charge at your own houses by the postman, for 3d in addition to the cost of the tea.

THUS 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA will be delivered free at your own house for a remittance of 8s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea will be delivered free at your own door for a Post-Office Order for 10s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Two-Shilling Tea will be sent free to your own homes for a cheque for 12s 3d.

THE PARCELS POST.—4 lb., 5 lb., or 6 lb. of THREE-SHILLING TEA despatched to any part of England, Wales, Scotland, or Ireland, by post for 3d in addition to the price of the Tea.

THUS 4 lb. of THREE-SHILLING TEA can be sent to the remotest address on receipt of remittance for 12s 3d. Thus 5 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea will be forwarded to any place where letters are delivered, postage paid, for 15s 3d. Thus 6 lb. of Three-Shilling Tea will be sent to any address in any postal district in these islands for 18s 3d.

TEAS of all descriptions on COOPER COOPER and CO.'S LIST, posted in parcels containing 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb. each by parcels post to any part of England, Wales, Ireland, or Scotland, in exchange for cash (in registered envelope). Post-Office Orders, cheques, postal orders, or stamps for the value of the tea, and 3d extra.

FOR example, a Package containing 4 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be sent to any place in the United Kingdom in exchange for 8s 3d in cash, enclosed in a registered envelope, and addressed to any of COOPER COOPER and CO.'S establishments in London.

OR, a Parcel containing 6 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA can be delivered by parcels post, carriage free, by remitting a Post-Office Order for 12s 3d.

OR, 5 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA will be despatched, free of post, for a postal order for 10s, and three penny postage stamps.

THUS, in the same manner, THREE-SHILLING TEA in parcels to the value of 12s 3d, 15s 3d, and 18s 3d each, containing respectively 4 lb., 5 lb., and 6 lb. of tea, will be sent on receipt of postal orders, cheques, or cash for the several amounts.

CO-OPERATION. — COOPER COOPER and CO. also invite attention to the new System of Co-operation in the purchase of Tea by persons living in the country through the medium of the Parcels Post.

CO-OPERATION.—Thus, as COOPER COOPER and CO. are enabled to send packages containing 6 lb. of any of the Choice TEAS on their List to any place in the United Kingdom for 3d, it follows that if six families in a village are willing to club together, each can have a pound of tea sent for one halfpenny.

CO-OPERATION.—Or, as two parcels containing 6 lb. each can be sent for 6d, six families would be enabled, by joining together in one remittance, to order 2 lb. of TWO-SHILLING TEA each, at a cost of one penny only, in addition to the price of the tea.

CO-OPERATION.—This system will apply to every kind of TEA offered for Sale by COOPER COOPER and CO., and if followed out will practically enable them to place before customers in every county town and village in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, in the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man, in the Hebrides, and the Orkneys, Tea of the same choice kinds as sold in their various Establishments in London, at the same prices, with the addition of the nominal sum of one halfpenny a pound.

THE announcement which has been made this week that the Russians have succeeded in still further pushing their influence in Central Asia, until they have obtained virtual possession of Merv, must have fallen as a heavy blow upon those who have all along been trying to induce us to imagine that there existed no possibility of our ever having to cross swords with a Russian force in Asia. Warnings have been given from time to time of the steady progress which the Muscovite Power has been making; but with the blindness and perversity which invariably characterise British Governments, these warnings have been ignored, until now we are suddenly made aware of the fact that the enemy, if he is not actually at our gates, has got so near as to render his proximity a serious menace. The annexation of Merv—for it is to all intents and purposes an annexation—may be said to remove the last obstacle in the way of Russian domination up to the frontier of Afghanistan. Here in England, we are so engrossed with the consideration of questions of a social and political nature, that we cannot be aroused to a sense of the dangers which this latest diplomatic victory involves. In the House of Commons on Monday, Mr. Onslow asked the First Lord of the Treasury, "Whether her Majesty's Government had received any confirmation of the report of the annexation of Merv and the neighbouring country by the Russian Government; and if so, what steps her Majesty's Government intended to take in consequence?" Mr. Gladstone's reply to this question shows at once how seriously wanting in foresight her Majesty's Government have been. Mr. Gladstone said:—"The only information of which we are in possession with regard to the subject-matter of this question is contained in two telegrams from her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburg. The first is dated February 14, and says:—'Representatives of four tribes of the Merv Turkomans presented themselves on the 1st inst. at Askabad, swore allegiance to the Czar, and invited Russia to govern them.' The next is dated February 15, and says:—'The Emperor has determined to accept the allegiance of the tribes, and will send an officer to administer the government of that country. He will, perhaps, be accompanied by a Turkoman escort.' These telegrams appear to imply the virtually complete submission of the Merv Turkomans to Russia. Should this prove to be the case, and should any diplomatic communications arise out of that fact, Parliament will be duly advised of them at the proper time." Could anything be more unsatisfactory than this explanation? It is tantamount to an admission on the part of her Majesty's Government that they are in complete ignorance as to the movements and policy of the Russians in Central Asia. They have been content to proceed on the lines that "sufficient for the day is the evil thereof," and, meanwhile, the Russians have been quietly pushing on. The Russians, in determining on a policy of aggression in Central Asia, undertook what at first appeared to us an impossible task. Their indomitable perseverance has enabled them to remove one difficulty after another, until they may be said at length to have overcome almost every obstacle which stood in the way of their advance. The success which has attended their enterprise seems to be almost unaccountable. The strides have been made in such rapid succession that we are scarcely able to realise that matters stand as they do. But if the reports telegraphed from St. Petersburg turn out to be well founded, and there is no reason to suppose that they are exaggerated, her Majesty's Government will be called upon to face a most serious and complicated question. Opinions may differ as to the possible successful issue of a Russian attack on our Indian frontier. Some may—in fact do—hold that the Russians will never be rash enough to attempt to cross our frontiers with a view to the conquest of India. But is it to be expected that they will rest satisfied where they are? They have for years been pursuing a settled policy, and assuredly they will not stop short now. In conquering Central Asia, they have had one object in view,—it is scarcely necessary to indicate what that object has been. We give in another column a résume of their recent operations. From this it will be seen how steady and how certain their progress has been. Step by step they have advanced for a period of three hundred years, until now a crowning victory has been secured by the voluntary subjection of the Merv Turkomans. There is no longer time for dilly-dallying. The Russians, as we say, have a settled policy, and have shown that they are determined to pursue that policy, at all sacrifices. We must adopt, then, a settled policy too. It is their desire to wrest from us, if they can, our Indian possessions. On this point there can be no longer room for doubt. But what is our position? We have not only to keep in subjection a native population in India, but we have also to look to that native population to assist in the maintenance of our supremacy. With Merv in the possession of Russia, with the road to Herat virtually in her hands also, and with Persia hanging in the balance, it may well be asked,—How would England stand, should complications arise in Europe to render necessary the despatch of a British army to any part of the Continent? Russia will simply await her opportunity. It remains for British statesmen to say whether that opportunity shall be given. With an Egyptian difficulty to be overcome, and a Central-Asian question to be faced, and faced boldly, it cannot be a consoling reflection for thoughtful men to know that we have no Army; that so strong does party feeling run in matters political, that no soldier can afford to sacrifice his professional reputation in order to represent facts; that the Commander-in-Chief's lips are tied; that the Adjutant-General, our best known—and with the public, most popular—General is vainly endeavouring to disguise the disingenuousness of his political superiors, by making statements which, on examination, no amount of official manœuvring can justify; that the very safety of the nation is being placed in jeopardy, in order to enable politicians to make capital for themselves at the expense of a too confiding electorate. Yet such is the state of affairs, and with this new menace staring us in the face, the difficulties are increased to an alarming extent. How much longer will the British nation continue on its reckless course? The question is one that must suggest itself to all reflective minds.

ONE should never be astonished, but the telegrams from Khartoum which conveyed the proclamation of the irresponsible Governor-General of the Soudan must have "astonied" more than a few. Gordon, the knight-errant of the nineteenth century, has been sent to the Barr-el-Sodani, to get the beleaguered garrisons of Egypt away in safety from the midst of the believers in the divine mission of the Mahdi; but those who sent him could certainly never have intended that a noble reputation should be sacrificed to meet a passing party need,—for that the proclamation issued at Khartoum was framed under the influence (direct or indirect) of the genius of the Prime Minister of England, no one can doubt. That it can do more than ensure a lull in the blast of the Simoom, or a temporary cessation of the East Wind, so trying to many at Westminster, no one who has the slightest acquaintance with the facts of the case will dispute. One great feature of all the debates, articles, and letters on the Soudan, has been the utter and entire ignorance, demonstrated throughout, of the religious questions involved. The Standard, on Tuesday morning, noticed something of what should be the centre of observation at the present. But, briefly, the state of the question is this, and no one who reads the Koran or studies the subsidiary prophecies of the Mahommedan religion can deny it. We have, in the Mahdi, to meet one who claims that he is foretold to rule as spiritual Governor over the whole world. He directly threatens the Khalifate of the Sultan of Turkey, and appeals to the sympathies of the Wahabees and the stricter tribes of Arabia, as also to a very large proportion of the Mahommedans of India. The differences between Sunni and Shiah are strongly marked, and if the Shiah heresy, as represented by the Mahdi, is to triumph, the Turkish Empire will be overturned, and we shall see a wave of Mahommedan fanaticism spreading over the fairest portion of the globe, to which the Arab conquests of the followers of Mahommed was only as a gentle zephyr compared to a typhoon. We cannot here stop to consider the Indian side of the question, accentuated as it is by the acquirement of Merv by the Russians, but confine ourselves to what is called the "Egyptian Soudan." Nearly all the officials in Egypt are Turk or Circassian, and the small residue that are of African, European, or Arab origin are so imbued with Turkish ideas and feelings that they may be practically regarded as being one and the same. Now, to the Shiah feeling, represented by the Mahdi, these Sunnis are perfectly hateful, and the gangs of Toorkis, who form a large proportion of the Soudan garrisons, are also Sunnis, and are hated by the people on account of their inhumanity and barbarism. Gordon, when formerly Governor-General of the Soudan, had to employ these men, but at the same time did his best to destroy their prestige. They are now to be rescued by Gordon. What will they say, and what will every man in the Soudan say? Why, the same that old Abou Saood said, when recalled by Gordon, after being expelled by Baker, and then again kicked out (in irons) from the happy hunting-grounds of the Soudan,—"Alla! Alla! These devils of English come and go, but they all need me; and whilst they are new to the country, or away in fog-shrouded Britain, the Believers may profit; and chains and misfortunes, when temporary, are the lot of the wisest and best, as shown in the life of the Prophet, whom God bless." The garrisons of Gondokoro, Kassala, and of places south of Khartoum had best be sent through the territories of King John to the sea-coast, as we are pledged to extricate them from the positions in which they have been involved by British politics, although, when their composition is considered, it would not, perhaps, be a great loss if they were left to their fate, as they would find perfect safety by joining the Mahdi; whilst if encouraged to hold out, they may, by resistance, so irritate his followers that, when they surrender, they will meet the fate which has befallen the garrison of Sinkat. Gordon, when burning books and kourbashes, suggests a curious historical parallel. Said Pasha, after his brother and his forces had been burnt alive by the Dongalawi, professed himself so impressed by the sufferings of the inhabitants of Khartoum, that he ordered the guns from one of the batteries to be thrown into the Nile. When told that this might be dangerous, he replied, cynically, that the guns were so honeycombed as to be worthless. What man ever left a bloodier record in any country than Said Pasha did in the Soudan? We hope that the burning of worthless paper and a few strips of hippopotamus-hide may not be a prelude to a still more sanguinary and disastrous period. Gordon and Stewart will not personally institute massacres; of that, all who know these gallant officers are well assured; but Gordon has of late years shown a form of religion which has caused some of his warmest admirers to doubt his being the best man for the business now entrusted to him. We have to face a new dispensation, and every advantage, moral or material, achieved by the Prophet aids to ensure his ascendancy. The Mahdi asserts that he is destined to bring the whole known world under his spiritual dominion, either by force or by conviction, and to treat with him, save with sabre and musket, gives him power and prestige equalling that gained by his followers in the battle-field. The fall of Sinkat and Tokha, following on the rout of Baker's police, and the annihilation of Hicks's army, has given to the Mahdi and Osman Digna a power and influence never yet equalled since the days of the first Kaliph and Khaled the Sword of God. Islamism once swamped civilisation, and has only with difficulty been kept within bounds; but we are now threatened by a far more dangerous flood, as the Moslems of the "geographical" Soudan can easily supply the Mahdi with upwards of three millions of hardy and fanatical warriors, who all hope to die in the certain belief of attaining everlasting bliss. Unless we kill or capture the Mahdi, not England only, but all civilised Europe, will find their strength taxed to the utmost, and then perhaps unavailing, to stem the devastating torrent.

Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewett, V.C., is in chief military command at Suakim at this moment, and has expressed his intention of landing and taking command of the place, should the rebels attack. General Graham has been sent to take command of the troops which were to have formed the relief expedition for Tokar. At the War Office and Horse Guards the question was seriously and gravely asked whether Sir William Hewett would interfere with General Graham, or not?—whether, in fact, Sir William Hewett would take upon himself to direct the movements of the combined Naval and Military relief column, as it was to have been made up of seamen, marines, and soldiers. Surely this shows the great want that exists of co-operation and organisation between the Admiralty and the Horse Guards? Such a question should, in reality, be impossible; and the fact that it has been mooted clearly proves the chaotic state of our military organisation. Such a question would never dare be asked by an official of the German War Office, General Staff, or Admiralty, for every officer's duty is too clearly defined and too well understood in Germany, to allow of any doubt arising as to what "he will do," under this or that circumstance. All preparations for the advance have now been suspended, Tokar having surrendered.

Vice-Admiral the Hon. Henry Carr Glyn (of whose services a notice will be found elsewhere) was an officer whose personal qualities had secured for him a very large circle of friends in the Navy and in the outer world. The news of his death, in the prime of life and in the fulness of his strength, this week, caused a widespread feeling of regret and pained surprise, especially among those who enjoyed the advantage of his friendship, which was generous and sincere, but not indiscriminately given. His quick perception and strong feeling, combined with a sensitive disposition and a certain irritability which was at times easily provoked, gave people who did not know him well the idea that he was passionate and proud; but, in fact, no "better fellow," in the best meaning of the phrase, could be found, and his kindness was more readily touched than his temper. Admiral Glyn was not by any means unfortunate in his career, but he was not willing to admit that he had no cause for dissatisfaction on some account, and above all in the imperfect recognition of the performance of his duties in his very anxious charge of the Serapis when the Prince of Wales went to India in 1875, and returned in her to England in 1876. He began his active service brilliantly, having been sent up, with Prince Leiningen, &c., with a detachment to the Danube at the time of the siege of Silistria, in 1854, and he was one of the four officers who received the "Gold Medal" from the Sultan for his services during the war with Russia, but he was "out" of some of the operations which brought so many honours to his comrades in later years. In his service views, he belonged to the class of officers who desire to keep to the traditions of the Navy and at the same time to adapt it in all respects to the requirements of the century, and not very long ago he wrote a sensible and forcible letter to the Times on the condition and composition of our Naval resources. Without being at all a courtier, Admiral Glyn was a favourite in high places, and none will deplore his loss more deeply and sincerely than the Prince and Princess of Wales, who valued him as a trusty and faithful friend and counsellor.

Unless great caution is exercised in navigating off the Red Sea coast north and south of Suakim, we fear we shall have to record the grounding at least, if not the loss, of more than one of the ships of the present Expedition.

The Government are about to send a Naval officer on a mission to King John, of Abyssinia, to negotiate the restitution to that country of its Red-Sea coast, and the territory taken from it by Baker and Gordon, in consideration of King John marching an army forthwith against the Mahdi, to liberate the beleaguered Egyptian garrisons south of Khartoum. Commander Rolfe, of the Euryalus, has been named as likely to be ordered on this mission, but we think that an officer of greater experience in African politics, manners, customs, and languages should be selected.

Lieutenant Frederick L. Laurence, R.N., at present serving as First Lieutenant of the Malabar, has been selected and appointed to the Flirt, at Devonport, in the same capacity.

The Admiralty have placed at their disposal a Post Captain's Good-service Pension, consequent on the promotion of Captain William Samuel Brown to flag rank, through the death of Vice-Admiral Henry Carr Glyn, C.B., C.S.I. By the vacancy thus created, Rear-Admiral R. V. Hamilton, C.B., becomes a Vice-Admiral, and Captain Richard Wells will be advanced to flag rank when Admiral Rice retires on October 30, as stated in these columns in our issue of January 5 of the current year.

Captain the Hon. Edmund Freemantle, R.N., late senior Naval officer at Gibraltar, returned home with his family in the hired transport Italy, as did also Lord Henry Lennox, M.P., to attend to his duties in the House of Commons.

In a few weeks the Admiralty will have a sufficient number of seamen at their disposal to proceed with the commissioning of ships to relieve those which have completed their term of foreign service, as the paid-off crews of the Temeraire, Carysfort, Helicon, and Woodlark have already arrived home in the hired transport Italy, and the crews of the Cleopatra, Champion, Zephyr, Daring, and Flying Fish, which were on their way home in the Orontes, have been transferred to the Malabar at Port Said, and left for England in that ship on February 11. But, after all, this is only administering the Navy on the hand-to-mouth system.

Vice-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh arrived at Terra Nova, Sardinia, on Tuesday, from Palermo, with the Minotaur, Neptune, and Achilles. The remainder of the Channel Squadron followed on February 20.

The Admiralty have ordered Captain Kennedy, R.N., commanding the Lord Warden, to hold himself in readiness to proceed to Paris, to act in the capacity of a Naval expert at the Conference about to be held there on the Newfoundland Fisheries question. This conference, we are assured, the Army and Navy Gazette has been mainly instrumental in bringing about, in the interest of our Newfoundland colonists.

Vice-Admiral the Lord John Hay shifted his flag on February 18 from the Temeraire to the Invincible, and despatched the former from Alexandria to Port Said, to coal.

Commander Charles S. Donner, borne on the books of the Alexandra, and who has been employed as Chief Transport Officer in Egypt since the late expedition, has proceeded to Suez in connection with his duties; and Lieutenant Walter S. Goodridge, late First Lieutenant of the London, who was on passage home from Zanzibar, has been appointed Transport Officer at Port Said.

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty, in reply to questions put to him in the House of Commons, stated on Tuesday, that the Government of the colony of Victoria had placed their gunboats Victoria and Albert and torpedo boat Childers at the disposal of her Majesty's Government for service in the Red Sea, adding, "Had there been any chance of operations at present against a naval enemy, her Majesty's Government would have accepted an offer made in so cordial and patriotic a spirit. But as the services of the Navy were confined to the defence of the Red Sea ports and aiding in the conveyance of troops, and as for that purpose the vessels under Admiral Sir W. Hewett are already more than adequate, there was no service in which the Victorian vessels could be usefully employed. The Admiralty therefore, with the highest appreciation of the feelings which prompted the offer, feel themselves unable to accept it. The vessels, however, would be directed to communicate with Sir W. Hewett on their way down the Red Sea, in case their interpretation of his requirements should in any way be erroneous." This statement was received with loud cheers. Mr. Campbell-Bannerman also informed the House that, as only 550 Marines would be employed at Suakim, no General officer of Marines would be sent out.

Captain Stewart Polkinghorne, R.M.L.I., rejected as medically unfit for service in Egypt, has been ordered to be surveyed as to his fitness for general service.

The transport Poonah, with the Royal Marines on board, arrived at Malta on Wednesday last. We understand it is the intention of the Admiralty to garrison Suakim for some little time after the present operations in the Soudan are over, with a battalion of Marines, for which purpose Colonel H. B. Tuson, C.B., A.D.C., Royal Marine Artillery, has been appointed Commandant of that place. The telegram from the Standard's special correspondent at Suakim published in that paper on Thursday last, must be most gratifying to the officers and men of the gallant corps. He states,—"The appearance of these soldiers from Cairo, in their stained and disreputably dirty tunics, contrasts most strongly with the turn-out of the Marines, whose smartness, order, and efficiency excite the most favourable comments from all here."

Lieutenant F. H. N. Wilson, R.M.L.I., at present borne on the books of the Lord Warden, at Queensferry, has been reported as missing. It is believed that he has deserted.

There are, and have been for some time, two vacancies on the list of Inspectors-General of Hospitals and Fleets. At the end of this month, Deputy-Inspector-General James N. Dick, now in charge of Malta Hospital, will have completed the necessary period of service for promotion, and will be gazetted to one of the vacancies. Another officer is also qualified, but, for some unaccountable reason, has not yet been promoted.

The Admiralty have placed at their disposal a Greenwich-Hospital Pension for Commanders, of £65 a year, by the death of Retired Commander John Townshend, F.R.G.S. The deceased officer was a Mate in the Revenge at St. Jean d'Acre, 1840.

Major Wells and Lieutenant Fraser, of the Plymouth Division of Royal Marines, have been ordered to join the Depôt at Walmer, in the places of Captain Hamilton, who proceeds on the recruiting service, and Lieutenant Horniblow, who embarked with the late contingent for Egypt.

Captain and Brevet Major Heseltine, R.M.L.I., recently reduced from the Majors' List for having failed to qualify for the rank of Major, when, in reality, he had done so all but in tactics, and having at the late examination attained a standard such as to satisfy the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, has been deemed to have passed for the rank of Major. We conclude that the delay in filling up the vacancies caused by the promotion of Lieutenant-Colonel Hore and retirement of Major Tom from the Majors' List, has been the waiting the promulgation of the result of the last examinations, and that now the promotions will shortly appear, Major Heseltine being restored to his proper place on the Majors' List.

Messrs. Griffin and Co., Portsmouth, will shortly publish an elaborate work in royal quarto on the Nordenfelt machine-guns, described in detail, and compared with other systems; their use for Naval and Military purposes, and methods of working, being illustrated with numerous plates and diagrams.

The following officers have been selected for temporary employment in the Egyptian Army:—Colonel Lloyd, half-pay; Majors Groves, 50th Foot, Grant, 4th Hussars, Inglefield, 109th Foot, and Hare, 101st Foot; Captains Carter, 62nd Foot, Coghlan, 28th Foot, Rutherford, 65th Foot, Molyneux, 22nd Foot, Young, 16th Foot, and Hunter, 4th Foot; Lieutenants Taylor, 28th Foot, Keatinge, 28th Foot, Pirie, 1st Life Guards, Eagar, 23rd Foot, Barttelot, 7th Foot, Bray, 66th Foot, Gregorie, 18th Foot, Coles, 3rd Foot, Wilkinson, 83rd Foot, Ternan, 63rd Foot, Drummond-Wolff, 7th Foot, Surtees, Coldstream Guards, Daubeney, 80th Foot, Massy, 62nd Foot, Barrow, 81st Foot, Wilbraham, 32nd Foot, Macbean, 93rd Highlanders, Capper, 85th Foot, Hickman, 36th Foot, and Lysons, V.C., 90th Foot.

ARTILLERY.—M Baty. 1st Brig., from India to Suakim, arrived Feb. 18; No. 6 Baty. 1st Brig., Scottish Division, as a mountain battery, from Cairo to Suakim, embarked at Suez Feb. 18; No. 1 Baty. 1st Brig., Southern Division, from Malta to Alexandria, embarked Feb. 19.

Infantry.—1st Batn. Royal Highlanders, from Cairo to Suakim, embarked at Suez Feb. 16; 3rd Batn. King's Royal Rifle Corps, from Cairo to Suakim, embarked at Suez Feb. 16; 1st Batn. Gordon Highlanders, from Cairo to Suakim, embarked at Suez Feb. 18; 2nd Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers, from India to Suakim, arrived Feb. 18; 1st Batn. South Staffordshire Regt., from Malta to Alexandria, embarked Feb. 19; 2nd Batn. Essex Regt., from Gibraltar to Malta, embarked about Feb. 21.

Ever since the first definite formation of the Mutual Admiration Society some ten years ago, there has naturally arisen a feeling of universal dissatisfaction throughout the Army at the way in which these fortunate professors, with their ready-packed portmanteaus, are shot off at a moment's notice to reap far higher rewards than those who bore the heat and burden of the day in the Peninsula and at Waterloo. Seldom has there been a more glaring case of favouritism than in the dispatching Sir Redvers Buller with distinct orders that he was to be Second-in-Command of the Tokar Relief Column. Sir Gerald Graham, as a recently-joined Associate of the Society, is, of course, selected in preference to General Earle for command, and General Dormer's services as Chief of the Staff may be considered indispensable for the few troops left in Cairo; but it does seem too hard that General Davis, one of the smartest and ablest officers in the service, who has never had a chance of picking up honours and decorations during a long regimental career, should have been sent to Suakim "in waiting," with the probabilities of a man some six years his junior arriving a few hours before the start of the expedition, to rob him of his first golden opportunity. Such a scandalous system of pushing on friends because they are friends—and this at the expense of the British taxpayer—will naturally, in course of time, produce its own remedy. But meanwhile, the whole body of British officers are protesting vigorously, and that there is reason for their complaints is clearly shown by the steps taken by more than one service champion in Parliament, to obtain for them that justice which those in office evidently desire to withhold.

The reply given by the Under-Secretary for War to the question asked by the Earl of Galloway in the House of Lords on Thursday, about the rumoured discontinuance of the feather bonnet so long worn and so highly prized by Highland regiments, is a fresh example of the futility of the answers which are usually given in Parliament by civilian officials when questioned on military matters. When Lord Morley said that the feather bonnet was an expensive head-dress, he made a very questionable statement, for he evidently overlooked, or was not aware of, its remarkable durability, when carefully made of good materials; but when he said that feather bonnets were never worn on active service, he showed that he was unable to answer the question from his own knowledge, and that he had taken no trouble to make his answer correct from the knowledge of others. Most men of a fair amount of general information have read that feather bonnets were worn by Highland regiments in Egypt under Abercromby, throughout the Peninsular War, at Waterloo, and in many hard-fought actions during the Indian Mutiny. From the experience of late years, we have ceased to expect that those into whose untrained hands the administration of the Army has fallen will show more knowledge of military matters, than soldiers generally have of political intrigues.

We have been asked to make an appeal to the charitable on behalf of an old and most deserving officer, Captain P. Lawless, late 97th Regiment. Captain Lawless, after serving for many years in the ranks, obtained his commission, served with credit to himself, and ultimately obtained his company. Retiring from the service by sale of his commission, he invested his money in shares, which he afterwards had to dispose of at great loss, and after filling for some time a responsible position in connection with the Army and Navy Stores has now been obliged to resign, in consequence of the loss of his sight, which has entirely failed him. He is now penniless, and unable to provide himself with the merest necessaries of life. The meritorious nature of the case is vouched for by Captain T. H. Sangster, late 97th Regiment, Army and Navy Stores, Ranelagh Road, S.W.

The Times says:—"A committee of medical officers has been sitting during the past fortnight to enquire into and report upon the medical objections urged against the modified valise equipment proposed by the Aldershot Valise Equipment Committee. This medical committee has been practically testing the equipment, and further experiments will be carried out this week. It is believed at Aldershot that the Oliver equipment will be again brought forward for trial there."

It has been intimated from the Horse Guards to all military stations that, the quota of officers and non-commissioned officers for service in the Egyptian Army having been completed, no more applications can be entertained.

THE POWER AND POSITION OF RUSSIA IN ASIA.

Colburn's United Service Magazine for August, 1882, contained an article by Colonel E. H. Paske, on "The Rise and Progress of Russia in Asia." In this were traced, in brief outline, the events of Russia's advance through the period of three centuries,—from the time when Cossack chieftains first led their followers across the boundaries of Europe and Asia, and entered the deserts and steppes of Siberian territory, up to the close of the recent campaign against the Tekke Turkoman tribes outside the Khorassan frontiers of Persia. It is designed now to show how late events, culminating with the capture of Geok Tepé, and subsequent explorations in the direction of Merv and of Sarakhs, on to the outposts of Herat, have largely contributed to strengthen the power and position of Russia in Asia, to increase her prestige, and to consolidate her empire in the East. In an able and instructive work, entitled, "The Russians at Merv and Herat," the authority from which many facts have been gleaned, the author, Mr. Charles Marvin, has aptly shown that the periods of Russian progress in Asia may be divided into three epochs,—the Orenburg, Turkestan, and the Transcaspian epochs, corresponding with the regions which formed the stages of successive operations. 1. The Orenburg epoch commenced with the advance of Cossacks of the Don across the Ural Mountains, and the founding of Tobolsk in Siberia in 1587, and continued for more than two centuries, while Russia absorbed the vast regions of Siberia to the limits of the frozen ocean on the north, the shores of the Pacific on the east, and the confines of Turkestan on the south. This epoch finally closed when Russia came in contact with the Khanates of Turkestan in Central Asia. 2. The Turkestan epoch may be said to have opened in the early part of the present century, when Russia commenced aggressive operations, first against Khiva, and then against the Khanates of Khokand and Bokhara, capturing some of their principal towns, absorbing some portions of their territories, securing command of the water-way of the Sir Daria and of the Amu Daria Rivers, and gradually reducing the three Khanates to the condition of vassal states. Mr. Marvin errs, perhaps, in stating that the Turkestan epoch is a period of the past. This epoch will probably be ere long reopened, when Russian schemes are ripe for stirring up strife in Afghan Turkestan, preliminary to wresting that province from Afghanistan, and affecting its annexation to the vassal State of Bokhara. 3. The third, or Trans-Caspian epoch, commenced as recently as 1869, when Russia established a settlement at Krasnovodsk on the eastern shores of the Caspian, followed by the occupation of Chihishliar and Astrabad, and the move on the Attrek and Gurgah routes along the frontiers of Khorassan on the northern slopes of the Kuran Dagh and Kopet Dagh ranges, ending with the capture of Geok Tepé, and the advance of Russian survey parties to Merv, Sarakhs, and the outposts of Herat. The opening of a fourth, or what may be termed the Mongolian epoch of events in the solution of the Eastern Question, appears possibly to be near at hand. In 1859 Russia seized the opportunity when China was preoccupied in a war with the British and French Allies, and continued her encroachments in Eastern Turkestan, and in regions beyond as well as in the district of the Amoor river, concluding, for herself, an advantageous treaty, which gave her a right to the country north of the Amoor and east of the Assari, together with the entire coast of Manchoria down to the frontiers of Corea. So, again, the growing complications between France and China may be the signal for further activity on the part of Russia in the same territories. We may soon hear of efforts to effect another retrocession of Kuldja this time to Russia, of further settlements of Russian colonists on the banks of the Amoor, of renewed activity in Russian ports of the Pacific, and of other measures leading up to a collision between Russia and China. But the present article deals mainly with events of the Transcaspian epoch. Firmly established on the eastern shores of the Caspian, Russia lost no time in making an advance along the Attrek routes north of Khorassan, ostensibly with the object of punishing Tekke Turkoman tribes, whose raids upon Khivan and Persian territory had long made them the terror of their neighbours, but with the ulterior design also of establishing a strategical line in the direction of Merv. Between 1871 and 1879 several expeditions were undertaken by General Lomakine against the Turkomans, and these, though generally successful, were followed by the withdrawal of the Russian troops. The Tekkes, in spite of repeated defeats, looked upon the retirement of the Russian forces as a sign of weakness, and were thus encouraged to resist their attacks. In 1877 Lomakine suffered so severe a defeat at Geok Tepé, that not only were the Russian troops compelled to retire, but the safety of their positions became endangered along the whole line of the Attrek, as far back as the shores of the Caspian; the Turkoman tribes became emboldened, and Russian prestige was seriously weakened. In 1881, however, General Skobeleff retrieved the disaster of his predecessor by effecting the siege and capture of Geok Tepé, and inflicting such serious losses upon the Tekke Turkomans that they were at once brought into subjection, and the campaign virtually closed. After this victory, Skobeleff advanced to Astrabad, and occupied this position without further resistance from the Tekkes. Established at Astrabad, and with the knowledge that their line of communication with the Caspian was now perfectly safe, the Russians lost no time in extending their influence over the neighbouring country. Assuming to have acted from disinterested motives, they claimed the gratitude of the inhabitants of surrounding districts for having put a stop to the depredations of the border tribes. The people of Khorassan, thus freed from the incursions and raids of the Tekkes, welcomed the Russians as their deliverers, and in some localities even entertained the purpose of transferring their allegiance from the Persian Government to that of the Czar. The Turkoman tribes themselves were treated by their conquerors with a clemency hardly to have been expected under the circumstances, and which led to many of them entering the Russian service. Thus the influence of Russia extended among friends and foes throughout the province of Khorassan. Nor were the Russians slow in feeling their way east and south towards Merv and Sarakhs. The completion of the Trans-Caspian railway from Michaeloff on the shores of the Caspian to Kizil Arvat and its extension to Astrabad, led to explorations in the country beyond. Gospodin Lassar, a young railway engineer, was directed to carry out survey operations in the direction of Sarakhs and of Merv, but his mission bore much of a political character. Starting from Astrabad, Lassar proceeded to Sarakhs; then, crossing the Heri road, he entered Afghan territory, and marching through the Burkhat Pass to Kuran and Gharian, pushed on to the outskirts of Herat, though he refrained from entering that city in deference to the wishes of the Afghan Governor. On his return journey, Lassar marched along the western or Persian side of the Hari road, and visited the town of Meshid. But a knowledge of the configuration of the country, and the study of railway levels, were not alone the objects of Lassar's journey. To ascertain the extent and mutual relations of the population, the feeling of the people towards their rulers, the capabilities of the country for furnishing supplies, and the extent of facilities for the passage of troops, were all matters that came within the scope of Lassar's enquiries. A few months after his return to Astrabad, in September, 1882, Lassar started on a survey of the Turkoman region; he visited Merv, passed through Khivan territory, and returned to the Akhal Tekke by a short cut through the desert. About the time of Lassar's return from Sarakhs and Meshid, a secret mission was undertaken by two Russian officers, Lieutenants Alikhanoff and Sokoleff, who, disguising themselves as merchants, joined a caravan, with which they travelled to their destination, Merv. The first of these two officers addressed a series of letters to the Governor of the Transcaspian territory, in which he gave a full account of their journey, describing the nature and capabilities of the country traversed after leaving Astrabad; the attitude and demeanour of the people, with a full description of the fortress of Merv, and graphic details of the reception of the Russian officials by the Merv chiefs. It would appear that, in spite of their disguise, the nationality of the two officers became known in the Bazaars in Merv, and for some time their lives were in danger. They were protected, however, by the chiefs, who behaved well to their guests. While in Merv, the Russian officers effected a secret survey of the fortress, and on the return journey thoroughly explored the oasis. Lassar's explorations, and the discoveries of the Russian officers who conducted the secret mission to Merv, removed all doubt as to the feasibility of further advance in the direction of Merv and of Sarakhs and Herat, and also as to the practicability of the construction of a railway from Astrabad to Sarakhs, and along the valley of the Heri road to Herat. The physical features of the country were found less formidable, and the demeanour of the people less hostile than had been anticipated; indeed, the attitude of the latter was encouraging. Wearied with the oppressions and exactions of their local governor, as also with the depredations committed by the border tribes, and hopeless of redress from the weak, supine Government of Persia, the peaceful inhabitants of several districts of Khorassan already contemplated the transfer of their allegiance to the Russian Government. The Turkomans, appreciating the power of their conquerors, several sections of their tribes speedily entered the Russian service, and it is reported that the Shah of Persia is using his good offices to induce the Turkoman tribes generally to accept a Russian Protectorate.

Thus Russia stands on the threshold of further advances, which will consolidate her power, and render her more than ever dominant in the countries of Central Asia. The oasis of Merv absorbed, Russia will have forged and welded the last link in the vast chain of her communications and strategical positions across the whole continent of Asia, from the shores of the Caspian on the west to the coast of the Pacific on the east. Some portion, at least, of Khorassan will soon be ripe for annexation, railway operations will be extended into the valley of the Heri road, fresh commercial routes will be opened, and traders will pioneer troops up to the walls of Herat. The coronation of the Czar at Moscow, in the spring of last year, was an event that deserves allusion, as influencing the prestige of Russia in Central Asia. It was a sound diplomacy that dictated the summons to the representatives of conquered and dependent

States to attend the ceremonials in the ancient capital of Russia. In obedience to the call, chiefs and notables from the Khanates of Khiva, Khokand, and Bokhara, and from the tents of many a nomad tribe, all hurried through the steppes and deserts, and across the waters of the Caspian to attend the coronation festivities at Moscow. Awe-struck with the wonders of Western civilisation, these strangers from the East viewed with amazement the grandeur of the ancient city, the gathering of princes and their retinues from all the capitals of Europe, the riches and wealth so lavishly displayed, the pomp and splendour of the ceremonials, and last, but not least, they marked well the bearing and discipline of the thousands of picked troops that marched before their Sovereign. On the return of the vassal chiefs to their homes, through the towns and villages of the Khanates, and among the tented dwellings of many a nomad tribe, there resounded tales of the power and might of the great White Czar, the extent of its dominion, the riches and wealth of his country, and the strength and discipline of his Army. Surely the pomp and pageantry of the coronation of Alexander III. of Russia was well-timed, and will influence the future bearing of more than one vassal state. It may not be out of place to offer here a few observations upon the territorial possessions of Russia in Asia, in order to show the real strength of her position, and to demonstrate the facilities she now possesses for aggressive movements and offensive operations beyond her own frontier line across the centre of the vast continent of Asia. In rear of all, in the far north, and backed by the ice-bound shores of a frozen ocean, lie the vast territories of Siberia, stretching 4,000 miles from east to west, from the Ural Mountains to the shores of the Pacific,—2,000 miles from north to south, from the frozen ocean to the Central Asian Khanates, covering an area of nearly six millions of square miles, intersected by three of the largest rivers in the world, the Obi, Yenisei, and the Lena, and a fourth, the Amour, which, after a course of 2,000 miles, empties itself into the Gulf of Tartary. In this vast region, Russia reigns supreme, and can be approached by no foe. It may be at present peopled by exiles and felons,—as were some of our own Colonies,—but it is a country of inexhaustible mineral wealth, rich in natural products, and of great capabilities, and will yet rise and flourish. Turning to the shores of the Black Sea, and starting with the most westerly of her possessions along the centre of the continent of Asia, there comes under notice Russia's Trans-Caucasian territories, the scene of the exploits of the warrior prophet Schamyl. Here, under shelter of the great Caucasian ranges, Russia has subjugated numerous Mahommedan tribes; has built cities, and established colonies of her own people. Here, in the border land between Europe and Asia, she holds a grand strategical position; ports on the coasts of the Black Sea keep open her communications with Europe, the crests and passes of the great Caucasus have been pierced with tunnels and military roads, for the passage of troops from Russia; a continuous line of railway runs from the coast of the Black Sea to the shores of the Caspian; creeping south, and taking up every coign of vantage, Russia holds what was once the Turkish quadrilateral in Asia Minor, —the fortresses of Batoum, Kars, Erzeroum, and Bayazid; still further south has she gone, her troops march along the shores of the Araxes, and her outposts have reached the base of Mount Ararat; Erivan has been wrested from Persia; Armenia, groaning under the terrors and exactions of Turkish misrule, turns in her despair to Russia; and even the lawless tribes of Kurdistan stand ready to enrol themselves under the banners of the Czar. Thus dominant Russia commands all the westerly routes into Persia, as also the lines through Mesopotamia, the Tigris, and the Euphrates Valleys, and unless checked her columns will yet bivouack on the shores of the Mediterranean. An idea of the strength of Russia south of the Caucasus may be gathered from the fact that the muster of her Transcaucasian Army on a peace-footing is 150,000 men, which, on a declaration of war, could be brought up to 300,000. On the waters of the Caspian, where Russia rules the waves, and the Russian Eagle is the only flag that floats from the southern shores of this sea Russia commands the roads to the capital of Persia, a weak State, and almost her vassal; and on the eastern shores of the same sea she has established the several posts that have formed the base of her operations in Transcaspian territory. Russia's naval power in the Caspian is now rapidly growing; a large and increasing fleet has been established for trade in a special industry,—the mineral oils that abound in districts round the Caspian. These oils, while forming a great commercial industry and source of wealth, are of immense importance to the Russian Government, as supplying fuel for Government steamers and for railways on either side of the Caspian. Passing from the eastern shores of the Caspian, along the valleys of the Attrek and Gurgah rivers, and over the crests of the Kuran Dagh and Kopet Dagh ranges of mountains to Astrabad, the line that formed the scene of Russia's recent operations against the Tekke Turcomans. As already shown, Russia's position on this line will lead to, and will facilitate, further advances. Russia's policy in Asia has been regulated by two forced rules, —(1), Always to stir up strifes along her borders, and so have an unsettled frontier as a pretext for further advances to secure a settled frontier; (2), never to retire permanently from a position once occupied. Thus the so-called force of circumstances will compel Russia to absorb the oasis of Merv, to annex the whole of the northern tracts of Khorassan, and to advance to the outskirts of Herat. Already some sections of the Turkoman tribes have enrolled themselves under the banners of the Czar, and Russia has induced the Shah to propose that while the Turkomans shall be ruled by their own elected Khans, the tribes generally, in return for Russian protection, shall take the field in support of the Czar, who will undertake to supply them with arms and ammunition. Thus, Persia is placing in the hands of Russia a weapon soon to be used against her own independence. Passing beyond the oasis of Merv, and across the Oxus or Amu Daria river, there lie the three, formerly great, Khanates of Central Asia, Khiva, Khokand, and Bokhara. These Khanates have been briefly described, and an outline of the history of their relations with Russia traced in the writer's previous article quoted above. Suffice it here to remark that these States have lost all semblance of independence, and Russia's dominant position will facilitate her future operations, both against Afghan Turkestan and in the direction of Eastern Turkestan. Already there are symptoms of Russia finding the Amu Daria an unsettled frontier, and of her attempting to stir up strife beyond. Umbrage is taken at the Afghans having captured Shaghan, their rightful possession, as bringing the Russian and the Afghanistan frontiers in too close proximity at Ferghana, on the Upper Amu Daria. Already the speck that will become the dark cloud has appeared in Afghan Turkestan. Some portion of this territory formerly belonged to Bokhara. Sections of an independent tribe are supposed to have wronged Bokharists. Russia, in chivalrous support of her ally and her vassal, calls for redress, which the Afghan Government cannot or will not give. Here, then, is a pretext which will probably bring Russian troops into Afghan Turkestan at no very distant date, and may lead to the retrocession of some portion of this territory to Bokhara, or in other words, to Russia. From the southern limits of Afghan Turkestan to the borders of Cashmere, the distance is not great, and the mountain passes not very difficult. Further east, beyond the Khanate of Khokand, lie the regions of Eastern Turkestan. Here the legions of Russia have advanced beyond Lake Isserkal to the district of Ili and the important post of Kuldja. They held command of the passes over the Tien Shan ranges, and have secured the passage of the nearest route to Kashghar. The tide of events, however, has led to a temporary check of Russian progress in this direction, indeed to a retrograde movement. China, flushed with her victory over the ruler of Yarkand, and her defeat of the Mahommedan tribes along the southern slope of the Tien Shan ranges, pushed forward for the recovery of the possessions she once held in the Ili district. The Russian authorities at this juncture found it desirable to retire from Kuldja, and to allow its reoccupation by China on payment of a large indemnity. But the retrocession is probably not permanent, and Russia will seek an opportunity to recover possession of Kuldja, and this may soon be found if China should become preoccupied in a war with France. Nor does Russia consider Kashghar as beyond the sphere of her operations, having given protection to Kuli Beg, the dethroned son of the late Yakoob Beg. With questionable taste this fratricide, guilty of the murder of his brother, was among the visitors at the recent coronation of the Czar, and doubtless Kuli Beg will in due time be aided by Russia in efforts to recover Kashghar from China. Lastly, and beyond Eastern Turkestan, Russia holds extensive territory in Mongolia, along the banks of the Amoor river, and along the coasts of Manchoria down to the frontiers of Corea. On the Amoor river, in a fertile country and in a suitable climate, numerous Russian colonies are being established, while naval stations have been formed at Vladivostock and other ports on the shores of the Pacific. Russia's naval power on the Pacific is largely on the increase, and in the event of hostilities with China would enable her to engage the enemy by sea as well as by land, and should there ever be war between Russia and England, Russian cruisers would doubtless approach the shores of our Australian Colonies. China and Great Britain are the two Powers that have rivalry with Russia in Asia. China's policy and the question of her ability to cope with Russia are matters foreign to the present discussion. But, in concluding this article, it may not be out of place to offer a few observations upon the measures that might have been, but were not, adopted in the past, and to point out steps that may be taken in the future by the British Government to check the progress of Russia in Asia, to prevent the absorption of Armenia, and the dismemberment of Persia and Afghanistan. As with individuals, so with nations, the retrospect of neglected opportunities must be more painful than the remembrance of sought-for chances not obtained,—

> As that which might have been, but may not be." *

A great opportunity was lost during the Crimean War, when the British and French Allies failed to support the efforts of the Caucasian tribes to check the advance of Russia. Had the looked-for aid been afforded, the Russians might have been driven back across the Caucasus, and the warrior prophet, Schamyl, who headed the movement among the tribes, have succeeded in his purpose of effecting a union of the tribes of the Black Sea and of the Caspian, and out of them created a nationality which, strong in its mountain fortresses, might long have defied the power of Russia. Again, since the late Russo-Turkish War, the neglect of England's responsibilities in regard to her self-imposed, but practically meaningless, Protectorate over Asia Minor, has been a grave omission that has encouraged the advance of Russia in that country. And, lastly, with reference to the condition of affairs in the latter region, the failure of Great Britain to exert her influence in freeing Armenia from the oppression and misrule of Turkish local governors, is fast forcing the Armenians to place themselves under the protection of Russia. Though the policy of the British Government towards Persia and Afghanistan has, in the main, been just and conciliatory, there have been two prominent instances where avoidable menace and force have engendered hatred, and have spoiled the effects of previous conciliation. Had wiser counsels prevailed, the first Kabul War would never have been undertaken. More patient remonstrance and conciliation might have convinced the Afghans of our desire to maintain the integrity of their country against any encroachments of Russia, and then the Afghans might have been made our friends, instead of enemies. With Persia, also, a needless war was waged in 1856, because that independent power thought fit to try and regain Herat from the Afghans; and here again were created feelings of ill-will and mistrust that have led Persia to seek the friendship and alliance of Russia.
